Report Hits Federal Inaction and Asks Delivery of Evidence Withheld by Trade Board.

CITES LAW TO COMPEL IT

SARGENT WITHOUT REMEDY

Attorney General Informs Senate That He Cannot Proceed and Upholds Trade Body's Stand.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—An investigation of the Aluminum Company of America in which Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, is interested, was recommended in a proposed majority report laid before the Senate Judiciary Committee today by Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, chief examiner of a preliminary inquiry before that committee. Action by the committee was deferred until Thursday.

While this report, which censured severely the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission, was being considered, there was on the way to the Senate a letter from Attorney General Sargent informing that body that he could not give an opinion requested by it in a special resolution as to whether the commission is within its rights in withholding from the Department of Justice certain documents relative to its separate investigation of the Aluminum Company of America.

The Attorney General pointed to a century of precents set by his predecessors in office to sustain his stand, asserting that he was not authorized to give formal opinions at the request of either house of Congress.

Sargent Sees No Remedy at Law.

He gave the Senate, however, what he termed "an informal expression" of his views, in which he referred to the statutes creating the commission as upholding the assertion that "the files and records of the Federal Trade Commission are not public records open to general inspection."

After reviewing the laws governing the commission, Mr. Sargent concluded that its refusal to disclose the evidence "cannot, under existing laws, be remedied in any proceedings brought by the Attorney General."

Senator Walsh's report characterized as "senseless" the Trade Commission's refusal to make public its records in the aluminum case. Then he reviewed the events leading to the present situation.

The first step was on Jan. 6, 1922, when the Senate directed the commission to conduct an investigation of prices of house furnishing goods to ascertain whether there had been "any unfair practices or methods of competition or restraints of trade, combinations or manipulations out of harmony with the law or of public interest."

Out of this came several reports on nine different subjects, with aluminum cooking utensils the only one under consideration by the Judiciary Committee. The commission's report dealt with alleged violation by the Aluminum Company of a decree against it under the Sherman Anti-Trust act in 1912 in the Western District of Pennsylvania.

Says Lawyer Never Examined Files.

A copy of its findings went to the Attorney General on Oct. 17, 1924. On Oct. 20 the commission advised him that to copy the 5,000 pages of evidence would require too much time and money, and invited him to send some one to examine the report.

An assistant to the Attorney General was instructed to perform this duty but, according to Senator Walsh, it was never done, "even to this day," but "some four months later an investigator, who was not a lawyer, under the direction from the Department of Justice, made an examination of the files."

The report states that A. T. Seymour, assistant to the Attorney General, sent to John L. Lott, at Tiffin, Ohio, copies of the volumes of the commission's reports, making arrangements with him to "return" them to the Department. Lott, it was said, turned the matter over to a subordinate named Benham, an old employe. In January, 1925, Attorney General Stone wrote the commission that he had instructed that the investigation be brought "down to date" by the Department of Justice, stating that no interference would be made with any subsequent inquiry by the commission.

Reviews Field Investigation.

The Walsh report then reviewed the activities of Mr. Dunn and Mr. Benham.

"Dunn was neither an attorney, an economist, an accountant nor a stenographer, though commended highly as an investigator by the officials of the department referred to herein other than Attorney General Sargent," says the report, adding that he did not present any letters or documents on file with the Trade Commission, any of the evidence gathered by its investigators, nor did he take any of it with him in the field.

"Dunn contented himself with taking notes of the material before the commission to which he has access for use in his field work, all of which he destroyed when they were no longer needed in that connection," the report continued.

New Hampshire Abandons Mountain Face on Auto Tags

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Feb. 1.—New Hampshire automobile registration plates for the year 1927 will not bear the impression of the "Old Man of the Mountain," it was learned this morning. Orders for new plates have already been given by the State Purchasing Agent.

Motorists have been frank in expressing their views as to the appearance of this year's number plates containing the profile, which have not met with the approval anticipated.

Drivers of automobiles have expressed the opinion that the profile is confusing and that at a distance it greatly resembles the figure "9."

CONGRESS TAKES UP BIG BAKING MERGER

ADMINISTRATION ASSAILED

King Charges Coolidge Favors Such Projects—He Deplores Rise of "Caesarism."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The attention of both branches of Congress was directed today to the formation of the $2,000,000,000 Ward Food Products Corporation, and it was made the subject of both ridicule and criticism, with attacks directed at President Coolidge and the Administration.

In the Senate the announced philanthropic intentions of the founder of the William B. Ward Corporation were characterized by Senator George W. Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, as steps that would put the country "in Heaven before we knew it."

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, asserted that "we are tending toward Caesarism in our industrial life," with many American people desiring Caesar in their political life. He introduced a bill to amend the Sherman Anti-Trust law and threatened to join with others in an effort to repeal the law which created the Federal Trade Commission.

Facts on Merger Demanded in House.

Two resolutions seeking information about the food combination from the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission were introduced in the House by Representative LaGuardia of New York and referred to the Judiciary and Interstate Commerce Committees.

Speaking on his resolutions in the House, Representative LaGuardia said:

"It seems to me the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission should know what everybody knows—that the size of the loaf in New York is getting smaller and smaller.

"We want to know where the trouble lies. We would like to know also why the Federal Trade Commission ignored the LaFollette resolution of inquiry.

"We can do without meat and vegetables in New York, but cannot do without bread. We mean business in this matter.

"If the House committees to which my resolutions have been referred do not act promptly, I am at liberty, under the rules, to call them up in the House and move that the committees be discharged from further consideration."

Manly Nomination Passed Over.

Basil M. Manly, Director of the People's Legislative Service, issued a statement today entitled "On Guard for the People," in which he declared the $2,000,000,000 baking corporation of Mr. Ward "and his mysterious financial backers" constituted "a challenge to Congress and the Coolidge Administration."

He insisted that, pending investigation of the merger, the Senate should withhold action on the nomination of Charles W. Hunt for another term as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Mr. Manly said that "as a member of the reactionary majority of the Federal Trade Commission Mr. Hunt had permitted Mr. Ward to carry out his merger plans in clear defiance of the Sherman and Clayton acts, which that commission is directed by law to enforce."

The nomination of Mr. Hunt was passed over by the Senate in its executive session this afternoon.

King Charges Government Neglect.

Discussion of the so-called "bread trust" in the Senate began soon after that body met. Senator King announced that he was going to introduce a bill to amend the Sherman act.

Referring directly to the Department of Justice, he said: "They are sleeping

LINER RESCUES CREW OF 27 ON FREIGHTER SINKING IN STORM

Westphalia Wireless Says the Captain of Doomed Aklaid Was Nearly Drowned.

MEN WERE ALL EXHAUSTED

MANY SHIPS SEEK PORTS

Several Are Reported Short of Fuel —Ryburn Long Overdue at Philadelphia.

The seventy-five mile gale and fifty foot seas continue to buffet and batter the steamships large and small which are wearily making their way across the Atlantic, according to radio messages received here yesterday.

The captain of the Hamburg-American liner Westphalia reported taking off the crew of twenty-seven from the sinking Dutch freighter Alkaid in the forenoon after the weather moderated a little, and will land them here on Thursday.

The Westphalia is the third passenger vessel that has gone to rescue the crews of freighters in distress since Sunday, Jan. 24. The two other steamships were the President Roosevelt of the United States Lines, which stood by the Antinoe for eighty-four hours and took off her crew of twenty-four men and the North German Lloyd steamship Bremen, which picked up six of the crew of the Laristan and stood by for twenty-hours to try and save those left on board. The Laristan finally foundered in a snowstorm.

Freighters Seek Harbor.

Fully half a dozen of the small freighters which have been chartered to bring coal to New York, Boston and Philadelphia have sent wireless messages that they were compelled to put into St. Johns, N. F., or Halifax for coal. Two have returned to Cardiff for repairs, and another one was driven to seek refuge from the storm and to replenish her coal bunkers in the harbor of Bermuda.

The British freighter Mobiloil was picked up off Block Island Sunday afternoon short of fuel and was towed to New York yesterday by the wrecking tug Resolute. The Mobiloil left Hull on Jan. 2 in ballast.

Fears were expressed yesterday in shipping circles in Philadelphia for the safety of the British steamship Ryburn, which left Rotterdam on Dec. 23 for that port with 5,000 tons of anthracite. She carried a crew of thirty-two hands all told and was due at Philadelphia on Jan. 16. No word has been received from the Ryburn since she left Rotterdam. Hope was expressed by mariners yesterday that, as the vessel had not been reported in distress by any of the ships which have arrived in the past week, she may have hove-to to wait for fine weather.

Wireless Tells of Rescue.

Captain Carl Graalfs, master of the Westphalia, in his first radio message yesterday to the office of the Hamburg-American Line said:

Crew of the Alkaid taken aboard. All well. GRAALFS.

Julius P. Meyer, director of the line in New York, sent a message to the captain congratulating him and asking for further details of the gallant rescue that he and his men had made. The reply came late last night and read:

Sunday, 2 A. M. Received SOS from Dutch steamer Alkaid, Rotterdam. By means of wireless bearing finder was able to find direction of her position, wind west by northwest, force of wind 10. As calls were very urgent went fullspeed and sighted her at 11:15 A. M. Heavy waves washing over whole ship. Rails forward and afterdeck houses and hatches carried away. Boats smashed to pieces. Decks badly damaged account heavy storm. No possibility to do rescue work on Sunday, but waited for better weather. During night wind decreased to force 8. Sea a little handier.

Praise for His Crew.

At 7 A. M. Monday I sent message to Alkaid that I would send a boat. At 8:30 A. M. everything was ready. Boat was lowered and got safely alongside of Alkaid. Whole crew of twenty-seven were taken off one at a time. The Alkaid was set on fire and when we left she was burning all over. Boat was rowed alongside the Westphalia and the more or less exhausted men from the Alkaid were pulled on deck. Nobody was hurt.

Our lifeboat was lost. Captain Roos of the Alkaid was nearly

Crown Prince Saves U. S. Sailor in Harbor, Then Defies Swedish Law to Get Him a Drink

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 1 (AP).—The story of how the Swedish Crown Prince, Gustavus Adolphus, braved the icy waters of Stockholm Harbor and the Swedish liquor laws to rescue from drowning and then revive an American sailor has just become known, in spite of the Prince's orders that it be kept secret.

While the Crown Prince and his aid were walking along the waterfront on a recent wintry day they saw a man fall overboard, and without hesitation the Prince jumped in after him. Being a good swimmer, he succeeded in getting the sailor into a rowboat tied along the wharf.

When they regained the shore the Prince took the sailor to the nearest public house, a rough seamen's café and demanded a stiff drink of brandy for the man he had saved. He was told that in order to get a drink he would also have to order a meal. Here the aid interfered and told the law-abiding barmaid who her customer was. Then the order was filled.

The Crown Prince is equally well known as athlete, archaeologist and religious enthusiast. He is also said to be an amateur singer and is known to be a patron of music. He is a permanent member of the Swedish Olympic Committee, which is now preparing for the Olympic Games in Holland for 1928.

His first wife, whom he married in 1905 at the age of 23, was Princess Margaret Victoria of Connaught. She died in 1920, leaving him four boys and a girl. His second marriage, with Louise, Princess of Mountbatten (formerly Battenburg), which took place in London in 1923, is said to have been arranged by King George, his second cousin, who broke off an attachment that Princess Louise had with an artist in order to bring it about.

In May they are coming to the United States. Two events here which have inspired the visit are the sesquicentennial celebration of the Declaration of Independence at Philadelphia and the dedication at Washington of the monument to John Ericsson, the Swedish-American engineer who invented the Monitor.

FIVE NATIONS DELAY ARMAMENT SESSION

Headed by France, They Ask a Postponement of First Meeting of Preparatory Commission.

COUNCIL TO FIX NEW DATE

Cause of Action Is Laid to General Unpreparedness as Much as to Germany and Russia.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Feb. 1.—The first meeting of the preparatory commission for the disarmament conference will be postponed to a date to be fixed by the March session of the League Council, but will not be later than May 15.

The postponement is made necessary by the collective application of the French, Italian, Japanese, Czechoslovakian and Uruguayan Governments. Through their representatives on the League Council, these Governments on Saturday addressed to the Secretary General, Sir Eric Drummond, a formal proposal to delay the commission's meeting, which was desired by all the interested States but which, it was said, no single State had courage to propose for fear of being accused of political intrigue.

Germany and Russia Cause of Delay.

Although no reasons were given by the five States for the desired postponement of the conference, the request was dictated by the Russian and German situation. The condition of Germany's entrance into the League depends entirely upon the fulfillment of her disarmament obligations, and although Britain lacked the courage openly to take her place in the ranks there is a unanimous sentiment among the Allied nations against discussing disarmament with Germany on an equal footing until her slate is clean and the conditions of the Treaty of Versailles have been executed. Contrary action might not only have endangered the conference but have delayed the promised entry of Germany into the League.

As to Russia, negotiations continue between Berne and Moscow through the good offices of Paris and it is evident that Paris is hopeful of a successful outcome, which is designed to bring the Russians to Geneva.

It is evident that the intention of the United States Government to demand a separate naval and military conference had nothing to do with the postponement. All the interested nations, except Brazil, are pledged to separate conferences. Brazil is coming out for a Washington naval parley is continuing her policy announced at the Santiago Pan-American Conference, and in this policy she faces the declared opposition even of South American States.

It would quite evidently interest Britain and Japan to support the American proposal, but equally evident that this would break up the conference. France's armament is much more military than naval in character. This is due not only to the fact that she has a hereditary enemy on the east, but that war and the Washington conference robbed her of her fleet.

France to Ask Cut in British Navy.

When the conference is held France will want, for any cut in her army, not only a cut in the British army but in the British fleet, which will reduce Britain's power in proportion to the reduction which she is asked to make. This is a very good reason why France and all nations who depend on land armaments will oppose the separation of conferences that will permit the great naval powers to regulate the size of their fleets without regard to land armaments.

Even if the commission accepted the principle of separate conferences and the Council in its turn accepted the recommendations of the commission, it is certain a storm would be provoked in the Assembly. That body, in instructing the Council to make preparations for the conference, passed resolutions, one of which stated expressly that discussions of limitation of land and naval armaments are inseparables.

France Unprepared for Discussion.

DEMOCRATS PRESS COOPERATION PLAN

TARIFF TO BE PARTY ISSUE

New Talk of Shaver Retiring—McAdoo Men for Kremer as His Successor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A special meeting of the Democratic National Committee to reorganize the party's management is regarded as the inevitable outcome of an exchange of views between Democratic Senators and Representatives following last night's dinner at the residence of Senator Walsh of Montana. At the Walsh dinner, attended by campaign and committee and floor leaders of the Senate and House, sentiment was strongly in favor of having the national committee assemble in the Spring, probably in April.

While it is asserted that nothing was said at the dinner conference concerning Clem L. Shaver, Chairman of the national committee, the opinion was expressed widely in Democratic circles in the capital this afternoon that the proposed meeting of the committee would result in Mr. Shaver's retirement. The Chairman was represented as being willing, even anxious, to retire but as hesitating to call a meeting of the committee to receive his resignation until there was a certainty that his successor would be chosen without disrupting the party management.

The bitterness engendered at the Madison Square Garden convention of 1924 between the followers of Governor Smith of New York and William G. McAdoo of California is expected to flare up in a contest over the selection of the National Chairman, with each faction seeking to obtain the power and advantage which the chairmanship will furnish.

Cooperation Lacking Heretofore.

The discussion at Senator Walsh's dinner table disclosed that there had been no cooperation worthy of the word between the Democrats of the Senate and the House with respect to current legislation. An attempt will be made to overcome this condition. Some comment developed over lack of cooperation between the Democratic National Committee and the party's Senatorial and Congressional Campaign Committees, and, for that matter, between the Senatorial and the House committees.

The chairmen of the latter organizations, who were present at the Walsh dinner, promised to bring about cooperation through their executive committees or subcommittees, so as to provide party solidarity in both Houses on legislative measures.

One of the important results of the discussions at Senator Walsh's residence was a virtual decision that the Italian debt settlement agreement could be opposed by the Democratic Senators, acting as a party. The agreement has been ratified by the House. It was explained by House leaders at the Walsh dinner that many Democrats in that body could not see their way clear to oppose the settlement, because it was supported by Representative Crisp of Georgia, a Democratic member of the American Debt Commission.

Last night's discussion disclosed a marked opinion that Democratic Senators should vote to reject the agreement when it came before the Senate, taking the ground that all adjustments of the national war and post-war indebtedness of European nations should be on the basis of equal treatment of a debtor.

Regard Terms as Too Lenient.

The contention was made that the terms accorded to Italy were entirely too lenient, in view of the treatment of the British Government in the debt funding arrangement, and the indications are that a strong effort will be made by the Senate Democrats to reject the Italian settlement.

Much discussion took place at Senator Walsh's dinner over the pending Tax Reduction bill. While Senators and Representatives confessed that the get-together attitude of Democrats and Republicans on the measure appeared to bar any promise of making a party issue of it, there were indications that Democratic Senators intended to emphasize the contention that they forced the Republican members of the Finance Committee into accepting the amendment reducing the sur-

SEIZE POSTOFFICE IN PAWTUCKET, R.I., AND STEAL $265,000

EVEN WAIT FOR A DRILL

CLERK FED IN THE INTERIM

Special to The New York Times.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 1.—Four masked men took possession of the main postoffice in this city early today and escaped with $265,000 in stamps and registered mail after nearly four hours of calm and methodical work.

Apparently unconcerned that they had chosen a spot in the heart of the downtown section of this city of 70,000 population for their daring robbery, the men chatted with the two postal employes whom they overpowered and bound.

Once they put a coat over the shoulders of a clerk who complained that he felt cold. Another time they obligingly served the same clerk with sandwiches.

The gang entered the Central Post Office soon after midnight. They arrived in a big touring car which they parked outside. Entering the building they made directly for the vaults. Just outside the wire mesh partition, reaching from the floor to the ceiling surrounding the vaults, the four men encountered Peter F. Rafferty, a night watchman.

The men covered Rafferty with revolvers and two of them then rushed in and overpowered him. Ropes were produced and his arms were securely bound. He was then prodded with a revolver and directed to walk in back of the partition. Rafferty was then ordered to be seated in a chair.

A moment later George Sullivan, a clerk, apparently with Rafferty the sole occupants of the post office building, fell a victim to the band. He joined Rafferty in a chair.

Settle Down for a Quiet Job.

The four men then took off their overcoats and began to work. Finding it rather hot they slipped out of their coats and got down to vests. Three tanks of acetylene gas were brought in from the machine outside. Then a torch, a sledge hammer, three dynamite fuses and several spare automatic pistols of large calibre.

Hitching up torches to the acetylene tanks, the men began to burn their way through the door of the main vault. They found it slow work and frequently "spelled" each other in handling the hot blast of flame. According to the stories told later by Sullivan and Rafferty the men did not seem to be in the slightest hurry, nor did they pay any attention to what might be transpiring in the street outside.

Taking advantage of a momentary pause in the work, Rafferty complained to the robbers that he was feeling chilly. He told the men that he had been suffering from a cold and feared that if he was compelled to remain in his shirt sleeves he might develop pneumonia.

The nearest yeggman appeared to be sympathetic, Rafferty said later. He took his own coat and spread it over his victim's shoulders. Then the work on the vault door was resumed. Seemingly the robbers found the door stronger than they had anticipated, for a consultation was held to determine upon a policy that would get greater results.

After three hours of work on the door the leader of the band dispatched two of his men to get a special device capable of greater speed.

Sullivan's story to his superiors later was that the device was a "needle

Republicans Who Stole Chair Coolidge Sat in Disciplined

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 1 (AP).—The Republicans who stole the chair in which President Coolidge sat at last Summer's outing of the Essex County Republican Club are being disciplined, and they will not be included among the "prominent guests" invited to attend the "Lincoln Night" dinner at Hawthorne Inn, Feb. 12.

This became known today in a communication sent to Boston from Edmund G. Sullivan, President of the club, one of the most powerful political organizations in the State. The letter also said that "some men known to have broken Republican rules and in need of party discipline" have been omitted from the invitation list. No names were made public.

It was recalled that one of the few functions attended by the President while he was at Swampscott last Summer was the club's outing at Lake Attitash. He was made an honorary member, and from the club's viewpoint the chair in which he sat had historical value. Mr. Sullivan says some "Marblehead men" quietly made away with it.

M'LAUGHLIN SEEKS TO RECOVER $71,000

Will Ask City Counsel if Police Fund Can Regain Money Predecessor Expended.

ENRIGHT DEFENDS OUTLAYS

Questions Successor's Motives and Declares He Has No Apologies to Offer.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin said yesterday he would ask Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson for an opinion whether $71,000 disbursed by his predecessor, Richard E. Enright, out of the Police Welfare and Contingent Fund, started in 1920, could be recovered from those persons to whom the money was paid. The Commissioner's announcement was made shortly before Mr. Enright, in an eight-page statement, had explained the disbursements; declared he had no excuses to offer for the manner in which the fund had been administered, and asserted that he had full authority to do with the money as he willed.

Further details of expenditures from the fund uncovered by Thomas F. Moran, an auditor from Controller Charles W. Berry's office, elucidated several items which had been a source of mystery to members of the force. Deputy Police Commissioner Philip D. Hoyt when asked about one of these items, the expenditure of $100 on the last day of the Enright administration for a gold badge, revealed that this badge had been conferred by Mr. Enright on Dominick Henry, who had been retired as a Deputy Chief Inspector eighteen months before and had been appointed an honorary Deputy Chief of the Police Department toward the close of the Enright regime.

Hackett Also Got Badge.

Another gold badge which cost the Welfare and Contingent Fund $100 was that bestowed by Mr. Enright on John C. Hackett, a Deputy Police Commissioner in the early part of the Enright administration, who resigned after Mrs. Ellen O'Grady, then a Deputy Police Commissioner, complained that he had interfered with her when she was investigating a charge made by two girls against a business man in the Wall Street district. Hackett was appointed Honorary Deputy Chief Inspector by Mr. Enright in the last week of his régime, when it was known that he had requested all of the 150 "honoraries" to turn in their shields and their resignations before the appointment of his successor.

There was a third gold badge, which cost a little less than half of that paid for the Henry and the Hackett badges. This badge was conferred on Honorary Inspector A. J. Powers, and cost $45.

Major Hoyt said that the three badges were ordered on Dec. 9, 1925.

GOV. SMITH DEMANDS WATER POWER BODY SHALL BE ABOLISHED

Message to Legislature Calls for Repeal of Miller Act and Bills Are Put In.

HYDROELECTRIC WAR OPENS

Executive Denounces Avowed Republican Purpose of Granting Rights to Corporations.

URGES STATE DEVELOPMENT

He Appeals to Hughes Commission to Define Policy in Reorganization Report.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 1.—Repeal of the Miller act, which contemplates the development of the State's water power resources by private interests under rigid State control, and the abolition of the present State Water Power Commission, created through that statute, were demanded by Governor Smith in an extraordinary message which he sent to the Legislature tonight.

Incidentally, the Governor made a direct appeal to the Hughes commission, which now is at work on a plan for the reorganization of the State departments, to include in its report to the Legislature a clear-cut definition of what should be the State's policy with regard to its water power.

Such a recommendation alone, it is believed, can avert a new and bitter row between Governor Smith and the Republicans in the Legislature. Anything coming from the Hughes commission approximating a workable compromise would compel a respectful hearing from both sides, and there is even reason to believe that the Republican leaders here, who just now are in a defiant mood, would welcome such a way out of giving to the Democrats what of necessity would be a popular issue for their State campaign this Fall.

Urges Water Power Authority.

"It would mean nothing to consolidate the present Water Power Commission with the Conservation Commission, leaving to it the power to give away for a long period of years for a nominal sum the right to develop what belongs to the people themselves," the Governor said in what was regarded at the Capitol as a bid for support from the Hughes commission.

"What I am here seeking is not only a consolidation but a clear cut definition of State policy with regard to its water powers."

A State power authority as a substitute for the present Water Power Commission is again suggested by the Governor who for two years has urged the creation of such a body on the Republican lawmakers without result.

With such a corporation, municipal in character and with no stockholders but with power to issue bonds of its own, secured by revenues from water power improvements made by it, there would be no need to draw on the State's funds or credit, the Governor said. Although the returns would be limited the bonds would find a ready market and the operations of the power authority would always be subject to the control of the State.

Severe With Commission.

The Governor was severe with the Water Power Commission, which at present is an all-Republican body. He pointed out that it is empowered to act without any reference to the Governor, who, in theory at least, is responsible for State policies to all the people. He pronounced irregular a practice which places elective officials on administrative boards, whose heads should be amenable to the Chief Executive.

The Water Power Commission is composed of the Conservation Commissioner, the State Engineer, the Attorney General, the Speaker of the Assembly and the President pro tem. of the Senate. The Governor pointed out that the last two had been elected from small sections of the State, not as administrators but as lawmakers.

The Water Power Commission at present is preparing to issue permits to private corporations for important developments on the St. Lawrence and Niagara Rivers.

"If the present program is carried out, there will be no need for any further talk about power commissions, as the State will have given away its two great sources of water power development," the Governor said in his message.

Bills Carry Recommendations.

After the message had been read in the upper house Senator Nathan Straus Jr. introduced two bills, one repealing the Miller Power act and abolishing the Water Power Commission and the other creating a water power authority. Assemblyman Hackenburg of Manhattan sponsored identical measures in the lower house.

Senator Straus, speaking by unanimous consent, set some of his Republican colleagues, including Senator Fearon of Onondaga and Senator Knight, by the ears by charging that the Republicans were attempting to give away the State's remaining power resources in perpetuity to "corporate greed." He accused Senator Fearon of being an eloquent spokesman of the big corporations, thereby bringing the Senator to the floor to retort.

Mentions Mellon and Hancock.

"It is most unseemly that in its dying hour this Water Power Commission should be in such a rush to give away to the aluminum trust, headed by Mr. Mellon, 1,000,000 and to the Hancock water power interests 300,000 horsepower. It might be interesting to inquire why the Water Power Commission is so eager at this time to issue its temporary permits, later to become permanent leases, without

Boy Inventor, Son of a Realtor, Missing; Hunt Goes on in Park; He May Have Drowned

The disappearance of Geoffrey H. A. Tasker, 15 years old, son of a leading real estate dealer of Yonkers, was reported to the police last night. The boy, who has invented several electrical devices, has been missing since 11 A. M. on Sunday, when he left his home at Palisade Avenue and 23ist Street, in the Spuyten Duyvil section.

Twenty-five fellow-students in Hawthorne High School of Yonkers combed Van Cortlandt Park yesterday in vain for traces of the boy. Detective Waterhouse of the Bureau of Missing Persons said the search was being conducted on the theory that Geoffrey may have been disabled in crossing the park and was lying somewhere unable to attract attention.

According to his father, Lawrence Tasker, who is President of the Colonial Heights Realty Corporation, Geoffrey was dressed for hiking when he left, promising to be back for luncheon at 2 o'clock. One of the boy's inventions was a device for decreasing the amount of power needed to drive electric locomotives of the type in use on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

The basement of the Tasker home had been given over to an electrical workshop for Geoffrey. He had constructed a model of an electrical locomotive, chiefly out of tin cans, and had affixed a device which cut down the amount of current needed to drive it from 110 volts to 6 volts. The same device, it was said, was applicable to full-size locomotives.

In view of this, said Detective Waterhouse, the railroad had granted the boy permission to wander at will through its workshops. A new type of engine, it was said, was expected to be on view at a New Haven workshop in the Bronx. The police believe that Geoffrey set out to inspect it, and fell into a ravine or thicket in crossing Van Cortlandt Park on his way to the shop.

Policemen from the harbor division joined the search last night when it was reported to them that a youth answering Geoffrey's description and clad as he was in knickerbockers, a raincoat and golf stockings had been seen to step from a boat to an ice floe and sink in the Hudson nearby opposite the Tasker home. This occurred, the informant of the police said, about 12:30 Sunday afternoon.

Tuning Fork Screech Puts Out 24-Inch Flame; Future Firemen to Stay Home, Says Scientist

Firemen of Engine Company 65 were astonished yesterday to see a gas flame two feet high extinguished by sound and tonal vibration produced as simply as on a violin.

A demonstration was conducted at the engine house, 33 West Forty-third Street, by Charles Kellogg, a California naturalist, who believes he can solve the problem of fires in large cities. Passing a bow, like an enlarged violin bow, swiftly across an aluminum tuning-fork, he produced a screech like intense radio static.

Instantly the yellow gas flame, leaping inside a hollow glass tube, subsided to a height of six inches and became a sputtering blue flare. Another attempt with the bow, and another screech of vibration, extinguished it.

Mr. Kellogg told the incredulous firemen that they could put out blazes of the future without moving from fire headquarters. Each house and building, he said, would have its "pitch" scientifically determined, and the requisite screech produced with a much larger bow by a process of "tuning in." The General Electric Company, he said, was experimenting with the principle.

awaiting the report of the Hughes commission.

"I have been many years in politics, but I have never before witnessed so crude, so raw an attempt to give away the people's property in perpetuity to corporate greed."

"This message and these bills, if I am not much mistaken, are put in at this time to influence the Hughes commission in making its report," Senator Knight said. "The Governor of the State and the Senator from the Fifteenth have both been harping on this same string—declaring that the Republicans are preparing to give away the water power resources of the State. Nothing could be further from the truth. The only difference between the Republican policy and what we are led to believe is the policy of the opposition is that we believe in hydroelectric development by private enterprise under leases and they believe in having the State itself undertake that work."

Democratic members of the Assembly, led by Minority Leader Bloch, launched a vigorous attack on the Water Power Commission and the Republican Party's water power policy. Charges that the Water Power Commission, in leasing the power sites to private corporations, was trying to "make some new millionaires in the northern part of the State" were made by Assemblyman Hackenburg, Democrat, of Manhattan.

"Certain promises may have been given to some men higher up in the councils of the Republican Party about water power, but God help any one who tampers with water power and attempts to take this priceless heritage away from the people," he shouted.

"Certain people in the Republican Party," asserted Mr. Bloch, "are ready to turn over the State's water power rights to private interests while the remainder of the Republicans in the State are peacefully sleeping."

The Governor's Message.

State of New York,
Executive Chamber,
Albany, Feb. 1, 1926.

To the Legislature:

There is no problem awaiting consideration at the hands of your honorable bodies that means more to the people of this State than the development of hydroelectric power. For years and years we have been hauling coal into this State to produce light, heat and power, while water power, with its tremendous possibilities for commercial development, labor saving and human happiness generally, has been running to waste.

There are just two means so far suggested to bring about this development. The State Water Power Commission, in a recent report to your honorable bodies, suggests that it has defined the State water power policy, and a reading of the report indicates that that policy is to lease it to private corporations for a long term of years.

Water power is the last of our State's great resources still remaining in the hands of the people themselves. In no unmistakable terms the people, in the Fall of 1923, rejected an amendment to our Constitution which would have permitted the development of water power in the Adirondacks by private corporations. This referendum vote was widely discussed, and brought about an understanding of the water power problem such as we never had in this State before.

Grants at Niagara an Example.

I regard that referendum vote as clearly indicating the attitude of the people of our State toward the development of water power. All of our history shows that once we give long leases of State property upon which a great deal of money may be expended for development, we set up a monopoly that can only be repurchased and condemned at prohibitive prices. Nobody can deny that this has been the history of gifts of public resources and rights of way during the past century.

Why should any individual or group of individuals get possession of the property of the people of this State when it is possible for the State to develop these water powers under State ownership and under State control?

The history of all the grants of water power at Niagara Falls should in itself be sufficient to condemn the policy of giving away for small annual rentals these great properties which should be preserved for our use and the use of our children. The wasteful policy of the past is emphasized by the report of the commission itself when it says:

Niagara and St. Lawrence the Keys.

"The commission in the past year has largely devoted its attention to securing adequate compensation for the use of State-controlled waters from these companies which for years have been using these waters without fully compensating the State for the privileges enjoyed."

That extract from the report is the meat in the cocoanut. Of course, these companies have been enjoying these privileges for years and when the State Superintendent of Public Works, in a report to the Senate, called the attention of the Legislature to the fact that these waters were being used without substantial return, he was hotly assailed on the floor of the Senate.

The two great sources of hydroelectric energy are at Niagara Falls and on the St. Lawrence River. Corporations eager to get control of these water powers have been working on the project for years.

As far back as 1907, by special charter the right to develop at the St. Lawrence River was granted to the Long Sault Development Company, which special charter was repealed by the Legislature in 1913. In no way discouraged during all the years that have passed, private corporations still have their eye on the great power possibilities of the St. Lawrence River.

Both of these places may be said to be the key to comprehensive power development. The small inland rivers and streams and surplus waters of the canal produce only sufficient power when hooked up to the main source to be able to take care of the peak load. The basis of firm, steady, all-the-year-round power is at the two places mentioned and spoken of in the report of the Water Power Commission. If both of these sources of supply fall into the hands of private companies, possibility for future State development will be lost forever.

Colonel Greene Misquoted.

The report seeks to put the State Superintendent of Public Works in accord with the theory of giving these water power rights to private corporations. I am authorized by the State Superintendent of Public Works to say that the statement contained in the report of the New York State Water Power Commission that its policy is with his full cooperation is not in accordance with the facts and that he does not approve the issuance of the license referred to in the report.

To the end that the State, in the interest of all of her people, may retain control of this power at the source, I advocate the establishment of a State power authority, municipal in character, having no stockholders, deriving its powers from the State and having the duty specifically imposed upon it to prepare a plan for the comprehensive development of all of our power resources.

Such a public corporation should be given the power to issue bonds exempt from State taxation and secured by the revenues to be derived from the improvements when made. Such a handling of the proposition makes necessary the use of State money or State credit. There is scarcely any doubt that the great revenues to be derived from the construction of these enterprises will attract investors on the basis of a reasonable interest return and without the larger returns that are expected by stockholders who invest in private corporations.

The valuable franchises which the State itself would own would be capitalized, not in the interest of private stockholders, but in the interest of the public. The service which it would render in furnishing cheaper light, heat and power would be subject always to the control and regulation of the State itself.

Great projects are now under way all over the country for power developments, reclamation, irrigation, port development, tunnel construction and similar undertakings through public or municipal corporations, created by sovereign States investing such corporations with the power to own, construct and, in many cases, operate great public improvements, and with the power to issue their own bonds exempt from State taxation.

There is, therefore, nothing new or untried in the proposal that I make. Furthermore, the State is already engaged in the business of producing electrical energy. The power plants at Crescent Dam and Vischers Ferry on the canal belong to the State of New York. The legislation required to make the reorganization amendment effective will have to provide for the abolition of the State Water Power Commission.

Opposes Elective Officers on Board.

If the present program is carried on, however, there will be no need for any further talk about power commissions, as the State will have given away the two great sources of water power development.

One of the underlying theories in the reorganization plan was to remove elective officers from boards and commissions such as the present Water Power Commission. No student of our Government can make any defense for the appointment by statute to this important commission of the Speaker of the Assembly and the majority leader of the Senate, both of whom are legislators and not administrators, and elected from small sections of the State, to say nothing of its organization without reference to the Governor, who, in theory at least, ought to represent all of the people.

This is not a question of the consolidation of the departments of the Government. It is one of policy as to how the State is going to deal with its water powers. It would mean nothing to consolidate the present Water Power Commission with the Conservation Commission, leaving to it the power to give away for a long period of years for a nominal sum the right to develop what belongs to the people themselves.

What I am here seeking is not only a consolidation but a clear cut definition of State policy with regard to its water powers.

The Water Power Commission from its report seems to believe that these great power possibilities should fall into private hands. I am satisfied that the people of the State desire to retain them for operation under State ownership and control. Accordingly, I recommend that the State Water Power act be immediately repealed and in its place the State water power authority be set up in the Conservation Commission and charged with the duty of preparing a plan for comprehensive development at the earliest possible moment.

This is a definite proposal that is practical and capable of immediate usefulness. It adds no financial burden to the State and at the same time permits the State to develop its own resources immediately and puts the State in a position to participate in any interstate or international projects, protecting at the same time our own rights and conserving them for the benefit of all our people. ALFRED E. SMITH.

JENKS SPONSORS ASSEMBLY DRY BILL

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 1.—A State-wide prohibition enforcement bill was introduced tonight in the lower house of the Legislature by Assemblyman Jenks, Republican, of Broome, but the dry forces, it was revealed, are having a trying time to find a Republican Senator to sponsor a companion measure in the upper house.

Senator Wales, Republican, of Broome, who last year handled the dry bill, in the upper house, said tonight he had not made up his mind what to do about sponsoring a similar measure again this year.

Judging from reports which floated around the Senate lobby tonight, the Republican leaders of the upper House would be rather thankful if a dry bill was not sponsored by any member of their party in the Senate this year. Friends of Lieut. Gov. Lowman and Senator Knight, the majority leader of the upper house, said they believed these two Republican leaders would like it much better if all the members of their party refused to handle a dry bill at the present session.

The Jenks bill is more drastic than the one of last year in that it would make the penalty for first offense for the possession of liquor a fine of $50 or thirty days in jail, or both. The bill of last year made the first offense punishable by a fine of $50.

PROTEST CONTINUANCE OF THE RENT LAWS

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 1.—In a brief filed today with the Judiciary Committees of the Senate and Assembly on the eve of a public hearing before them tomorrow on rent and housing measures pending before the Legislature, the Real Estate Board of New York City, through J. Irving Walsh, its President, insists that there is no general emergency there to justify the continuation of the emergency rent laws.

Referring to the findings of the legislative commission on housing, the brief states that probable vacancies in New York City are from 4½ to 5¼ per cent. and that under the commission's own statement the necessary margin of vacancies to insure bargaining power to the tenant is 5.6 per cent.

Testimony given by Frank Mann, Mayor Hylan's Tenement House Commissioner, in January of last year, that there were then 24,293 vacant apartments of which 12,175 could be rented at less than $600 a year, is quoted.

GETS BILL TO END GRADE CROSSINGS

Legislature Is Asked to Allow Vote on Abolition in Some Localities

AND PROVIDE COUNTY AID

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 1.—A grade crossing elimination act designed to give statutory force to the constitutional amendment approved by the voters last year and which authorizes a bond issue of $300,000,000 by the State to pay in part for the removal of perilous railroad crossings was introduced in both branches of the Legislature at the session tonight.

The measure was sponsored by the Joint Legislative Committee on Grade Crossings Elimination, of which Senator Charles J. Hewitt of Cayuga is Chairman.

The bill does not affect New York City nor the cities of Buffalo and Syracuse, where grade crossing elimination on a large scale will be necessary.

The work in New York City has already been mapped out by the Transit Commission. Its plan contemplates the expenditure of approximately $50,000,000 over a ten-year period. Presumably the State would be required to contribute a similar amount during that period. It is expected that supplementary legislation will be introduced to take care of those three large municipalities.

Provision for Referendum.

One problem with which the Grade Crossing Committee found itself confronted in determining the policy to be pursued is the fact that to not a few of the up-State localities where the assessed valuation of taxable property is small compliance with orders issued for the elimination of local grade crossing might consume all available revenues, possibly more.

The bill introduced tonight provides that where payments by a locality in any year shall require an amount in excess of one-twentieth of 1 per cent. of the assessed valuation of taxable property no such order shall issue except in instances where the local authorities have submitted the question to a vote and the voters have taken favorable action.

Further to ease the situation affecting such localities there is a provision under which counties, by action of their Board of Supervisors, may provide aid to a city, town or village within its boundaries on the ground that grade crossing elimination is a public purpose of the county and that the county shall aid the city, town or village to enable it to meet its obligation in this connection.

This provision was rendered necessary by an opinion handed down last October by Attorney General Ottinger.

Repayments to State.

The measure provides that the Public Service Commission shall designate the grade crossings to be eliminated, and notice of such orders must be served on the railroads involved, the State Department of Public Works and persons who may be interested, not less than ten days in advance of the order being issued.

The Superintendent of Public Works or the railroad corporation, or both, as the Public Service Commission may direct, must then with all convenient speed prepare and file plans. The bill provides that the work shall be done under the supervision of the Department of Public Works, the approaches being constructed by the department itself.

Under the terms of the constitutional amendment, railroad companies must bear 50 per cent. of the cost, and the State and localities 25 per cent. each. The large amount provided for in the amendment was with a view to the State advancing its credit to railroad corporations and localities. Provision is made in the enabling measure for repayment by railroads and localities to the State, the Public Service Commission to compute the proportionate share of the cost and the State Controller to determine the number, amount and time of repayments.

Where a railroad fails to make such payments it is provided that the State may levy the amounts due, with interest thereon, and collect them as taxes and assessments are collected. Where a municipal corporation defaults resort would be had to mandamus proceedings.

The bill repeals the present statute having reference to the removal of railroad crossings. Chairman Hewitt of the Grade Crossing Committee said tonight that an annual expenditure of $10,000,000 up-State was probable and that a similar amount would be set aside for the City of New York if it should be shown that it could be spent to advantage there in such a period.

CUSTOMS BAR BILL OFFERED

Group Seeks Incorporation to Improve Legal Standards.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 1.—A bill incorporating the Association of the Customs Bar was introduced today by Assemblyman Edward E. Fay of Brooklyn.

The general purpose of the corporation would be "to maintain and improve the standards and methods of practice under Federal laws relating to customs and revenue before the United States Court of Customs Appeals, the Board of United States General Appraisers, the Treasury Department and all departments or bureaus charged with interpretation or administration of such laws.

"Collateral aims of the corporation as defined in the bill would be to elevate the standards of honor, integrity and courtesy in the legal profession engaged in such practice and to promote reforms in the law."

Widow With $10,000 Income Fears Eviction; Can't Pay Mortgage on Her $300,000 Estate

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT KISCO, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Although she has an annual income of $10,000 from a trust fund, and lives in a thirty-room brick house on a $300,000 estate here, Mrs. Loula Mae McLean, widow of Stephen Ashton McLean, New York financier, announced today that she feared eviction from her home because of failue to pay off a $70,000 mortgage which falls due next month.

"Wood that we cut on the grounds is our only source of heat," Mrs. McLean said, "and for food we have depended upon the credit extended us by the tradespeople. I can pay the interest on the mortgage, but I want to clear it off and I can't see my way clear. I shall stay here as long as I can, with my two servants, who look after the place. I'm sure that I'll have to leave unless I can raise money enough to pay the mortgage."

Mr. McLean, who died in 1920, left an estate of about $1,100,000. He left two wills. The earlier one left the entire estate to the widow. The later will, however, gave Mrs. McLean the $300,000 estate and a $200,000 trust fund and divided the remaining $600,000 among relatives.

Mrs. McLean brought an action in the Supreme Court, asserting that the later will did not supersede mutual wills which she and her husband had made in 1909, each leaving the entire mutual estate to the other. She carried the case to the Appellate Division, but lost the decision.

Mr. McLean's sisters, the late Ellin McLean and Mrs. William Thompson, received a large part of the estate. Mrs. McLean finally made an agreement with them by which she waived all her claims in return for $5,000 cash and deeds to property in Mountainville, N. Y.

REPUBLICAN CHIEFS SUPPORTING KOENIG

NO INTENTION OF RESIGNING

Will Ignore Attacks by Women's Groups, but Is Likely to Be Aggressive to Costuma.

Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the New York County Republican County Committee, just back from a vacation in Florida, received offers of support yesterday from practically every Republican Assembly District leader in New York County in the fight being made on him by insurgents. Mr. Koenig declined to discuss the attacks that had been made in his absence, but it was learned from an authoritative source that he had no intention of resigning, and in all probability would be a candidate for re-election this Fall.

Mr. Koenig was kept busy answering telephone calls from his friends during the day, and late in the afternoon when he reached the county headquarters at 105 West Fortieth Street, he found a half dozen district leaders waiting for him. Mr. Koenig said the expressions of confidence in his leadership were very gratifying.

According to his friends, Mr. Koenig took the view that the attacks upon him were too inconsequential to be worth a direct reply. He was communicative on the subject of Florida, but would not comment upon the charge made by David B. Costuma, leader of the Nineteenth Assembly District, that he had brought about the defeat of the Grenthal rent bill, nor on the movement started by women of the Republican Neighborhood Association to bring about his retirement.

Not Excited, He Says.

"So far as I can learn, nobody is excited about this except the newspapers," he said. "I had a great time in Florida. I played golf, enjoyed the climate, saw several jai alai games and went to the races. I feel very happy."

Mr. Koenig conferred with some of his friends and was told that although his political enemies had made a good deal of noise during his absence, there was nothing for him to worry about, as every Assembly District leader, except Mr. Costuma, was for him, as was the great majority of the members of the County Committee.

Mr. Koenig's friends were reported to consider the movement started by Mr. Costuma and Mrs. Parsons and believed to be backed by friends of former State Senator Schuyler M. Meyer and William M. Chadbourne to be a movement against not only Mr. Koenig but against Representative Ogden L. Mills and Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Committeeman from this State.

Mr. Mills, who is Treasurer of the County Committee, is admittedly a power in the local Republican organization. With a State campaign coming on this Fall, and with Mr. Mills credited with some ambition for the nomination for Governor, and, failing that, with ambition for the nomination for United States Senator two years hence, it was declared that he did not intend to permit his influence to be weakened and would support Mr. Koenig to the end.

Hilles Also Behind Him.

Mr. Hilles also was credited with a desire to have Mr. Koenig remain. It was contended that criticism of Mr. Koenig for failure in the last city campaign applied with equal force to Mr. Hilles and the other Republican county leaders.

It was said to be Mr. Koenig's intention to ignore completely the attacks made upon him by Mrs. Parsons and the group of Republican women headed by Miss Katherine P. Day. He will take a more aggressive stand on the charges brought by Mr. Costuma.

A meeting of the Resolutions Committee of the County Committee, to be held tomorrow afternoon, was called yesterday by the Chairman, Municipal Court Justice John R. Davies. This committee will consider Mr. Costuma's charge, and will make a report to the County Committee at its February meeting.

WALSH AIMS BILL AT OIL WITNESSES

Proposes Seizure of Property of Persons Fleeing From Jurisdiction of Courts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—An echo of the Teapot Dome oil leasing case was heard in the Senate today, when Senator Walsh of Montana sought adoption of a bill amending the Federal law on contempts so that property of persons evading the courts by leaving the country might be seized and sold. He asserted that three important witnesses in the Teapot Dome case have left the United States.

Determined opposition was shown against the measure, the debate preventing action. Senators Reed of Pennsylvania, Means of Colorado and others opposed the legislation at this time.

The Walsh bill would empower the courts to impose a fine of not exceeding $100,000 in the failure of the desired witness to appear and testify. If the fine was not paid, property of the witnesses would be sold to satisfy the judgment.

Cocoa and Rubber Trading to Open.

Trading on the Cocoa and Rubber Exchange of America, Inc., will begin today. The unit chosen is five long tons in conformity with the rubber world's standard. Dealings in futures will be permitted for fifteen months in advance. After several months' study a committee of rubber specialists has devised a contract which they believe will afford adequate protection against sharp fluctuations. At the same time, they say, it prevents the legitimate importer, merchant and broker from interference in their activities.

New Jersey Zinc Co. Income.

The New Jersey Zinc Company reports total income of $7,048,318 in 1925, against $6,585,643 in 1924, and net income of $6,388,313, against $6,405,643 in 1924. The net income for 1925 equaled $14.03 a share earned on the $49,081,000 capital stock, against $13.05 a share in 1924. Dividends of $5,889,792 were paid last year and $450,000 was set aside for the company's profit-sharing plan. There was a surplus of $548,526.

M'LAUGHLIN SEEKS TO RECOVER $71,000

and received by a patrolman in the Police Commissioner's office on Dec. 30, the day Mr. Enright had ceased his connection with the force. The patrolman turned them over to Lieutenant John Buckley, "major domo" in the Police Commissioner's office during the Enright régime, who was sent to desk duty in the Mercer Street Station soon after Commissioner McLaughlin took office.

Home Service Relief Fund.

Deputy Commissioner Hoyt also explained that the audit of the accounts of the Welfare and Contingent Fund showed that when the Home Service account of the fund was organized on Nov. 24, 1919, as a means of supplying the families of policeman with clothing and foodstuffs at reduced cost, $50,000 in two loans was obtained from the $2,000,000 Police Relief Fund, another outside organization, which Commissioner McLaughlin within the last few days has brought under the control of city officials and uniformed members of the force.

These loans were repaid with interest some time after the Home Service account began to roll up a profit. The profit had reached $65,000 when the fund was closed out on March 2, 1923. Major Hoyt said this Home Service account had been organized by Inspector J. Stevens Ullman, a Special Deputy Commissioner in the Enright Administration, and the records showed that foodstuffs valued at more than $1,000,000 were dispensed to the families of policemen through the main office in the abandoned police station at 205 Mulberry Street and in eleven station houses in scattered parts of the city.

Major Hoyt also referred to a report on the status of the fund made by David Hirshfield, as Commissioner of Accounts, to Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert on Jan. 24, 1924, which showed that when the last of the sales depots was closed the surplus stock of groceries was divided among other police activities or sold to jobbers, or destroyed when of no salable value. There was no surplus of clothing, according to the Hirshfield report.

The remainder of the $96,000 in receipts for the Welfare and Contingent Fund, the audit showed, came from donations and cash, profits in the sale of uniform equipment for the men of the force. Cloth and buttons for their uniforms, as well as shoes and other materials, were dispensed through the Police Equipment Bureau at low cost, which produced a profit of $26,000.

The Deputy Commissioner said Mr. McLaughlin believed that the $71,000 in profits derived from these sources should have been turned back into a fund which would revert to the members of the force, instead of being eaten up in connection with the purchase of badges for "honoraries," trips for certain members of the force to Europe, and the expense of entertaining visiting foreign police officials, or other distinguished persons at the Bankers' Club and at some of the prominent hotels.

Enright Defends Outlays.

In his statement Mr. Enright explained that the balance of the Welfare and Contingent Fund—about $30,000—had been transferred by him from that fund to the Police Relief Fund before his administration of the force ended.

"I have no excuses to offer for the manner in which this fund has been administered. It was not city funds, nor was it a fund raised by public subscriptions. It was essentially a private fund, dedicated to the purposes for which it was used, namely, the advancement of the policies of the last police administration and to promote the campaign for closer cooperation and sympathetic understanding between the Police Departments of the world. All such expenditures were made in good faith and, as I believed at that time, and still believe, in full accordance with the purposes for which the fund was collected and which it was designed to serve."

Enright Raps McLaughlin.

In the beginning of the statement he characterizes the report of the status of the fund as made public by Commissioner McLaughlin last Saturday as "wholly misleading and apparently issued with intent to deceive the public." The statement goes on:

"Whether it was Police Commissioner McLaughlin's intention to create such erroneous impressions or not I have no means of knowing, but I intend to correct them, regardless of Commissioner McLaughlin's intentions or those of any one else."

Asserting that the fund did not contain a dollar of the city's money and that public subscriptions had not been solicited for it, Mr. Enright denied that it had been "dedicated to the widows and orphans of policemen." A few of his friends, he said, "made donations to me to be used as I saw fit for the advancement of the department, and the policies of my administration, and these donations were placed to the credit of this fund."

Mr. Enright then goes into an explanation of the disbursements from the fund, and then, in the telling of the expenditure of $5,500 from the fund for the services of a publicity man, says:

"This service was absolutely necessary in order to offset the vicious political propaganda circulated by certain civic organizations and by certain members of the press in this city. The virulence and untruthfulness of the reports about the Police Department became more pronounced as the time for the municipal campaign approached, and in the higher interest of the department, and in order that the morale of the force might not suffer, it was deemed necessary to put the facts before the public through the medium of a competent publicity man.

"Police Commissioner McLaughlin is forehanded; he is not going to be caught without the services of a public man, as testified by the appointment of Mr. Philip Hoyt to the post of Fifth Deputy Commissioner. Until quite recently, Fifth Deputy Commissioner Hoyt was a newspaper reporter on a salary of perhaps $75 per week, but he is now attending to the heavy publicity work at Police Headquarters, at a salary of $6,500 per annum, paid out of the City Treasury. During my eight years in the Police Commissionership, it never occurred to me that I might have a Deputy Police Commissioner as publicity agent, at the expense of the city."

The former Commissioner then explained why he had advanced $8,000 out the Welfare and Contingent Fund in 1924 to Deputy Chief Inspector Samuel G. Belton, Inspector William T. Davis and Sergeant Frederick C. Kruse, all now retired members of the force, and Lieutenant John A. Golden, formerly of the Detective Division, but now doing desk duty in Harlem, for a trip to European cities.

Representatives of these cities, in the 1923 session of the International Police Conference, he said, "pressed me to have qualified representatives of the New York Police Department visit their respective departments for the purpose of studying their systems of policing."

OFFICERS TO WATCH POLICE ON PATROL

McLaughlin Orders Thirteen Lieutenants From Desk Jobs —Transfers 2 Captains.

NOT SPY SYSTEM, HE SAYS

Action Is Regarded as Move to Make More Effective the Drive Against Crime.

Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin assigned fifteen superior officers yesterday to supervise the patrol force in different parts of the city. His action was a source of much comment in the Police Department. The report immediately spread that Mr. McLaughlin had in mind establishing a sort of "shoo-fly" system of spying on patrolmen, but when he was asked about it he said:

"There is no 'shoo-fly' system intended in the assignment of those officers. I transferred the two captains and the thirteen lieutenants to supervision of the patrol force in uniform because there was an excess of the number of captains in command of precincts, and the thirteen lieutenants were taken from desk duty for the same reason."

It was the first time in many years that officers of the force had been assigned to uniform duty of the kind. During the Administration of General Theodore Bingham as head of the Police Department he assigned the late Captain Frederick W. Martens and several other precinct commanders to patrol duty in uniform at night as punishment for what General Bingham declared at the time to be their lack of interest in their work.

General Bingham also enforced a rule in the department compelling precinct lieutenants to alternate patrol duty in uniform with desk duty, but this plan was abandoned later and uniformed supervision of the men of the force was imposed solely on sergeants, where it remained until yesterday.

Captains George L. Sullivan and Ernest L. B. Von Dieszelski were assigned to this new work as attachés of the staff of Deputy Chief Inspector John W. O'Connor, head of the uniformed force in Brooklyn. Until a few days ago Sullivan had been in command for some time of the Clinton Street Station on the lower east side, and Van Dieszelski had up to the same time been in command of the Lee Avenue (Brooklyn) Station.

They were transferred to make room for two lieutenants, who were promoted to acting captain, after Commissioner McLaughlin announced that he would request the Civil Service Commission to restore the names of these two and two others to the eligible list for promotion. The four had been passed over three times by former Police Commissioner Enright, without explanation, and, under the law, their names were dropped from the "eligible list." The law gives the Civil Service Commission the right to restore their names to the list on the request of the Police Commissioner.

While Commissioner McLaughlin would make no further comment on his action, it was understood that he took advantage of the surplus of captains and lieutenants as a means of getting more effective service out of the patrolmen in the plan to cope more effectively with hold-up men and other criminals.

JAZZ WINS IN SOFIA.

Devotees Force Its Adoption at Royal Charity Ball.

SOFIA, Feb. 1.—A fierce dispute has arisen in Sofia over the modern dances. Many influential persons, including Mgr. Stephan, the Archbishop of Sofia, denounces them as immoral and ungodly.

The climax was reached last night on the occasion of the charity ball organized by the Princess Eudoxia, the King's sister, when the orchestra was allowed to play only waltzes and Bulgarian national dances.

The guests refused to dance. So, finally realizing that charity would suffer, the enemies of the foxtrot yielded and jazz returned to its own. The dispute, however, is not over, and a vigorous anti-jazz propaganda is being planned.

QUEENSTOWN GREETS THE LINER BREMEN

North German Lloyd Captain Tells How Six Survivors of the Laristan Were Saved.

ONLY ONES TO TAKE CHANCE

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 1.—After lying off the port for several hours because the sea was so rought that a pilot was unable to go out to her, the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, which rescued six men of the British freighter Laristan, came in at 4:40 o'clock this morning and received a hearty welcome from a reception committee aboard a tender.

The committee was practically the same as that which greeted the President Roosevelt, being made up of Cork and Queenstown officials plus the North German Lloyd officials stationed here.

Captain Wurpts, a jovial old seadog, speaking excellent English, expressed regret that he was unable to save the other members of the Laristan's crew.

The Laristan's survivors had fully recovered from the effects of their experience. The boat in which they got off from their ship was the last one not crushed. At first seven men got into her, but one subsequently was drowned. The Bremen had succeeded in floating over by a cask a rope to the Laristan and then in hauling the lifeboat to the Bremen. Three seamen and three firemen were saved, but Captain Littleheels and the other twenty-four men went down.

Captain Wurpts Tells of Rescue.

"Jan. 25th, 3:45 P. M., 45.06 north (latitude) 42.45 west (longitude) we received an S O S from the English steamer Laristan, giving her position as 45.40 north, 43.06 west. We immediately made for her given position, but on account of the running heavy northwest storm, high wild sea and swell we could proceed with only medium speed because the ship was continuously overtaken by the high sea. We went about five knots against the high sea and therefore we showed from 11 P. M. on rockets and blue lights in order to be seen.

"Jan. 26th about 3 A. M. we reached the place given us by the wireless without seeing anything of the Laristan. Now we received news that the place of disaster was not as given before, but was miles south in 45.12 north, 43.12 west. We immediately changed our course and steamed southward under continuous showing of rockets and blue lights.

"At 4:30 A. M. we saw her first rocket, about right ahead, and we went for the ship and reached the Laristan at 5 A. M. It was an absolute impossibility to man a boat in this high sea. We prepared our cannon to shoot some lines over, also some lines with life rings, and got throwing-lines and storm ladders and a boat's crew for rescuing ready, in case there would have been even a faint possibility to lower a boat. Our only hope for success was to fetch the people over to us with lines, because the storm and sea continued with the same fury, and hail and snow squalls followed each other.

"We continuously tried to get to the ship. We succeeded twice with cannon and twice with lines and life rings. The Laristan had on the starboard side a boat clear, and was requested by us to fasten a line to it, so we would try to get the boat after our stern, because to get the boat alongside would have wrecked the boat surely.

Only Seven Would Venture In.

"The line was fastened and very much to our disappointment only seven men got into it. We got the boat behind our stern and took six men in on our ropes. One man was washed off by the high sea and drowned. The carpenter of the Laristan, who was also in the boat and already had a line around his body, also was washed off and swung up and down the high waves, but we succeeded in getting him in. The rope of the boat got tangled in one of our propellers, but it broke loose and in that way the boat drifted away.

"We tried several times again to get near the ship to shoot lines and ropes with life rings over, and we succeeded twice in this effort. To our regret the men of the Laristan did not avail themselves of this opportunity. Meanwhile we had again long-lasting snow squalls, with extremely heavy winds, and soon darkness fell upon the sea. We stayed near the ship. The last time we saw the ship was at 6:12 P. M., three points after, lying diagonal in distance of about one mile.

"Now we had again a prolonged snow squall. When the air became clear for a while there was nothing to be seen of the ship and the radio station did not receive any answer. We remained during the whole night near the place of the disaster, and when daylight came we noticed a great many pieces of doors, staircases, &c. From this we drew the conclusion that the steamer sank during the night.

"We regret very much that our continued attempts to rescue the poor men were not crowned with better success."

Anxious Vigil Aboard the Tender.

The all-night wait aboard the tender was a trying and anxious one for the reception delegation.

Everybody aboard was startled when the tender's wireless operator reported that the Bremen was ashore on Roche's Point. The report was due to an error of the lighthouse keeper on Roche's Point, who telephoned to Spike Island, whence the wireless report was sent out.

After an hour of anxious waiting it was learned that the Bremen was safe but unable to enter port owing to the lack of a pilot.

The pilot finally came aboard the tender and said it was impossible to board the Bremen. He said he would try later, and the tender spent the night tumbling in the bay waiting for the liner to enter.

COLD ICES STREETS AND NEW YORK SLIPS

Traffic Halted on Manhattan and Brooklyn Bridges—Many Hurt in Minor Mishaps.

Traffic was halted for varying periods and New Yorkers slid to work yesterday when the weather executed a right-about, changing rain into sleet and snow and icing the pavements. Cold, clear weather, with little change from last night's brisk temperature, was the outlook for today.

A woman was killed in Brooklyn and there was a series of minor mishaps all traceable to the uncertain footing. Traffic was suspended temporarily on the Manhattan Bridge and on the Brooklyn Bridge when the ice-coated pavement made movement too hazardous. Railroads entering the city reported no delays, but up-State New York and parts of New England reported "ice storms."

The rain, which had fallen pretty consistently for the previous twenty-four hours, was frozen as fast as it fell when shortly before dawn the temperature dropped suddenly. A glaze was spread over streets and sidewalks. By 10 o'clock traffic was so congested and delayed on the Manhattan Bridge that the police closed it for a time, diverting vehicles to the Brooklyn Bridge. This clogged the second span and a thirty minute tie-up of the Manhattan-bound bridge thoroughfare resulted.

When snow and sleet followed the drop in temperature, 2,000 men, comprising one-third of the usual force ordered out for snowstorms, were put to work clearing the streets. Street Cleaning Commissioner Alfred A. Taylor said that he had 535 snowplows at work in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx, and that he expected no serious trouble.

The woman who lost her life was Mrs. Perina de Ambrosia, 32 years old, of 193 Sands Street, Brooklyn. Carrying her infant daughter, Celia, 1 year old, Mrs. de Ambrosia stepped from the curb at Sands Street and Gold Street at noon.

A truck driven by Ringold Gustafson of 1,923 Fifty-third Street, Brooklyn, was approaching through Gold Street. The driver applied his brakes but the truck skidded on the ice. Mrs. de Ambrosia saw that she could not escape being hit. She tossed the child, well bundled up, to the sidewalk behind her. The machine passed over the mother. She died in Holy Family Hospital.

The infant was picked up by Policeman Broshard of the Poplar Street Station, and taken to the Holy Family Hospital, where it was found to have received a fracture of the right leg. Gustafson was held on a technical charge of homicide.

CHASE AFTER A HOG ENLIVENS HARLEM

500-Pound Porker Caught and Locked in Station Cell, Then Removed to S. P. C. A.

A 500-pound black hog appeared mysteriously in the streets of Harlem during the height of the snowstorm yesterday afternoon, defied its pursuers who slipped and fell in the snowy streets and was finally locked up in a cell in the West 135th Street Station.

Patrolman Eugene Zerfas of the West 135th Street Station was having as many problems as he could look after at 3 o'clock guiding homegoing school children across Seventh Avenue at 134th Street, when his attention was distracted by the sounds of a chase a few blocks south of him.

Through the heavily falling snow he could barely see a crowd of men, women and children shouting, slipping and sliding in the slush, in pursuit of a dark, darting object.

He moved to the middle of the avenue and looked more closely. The crowd drew near, a fat black hog in their lead.

Patrolman Zerfas, who once played football, tackled the darting animal, but his hands could not grasp its slippery sides. The hog looked at him nonchalantly and started back south. The patrolman, undiscouraged, tackled again, with no more success, but to the hog's evident enjoyment. To the hog it seemed a fine holiday frolic.

Realizing the futility of such methods, Patrolman Zerfas had an onlooker fetch a rope, looped it and lassoed the hog. Then he requisitioned a cart standing near by and with the help of some of the laughing crowd forced the animal inside. Then it was taken to the station house and secured in a cell.

Toward night, after efforts to find a claimant for the hog had failed, George Sheppard of 107 West 133d Street came to the station to express his willingness to give it a home. Sheppard said that although he did not own the animal he had been one of the first to see it, and if the police cared to turn it over to him he would give everybody in his block a choice bit of pork.

The police declined the offer and turned the animal over to the S. P. C. A., under whose care it was receiving last night all the consideration due a possible victim of amnesia. Meantime the search goes on for an owner.

LINER RESCUES CREW OF 27 ON FREIGHTER

drowned when, as last man leaving his ship, he fell between the side of the hull and the boat. I can only but praise the behavior of my crew. At 11 A. M. proceeded to New York.

GRAALFS.

The first radio dispatch from Captain Graalfs announcing that the Westphalia had gone to the aid of the Dutch freighter Alkaid was received by the Hamburg-American Line on Sunday afternoon and read:

Having been asked for assistance by the Dutch steamer Alkaid, am standing by. Position 47.05 north latitude and longitude 45.36 west.

This was reckoned to be about half way between Sable Island and Cape Race, N. F. The second message from the Westphalia was received early yesterday and read:

Crew of the Alkaid want to be taken aboard our steamer. Waiting for morning and fairly good weather.

GRAALFS.

Captain Carl Graalfs is 52 years old and has been in the employ of the Hamburg-American Line for thirty years. His first command was in 1904, and he took over the Westphalia from Captain Conrad Luck in August, 1925.

The Westphalia was built in 1923 at Kiel for the Hamburg and New York passenger service and is a twin screw turbine oil burner of 11,600 tons. She left Hamburg on Jan. 20, via Queenstown with 284 passengers and is due to dock at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street late on Thursday or early Friday morning.

LINE SCORNS MONEY FOR ANTINOE RESCUE

Official Says President Roosevelt's Owners Will Make No Claim of Any Kind.

BRITAIN TO HONOR FRIED

Government Will Confer Medal and King May Grant a Financial Reward.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Nothing is further from the thoughts of the officials of the United States Lines than to talk of a claim of any kind in connection with the President Roosevelt's rescue of the Antinoe's crew. The Westminster Gazette has been informed by one of the officials.

"Let us not intrude talk of money matters in relation to so fine an epic of heroism," he said. "What our men did, they did willingly, and would do again. We do not care whether the expense was £1,000 or £5,000. Please leave it at that."

This statement is brought out by the fact that the question is being asked what financial compensation will be made to the American vessel for loss of time, boats, &c., and what tangible appreciation will be shown to the men who so willingly and gallantly endangered their lives to aid their British comrades of the sea.

Precedent of Titanic Cited.

Also it is asked what will be done for the families of the two brave men who never returned from their rescue work.

The Star recalls that when Captain Rostron of the Carpathia in April, 1912, rushed full speed through the ice fields and brought 705 Titanic survivors to New York, the rescued, including Mrs. J. J. Astor, subscribed $10,000 as a thank offering and the American Congress summoned Rostron to the Senate and publicly thanked him. The orator told him that "in the great area under way wherein you did your duty a new Sir Philip Sidney has been born to enrich the annals of the race."

The Star trusts that "we on this side may not trail behind in emphatic public appreciation of this gallant piece of seamanship."

Discussing the financial side of the President Roosevelt's deed, an underwriter at Lloyd's today explained how these international maritime matters are settled.

"Although the President Roosevelt was unable to save the British tramp steamer," he said, "a substantial sum will be paid to her owners for the magnificent work done in saving the crew. This will be paid by the owners of the Antinoe, although, of course, they are covered by insurance.

"I do not know the basis on which the Antinoe was insured, but payment to the owners of the American ship will, I imagine, run into some thousands of pounds. The amount that will be paid for saving the crew and cover the loss sustained in doing this will be arrived at by mutual agreement between the two owners. This always has been the custom in these matters.

"The American captain will most certainly receive some personal memento of the occasion and so also will those who led the rescue work. In the case of the widows of the two men who lost their lives you can take it that some arrangement will be made to assist them. The owners or crew of the vessels which rescues distressed comrades are not allowed to suffer because of any loss that may occur to them when engaged in such work."

Tose Once Rescued American Crew.

It is recalled that Captain Tose of the Antinoe himself played a leading part in saving the lives of a crew of an American ship. During a storm in January, 1913, when in command of the steamer Syndic, he sighted the Philadelphia bark Carrie Winslow showing signals of distress.

Tose stood by thirty-five hours and boat after boat was lowered, but smashed against the ship's side. Eventually at great risk the crew and captain's young wife were saved.

A new wireless service for ships was opened by the British Postoffice in the early hours of Sunday morning. Messages will be transmitted from London through this station at Rugby, which has greatly extended the radius of postoffice wireless activity. It is believed the service will give communication with ships at any point on the high seas, however remote.

British Medal for Fried.

LONDON, Feb. 1 (AP).—The British Government decided today to award a medal to Captain George Fried of the American liner President Roosevelt for the rescue of the crew of the British steamer Antinoe.

The Board of Trade is considering a suitable award to be recommended to King George for recognition of the services of the American captain. The King is expected to make a grant this week, which will be presented to Captain Fried when his ship reaches Southampton on the return voyage to New York.

The representative of the Board of Trade who interviewed the Antinoe's rescued crew and passengers on the President Roosevelt is understood to have turned in to the Board of Trade a report lauding the extraordinary humanity and courage of Captain Fried and his crew. On the basis of this report officials of the board probably will ask the King to award Captain Fried the Gallantry Medal, which is the highest award given to members of the Royal navy for conspicuous valor at sea.

Awards in ordinary cases of rescue at sea are made by the Board of Trade without reference to the King and consist usually of a minor medal or silver plate.

ROOSEVELT HONOR LIST.

Details Concerning Members of the Crews of Rescuing Boats.

The following is a list of members of the three boat crews of the President Roosevelt who took part in the rescue of the Antinoe's men, particulars concerning whom have not hitherto been published:

First Boat.

BAUER, JOHANNES, 23, able seaman, American citizen; no address or kin given.

Second Boat.

WALL, ALFRED, 34, deck storekeeper, born in Russia, American citizen; no address or kin given.

DIAZ, CHARLES, 30, fireman, born in Porto Rico; no address or kin given.

ARANEDA, GUSTAV, 24, fireman, born in Porto Rico; brother, Simon Araneda, 307 West 111th Street, New York City.

ALBERT, ADOLPH, 31, fireman, born in California; no address or kin given.

HAHN, JOHN, 22, fireman, born in New Jersey; mother, Mrs. Helen Hahn, Hopatcong, N. J.

ROBERTS, FRANK, 33, fireman, born in Delaware; no address or kin given.

Third Boat.

SLOANE, THOMAS, 28, third officer, born in Ireland, American citizen; wife, Elvira, Iselin, N. J.

BEERS, WILSON C., 27, deck yeoman, born in Connecticut; mother, Mrs. Emma Beers, 126 Walnut Street, Waterbury, Conn.

WILKE, OTTO, 28, oiler, born in New Jersey; mother, Mrs. Pauline Wilke, 767 Golden Lane, Secaucus, N. J.

RIEDEL, HERMAN, 29, able seaman, born in Germany, American citizen; brother, George Riedel, 51 Cremona Street, Seattle, Wash.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received further contributions to a fund for the families of the two seamen of the President Roosevelt who lost their lives in an attempt to rescue the crew of the Antinoe. The Seamen's Church Institute, 25 South Street, of which Frank T. Warburton is treasurer, has taken charge of the fund which was started a few days ago with $501. A check for $50 was received yesterday from W. Harris Roome of 800 West End Avenue for the families of Heitman and Witanen.

"The maintenance of civilization," Mr. Roome wrote, "depends on the performance of duty and when one's life is willingly given in the discharge of duty the highest point of human development has been reached."

Checks of $5 were received from the following:

Reed, Latham G. 116 East Ninety-fifth Street.

"R. B." Astoria, L. I.

Frique, A. H. Newark, N. J.

In all THE NEW YORK TIMES has received $566, which has been turned over to Mr. Warburton.

EX-MEXICAN REBEL FEARS TORRE'S FATE

Gen. Coss, Awaiting Decision on Deportation in Texas, Says He Also Faces Execution.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 1.—General Francisco Coss, a leader in the De la Huerta revolutionary forces, is under bond here awaiting a decision in a deportation hearing, and he declared tonight that his case probably was a parallel to that of General Manuel Dimetrio Torres, who was deported from San Antonio to Mexico, where he was executed.

Local immigration officials said that the records of the Coss hearing, held here last Monday afternoon, had been forwarded to Washington for action.

Commenting on the Torres affair, about which his information came from newspaper accounts, General Coss said:

"Enemies of former De la Huerta leaders in this country are attempting to make false charges in order to have us deported. When one of us crosses the border he will find the Calles officers waiting for him and he will be placed under arrest. Our enemies figure that we will not have much chance to escape a firing squad, and we will not.

"In my own case, I have been guilty of no violation of law. I am here expecting to make my home. I have invested money here and am actively engaged in business.

General Torres said that he arrived in this country in the latter part of August, 1924, crossing at Feben, where there was no immigration station. He went to El Paso and took out a passport on Sept. 5, 1924, which he renewed on March 24, 1925.

Offering as evidence his passport as a receipt for the immigrant head tax, he continued:

"I was told I needed no consular vise for the passport and that I could remain here as long as I desired, if I intended to make this country my home."

General Coss said he would contest deportation to any country, because he wished to remain here. If he were deported to Mexico, he was satisfied it would be equivalent to a death sentence.

Refugees Protest to Coolidge.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 1 (AP).—Six Mexican political refugees have telegraphed to President Coolidge declaring that the recent deportation of General Manuel Demetrio Torres, alias Chapparreras, who was executed at Torrion, Mexico, Jan. 10, violated "the elemental principles of international rights."

Signers of the protest were Jorge Prieto Laurens, one-time President of the Mexican Congress; Reinaldo Esparza Martinez, former Secretary of the Congress; Antonio Hernandez Ferrero; Lorenzo Nisto, former Mexican Minister to Cuba; Miguel Flores Villar and Manuel Davalos Aragon.

Immigration officials today renewed their statements that the deportation of General Torres was regular in every particular.

Alejandro P. Carrillo, Mexican General Consul here, declared that General Torres was a bandit and not a political refugee. He made public a telegram from Aaron Caenz, Mexican Secretary of Foreign Affairs, which read:

"Chapparreras had pending prosecutions in the courts here for assaults on trains. Captured and found guilty, he was executed."

Señor Martinez tonight charged Department of Justice agents with confiscating the private correspondence of Mexican refugees and allowing it to be examined by a representative of the Calles Government.

He told The Associated Press that on Dec. 16 an operative entered his home under authority of a search warrant and took all his letters and documents, giving him a receipt for them. Some of the letters were from his father, Reinaldo Martinez, in Guadalajara, State of Jalisco.

70 YEARS ON ONE JOB, NOT READY TO RETIRE

Five More Years and He Will Go Back to Erin, Says Foreman Honored by Gas Company.

John O'Connell made his first and only public speech last night. The occasion for it was the dinner given to him by the Consolidated Gas Company, for which he has worked seventy years. He is now 87, and is still doing active work as the foreman of the plant at Twenty-first Street and Avenue A.

Surrounded by prominent officials of the company and members of its Quarter Century Club, John O'Connell rose to his feet and stood silent a moment, as if it were hard to know where to begin. The ruddy color mounted to his cheeks at the reception of his coworkers. With the brogue of his birthplace, County Cork, ringing in his voice, he said that he was unable to express his gratitude to those who came to honor him, declared that he expected to continue for five years more in active work, and sat down precipitately.

Mr. O'Connell came to this country when he was 13 years old. He began work for the gas company in 1856 and has lived at 338 Avenue A, within a stone's throw of the works, since he began to work there. He starts his day at 8 in the morning and is always ready for emergency duty. He has never taken a vacation, since he does not believe in them. Every morning he goes to mass at 6:30 at the Epiphany Church on Second Avenue. He has not been below Fourteenth Street in thirty years, and made his first and last trip in the subway three years ago, when he attended a funeral in Harlem.

TWO YOUTHS TAKEN IN BROOKLYN HOLDUP

SAFE ROBBERS GET $1,600

Despite the success of the police in the preceding two days in apprehending more than twenty men in connection with hold-ups and burglaries, a fresh outbreak of robberies occurred yesterday. In one hold-up in Brooklyn Aaron Chodoron, proprietor of a leather goods establishment at 514 Bushwick Avenue, fought off two armed youths, after one of them had torn a $450 diamond ring from his finger and the other had struck him several blows on the head with his pistol. The alarm raised by the merchant brought two patrolmen, who captured a suspect, after firing several shots at him.

Chodoron was alone in his store shortly after noon when the robbers entered with pistols drawn and ordered him to put up his hands. They backed him against the wall and as one of them took the diamond ring Chodoron grappled with him. He was felled by several blows on the head, and as the pair started to flee, alarmed at the shouts of their victim, Chodoron crept to the door and attracted the attention of Patrolman Edward Korbell of the Wilson Avenue station.

Policemen Fire at Robbers.

Korbell fired two shots at the robbers and attracted the attention of Patrolman William Haverly of the same station. Haverly also began to shoot at the fugitives.

One of them escaped in a near-by building, but the patrolmen overtook Harry Blunstein, 19 years old, of 552 Madison Street, Manhattan. At the station, the police said, Blunstein admitted participation in the hold-up.

Two detectives took him to the corner of Monroe and Clinton Streets, Manhattan, where, the detectives said, he pointed out Harry Salpover, 16 years old, who said he lived in Mount Vernon, as his accomplice. The police said that both prisoners admitted having recently been released from Hampton Farms, a correctional institution to which they had been committed for jostling persons on subway trains for the purpose of picking pockets. The diamond ring which Blunstein was alleged to have admitted that he took from Chadoran was lost in the snow in the chase.

Thieves Miss $200 in Safe.

Two other youths escaped with $29 earlier in the day after they held up an employe in the store of the Father and Son Shoe Corporation at 2,809 Third Avenue. They were frightened and overlooked $200 in a safe on which stood the cash register which they emptied.

When employes entered the office of the National Biscuit Company's warehouse at 5,602 Eighteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, at 7 o'clock in the morning, they discovered that during the night safe robbers had ripped open a large safe there and stolen $1,600.

As one of four gunmen was arraigned in the Fifth Avenue Court in Brooklyn yesterday in connection with the pistol battle with two detectives and a patrolman at Fourth Avenue and Eleventh Street last Saturday afternoon, it became known that Commissioner McLaughlin had promoted Patrolman Chrisopher Hodge of the Fifth Avenue station to Third Grade Detective for the part he played in the capture of three of the men.

Hodge shot two of the men who are still in a hospital, one in a serious condition. Another escaped, but the fourth, Frank Constantino of 1,889 Amsterdam Avenue, Manhattan, was held in $60,000 bail by Magistrate Golden on charges of felonious assault and violating the Sullivan law. He will be arraigned for a hearing on Feb. 8. Hodge and Detectives John Fox and Frank Blank, who participated in the battle, appeared as complainants against Constantino.

Commissioner McLaughlin said later at Police Headquarters that the promotion of Patrolman Hodge was in line with his intention to reward every detective or patrolman who displays unusual bravery in the arrest of hold-up men.

GENERAL ELECTRIC BONUS.

30,813 Men Receive a Total of $1,367,000.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Feb. 1 (AP).—Bonuses totaling $1,367,400 were paid today by the General Electric Company to 30,813 employes who have been with the company five years or more. This sum represents 5 per cent. of the employes' earnings during the six months ended Dec. 31.

Daily Style Hint For Well-Dressed New Yorkers

NEW YORK, February 2—In adjusting his cravat a man, as the high-brows would say, is between Scylla and Charybdis. If he draws the knot too tightly, the scarf pulls out of shape. If he leaves the knot loose, it won't fit snugly and sprucely into the collar opening.

To overcome these faults a new sort of cravat has been designed. It is the English type made without a lining and, thus, it is not prone to stretch and rumple.

The excellence of this innovation need not be dwelt upon to The Well-Cravatted New Yorker. Exclusive, but not expensive.

LIBERALS AGAIN ELECT LLOYD GEORGE LEADER

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Lloyd George was re-elected tonight Chairman of the Liberal Parliamentary Party of the House of Commons by 17 votes to 7.

The vote, however, does not tell the whole story. Six members present did not vote, including, besides the ex-Premier himself, Sir John Simon and Walter Runciman, two of the chief personal followers of Lord Oxford and Asquith; and twelve members abstained from the meeting altogether, including Ian Macpherson, former Chief Secretary for Ireland and Minister of Pensions in the Coalition Government; Lieut. Commander Kenworthy, Captain "Freddy" Guest, Minister of Air in the Coalition Government, and Colonel John Ward, a Liberal-Labor man.

The most prominent supporters of Lloyd George were Commander Hilton Young, who reformed the finances of Poland, and H. A. L. Fisher, a former Minister of Education, who is soon to retire from politics to attend to his duties as Warden of New College, Oxford.

Active opposition to the ex-Premier came from the radical group, their leader, Captain Wedgewood Benn, attacking him on the ground that his past record must prove a source of weakness and because he is particularly suspected on account of being responsible for a breach in free trade principles in his attitude toward the Safeguarding of Industries act.

Lloyd George replied justifying what he had done about safeguarding the industries on the plea that the act was intended to be a temporary war measure, and making a strong appeal for unity. Dissensions, he argued, were not among the Liberal electors in the country, but solely in a very small body of men centring around the House of Commons.

A few other speeches ended in what is termed in an official communiqué a "full and good tempered discussion." But it is notable that the radical group of the Liberal party met before the meeting and decided to maintain its own organization during the session, and other Liberals who are thinking of forming another independent group had a preliminary gathering.

One more Liberal leader in the Provinces, C. F. Entwhistle, who was formerly an M. P. for South Hull, announced his conversion to Conservatism.

The London Times, discussing the re-election of Lloyd George, says tonight:

"No doubt they have taken the only possible course in re-electing Lloyd George as their parliamentary leader, for there is no alternative choice; it is nature not votes that makes leaders.

"It is certain that no other member of the present Liberal Party could rival Lloyd George in his power, even in these days of the commanding attention of the House of Commons."

Big business today, facing the necessity of economical distribution—is turning its eyes to the Norfolk-Portsmouth area of Virginia.

From this rapidly growing industrial area finished products can be shipped to any part of the country at low freight costs. Eight railway systems—linked together by a jointly owned belt line within the city limits—stretch out into every section of the United States. Direct, short hauls to the great consuming markets cut down the cost and time of distribution. By sea, to the Pacific Coast through the Panama Canal, freight shipments are handled at lower cost than from middle western cities.

This saving of distribution costs has already attracted many leading industries to Norfolk, yet the city is only at the threshold of its future greatness.

BERLIN FEME TRIAL IS HELD IN SECRET

Court Rules That Public Hearing Would Endanger Safety of the State.

LIBERAL PRESS PROTESTS

Fullest Light is Demanded on Black Reichswehr Murder Organization —One of 11 Accused Freed.

By LINCOLN EYRE.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 1.—Apparently with the tacit approval, if not at the direct behest of the German Government, the first of the trials of the Black Reichswehr Feme murderers which began here this morning is being held in secret.

At the end of the first day's deliberations the Court released Lieutenant von Senden, organizer of the Black Reichswehr regiment in which the three soldier murderers served. It was this regiment which both Defense Minister Gessler and Commander-in-Chief von Seeckt vigorously denied reviewing at the time when the existence of the illegal organization became more or less public and when it was first charged that it was affiliated with the National Reichswehr. Lack of evidence is given as the reason for Senden's being freed.

The reason given for the court's decision to hold the trial in secret, given immediately after the opening of the trials, is that a public hearing would "endanger the safety of the State."

The Presiding Judge's statement contradicts a semi-official declaration on the subject issued on the Government's behalf on Saturday. This pronouncement plainly indicated that Chancellor Luther, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Defense Minister Gessler, after careful consideration of the question, had reached the conclusion that publicity need not be avoided. It was hinted, however, that the Foreign Minister hoped the trial would be conducted in such a manner as not to hurt Germany's position abroad.

Foreign Minister Assailed.

On the basis of this discreet information, the Socialist Vorwaerts this evening strongly condemns Dr. Stresemann as the instigator of a policy which "hides truth about the Black Reichswehr and its murderous tools from the German people" and makes the "secrets of the Feme murderers the secrets of the German Republic."

The case which came to trial this morning concerns the first of eighteen political murders attributed to the Black Reichswehr, Germany's "secret army," to come before the German court. Eleven defendants were charged with having killed, or helped to kill, a youth named Pannior, who was a soldier in the illegal military force, stationed at Doebritz three years ago.

Pannior's death was decreed by the Feme, the clandestine tribunal of the Black Reichswehr's vengeance, because he was suspected of having betrayed the organization to the Communists. On orders from their commanders, ex-imperial German officers, of whom there are three among the eleven prisoners, three enlisted men took Pannior into the woods near Doebritz, beat in his skull with a hatchet and threw his body into a grave already dug. The crime was committed on June 19, 1923, but the body was unearthed only last September. The trio of slayers subsequently confessed and implicated three officers and five other Black Reichswehr soldiers in the murder.

The accused, most of whom were dull-looking youths, marched into court this morning with the traditionally stiff bearing of Prussian soldiers, the eight privates and non-commissioned officers giving their three erstwhile commanders the military salute before sitting down beside them.

The presiding Judge immediately inquired whether there was any objection to the trial being held in public. The Prussian Attorney General and one of the lawyers for the defense replied in the negative, the latter adding, "No sensations could be produced since the details of the case have been fully revealed in the Prussian Diet and the newspapers." Another of the defendants' counsel, however, demanded a secret session on the grounds of "consideration of the Reich's foreign relations and for the status of the Defense Minister." After a scant ten minutes of private discussion the Court granted this request and the chamber was cleared of newspaper reporters and the curious crowd on the public benches.

Thus the trials are being carried on in camera for fear of the effect on public opinion abroad. But since the German Government, and the Defense Minister in particular, have declared that no connection exists between the Feme outrages and officials of the German Republic it is hard to see why such fear should exist.

Charges Feme Was Protected.

German officialdom entirely overlooks the suspicion that inevitably will be aroused in foreign countries by its attempt to envelop these political assassinations in secrecy. As the Vorwaerts points out, "the considerations of foreign policy which weigh so strongly on the German court constitute no exoneration but rather an accusation of present-day Germany." The Vorwaerts charges that the "murder organization stood for years under the protection of certain Federal authorities" and protests against the shielding of the murderers from the light of publicity.

The Democratic Berliner Tageblatt takes a similar attitude, deprecating the decision, which conveys the impression that Germany has "suspicious things to conceal."

It is recalled that the trial of the Mecklenburg Feme assassins, who, however, were not affiliated with the Black Reichswehr, was conducted secretly at Schwerin last Fall and that nevertheless details of the proceedings soon became known. What the governmental authorities seem to overlook is that numerous charges associating the regular German army with the Black Reichswehr have been made in Parliament and the press without eliciting any explanation from Defense Minister Gessler, General von Seeckt or any other Reichswehr spokesmen.

In the Pannior case the victim fled from his persecutors to Berlin, was there arrested and turned over by the police to the Berlin Reichswehr command, which allegedly restored him to the custody of the Feme agents, by whom he soon after was slain. It has also been publicly affirmed that Lieutenant Schulz, now in jail under charges of having been the head of the Black Reichswehr's whole murder machine, had an office in one of the Defense Ministry's buildings in Berlin and was in intimate contact with the regular staff officers there. Moreover, there has never been any explanation of how the so-called labor detachment, under which classification the Black Reichswehr sought to conceal its sinister identity, came to be billeted alongside the regular Reichswehr troops in the military establishments at Doebritz, Spandau and Kuestrin. Nor has the question whence came the funds for arming, uniforming and equipping the Black Reichswehr ever been answered.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The Maharajah of Indore must submit to a commission of inquiry appointed by the Government of India as to his complicity in the attempted abduction of Mumtas Begum, the dancing girl, and the murder of Abdul Bawla, the young Bombay merchant, who was accompanying her at the time.

The point at issue is: Was the attempt planned by a court sycophant anxious to curry favor with the Maharajah, or was the Maharajah himself the instigator of the outrage?

The commission of inquiry will consist of two High Court Judges, two ruling Princes and an experienced political officer. Its powers will be governed by the Montagu-Chelmsford report on India, which provides the procedure to be followed when the question arises of depriving a ruling Prince either temporarily or permanently of his powers.

There are in India no less than 693 ruling Princes, of whom 300 are of importance; and the Maharajah of Indore is the greatest of these, with 1,100,000 people under his sway. Within his own dominions he is autocratic, but he must maintain a certain standard of good government or he will get into trouble with the Indian Government.

The policy of that Government has always been to work in cooperation with the ruling Princes, and for this reason two of their representatives are on the commission of inquiry. The Government would, however, enforce its own view of the matter in the last resort, whatever the ruling Princes did, though it would do everything possible to secure their approval of its verdict.

MAGYAR FINANCES CONTINUE TO GAIN

ECONOMIC SITUATION EASED

Unfavorable Trade Balance Reduced by Two-thirds as New Commercial Treaties Are Made.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Feb. 1.—General improvement in the budgetary, financial and economic situation in Hungary was revealed by Jeremiah Smith, Commissioner General of the League of Nations, in his report for December, released for publication tomorrow.

The report also sums up the developments of the first semester of the present fiscal year, begun in June, affording in all respects a favorable comparison with the same period of the previous year.

The monthly average of receipts from revenues pledged to the League loan show an increase of 17 per cent. over the previous period, most of this, however, occurring in the first quarter, receipts for the second quarter being practically the same.

Mr. Smith concludes that these monthly receipts may be considered now stabilized at approximately 350,000,000 gold crowns ($70,000,000) and does not expect them in the future to show a steady increase.

Direct Tax Yield Increases.

The total revenue, including the pledged, for December is 10 per cent. greater than in the previous December. This is entirely due to unpledged receipts, all of which during the first five months of this fiscal year exceeded the budgetary estimates. Smith notes with satisfaction that direct taxes for the first time have now exceeded estimates and approach the figures estimated in the reconstruction plan, showing tendency toward a better proportion to the yield of indirect taxes and toward improved methods of collection.

Despite the fact that the "turnover" tax, one of the chief sources of revenue, is reduced by one-third, the rent tax by one-half, the gross revenues for the first semester are 17 per cent. higher than estimated, while expenditure is 10,000,000 crowns less than the budget allowed, making the actual surplus 57,000,000 instead of the estimated 1,000,000.

While considering this an extremely satisfactory indication of progress toward re-establishing budgetary equilibrium, Smith adds:

"It would be imprudent, however, to base a too optimistic conclusion on these figures and exceedingly dangerous to increase expenditures on the strength of these results."

He points out that the existence of a surplus obliges Hungary, under a previous agreement, to resume payments of $3,000,000 next semester to the British clearing office, which are not included in theb udget; but, nevertheless, it has been decided to use the opportunity to abolish the rent tax, reduce the sugar tax, affording the middle class urbanites their first measure of relief.

A deficit of nearly 6,000,000 gold crowns, which the provisional budget for January estimates, is due to special expenses and will be met from surplus.

Gold Cover 56½ Per Cent.

Finally, the national banks and metal reserves have continued their gradual rise, ending the year with a cover proportion amounting to 56½ per cent.—"a very satisfactory level." The note circulation is stabilized at approximately 5,000,000,000,000 paper crowns.

The bank rate remained at 7 per cent. A certain stiffening, however, of short term rates was due partly to banks calling in money for balance sheets.

"The strength of the credit situation thus put to test is not discouraging, although some weak points are revealed in the grain market, and again lenders in general are still extremely cautious in extending credits."

The commercially unfavorable trade balance was reduced by two-thirds during 1925, both exports and imports increasing, making the total volume of trade 15 per cent. greater, due partly to an abundant harvest. Commercial treaties involving tariff reductions have become effective with Poland, Greece, Italy, and others with Spain and France have been negotiated but not yet ratified.

Savings deposits nearly quintupled during the year. Available figures show 27,000 unemployed against 38,000 last December. The retail price index shows a very slight decrease, making it the lowest since the reconstruction law was passed.

Greater stability in future is expected from two reforms—adoption of a new currency unit, the "pengö," based on a gold value of 17 cents, and a law requiring all commercial companies immediately to prepare a gold balance sheet, revaluing assets and liabilities in terms of the pengö.

Alexander on Reserve Bank Council.

James S. Alexander, Chairman of the National Bank of Commerce, was appointed a member of the Federal Advisory Council to represent the New York Federal Reserve district at the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, it was announced yesterday. Mr. Alexander served as a director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in 1920, 1921 and 1922. Mr. Alexander succeeds Paul M. Warburg, who has served on the council for five years, during the last two of which he was President.

Hercules Powder Co. Earnings.

The Hercules Powder Company reports gross receipts of $23,669,009 in 1925, against $20,662,602 in 1924, and net earnings of $2,909,369, as against $2,156,901, after all expenses and reserves for depreciation and taxes. The profit-and-loss surplus on Dec. 31 was $9,739,490, against $8,594,659 at the end of 1924.

Veiled Allusions to Albertist Plot Made in Diary of Colonel Jankovitch Made Public.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Feb. 1.—The publication today of the voluminous official bill of indictment against twenty-six men, twenty-one of whom have been arrested for complicity in the counterfeiting plot, has aroused public excitement to fever heat, as it brings out new facts which are immediately preceding political devalopments.

The Opposition, which is meeting tonight to consider action, is especially indignant because Gabriel Baross, Director of the Savings Banks, is not arrested though directly accused of complicity in the official indictment. The indictment also confirms the existence of the famous letter from Premier Bethlen showing that he knew of the existence of the counterfeiting nearly a month before any arrests were made. While it shows he took some steps to investigate and prevent the carrying out of the plot, these steps do not appear to have been nearly as energetic as the gravity of the crime demanded—a fact which is likely to weaken Count Bethlen's position now enormously.

Premier Goes on Hunting Trip.

The Premier left Budapest yesterday on a hunting trip in the country and is still absent. It is significant of the seriousness and uncertainty of the situation, for Count Bethlen invariably manages to absent himself or be away whenever events reach a critical point in Budapest, the reason apparently being that this gives him time to see which way the wind is blowing and act accordingly.

While the Fascisti were so quiet today as to occasion public attention, much comment is caused by a cryptic statement by the Fascist leader, Deputy Eckhardt—a relation of Regent Horthy—"All Hungarians must prepare to be behind the Government if a fight breaks out with Czechoslovakia."

General surprise is caused by the strength of the official indictment against the military Bishop Zadravecz and also by the fact that though he was removed from his post on Jan. 14 the press was not allowed to report this until today.

Jankovitch Diary Revelations.

In addition to these revelations parts of Colonel Jankovitch's diary are published, which hitherto have not appeared, bringing out new names not included in the indictment. The most important features of this document are veiled allusions to an Albertist movement, strengthening the suspicions that for "public purposes" the counterfeiters were to make Archduke Albert King.

The entry on Dec. 4 mentions "discussion of an Albertist movement" by the plotters on Dec. 9, referring to a certain man whose name is illegible. Jankovitch says: "He won't be a minister, as he is not an Albertist."

He further alludes to Prince Windisch-Graetz, inditing a Fascist Albertist leader, Deputy Gombos, at a dinner, and adding the following note: "Very important."

The diary also brings in two Germans, Willy Roeder, with whom Jankovitch says he talked, and Emil Freistadt, whom he described as waiting for him with Kovach, Windisch-Graetz's arrested butler, at Copenhagen—where Jankovitch was then going to distribute bogus notes. While the intentions of these men are unknown their nationality is interesting, as it has long been suspected that the German Fascisti and Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria have been working hand and glove with the Albertists in Hungary.

"Went to a concert at the home of Kohanovsiky which was preceded by a division in envelopes of foreign moneys—francs and dollars."

"Stefanitch [hitherto not mentioned] goes either to Serbia or the United States."

An official who brings Jankovitch his false diplomatic passport "says very clever things—also on the question of murder."

"Every one [distributing money] receives in advance four or five million crowns [$70].

"Zadravecz takes my oath Wednesday."

"Debated with Ludwig [Prince Windisch-Graetz] wherein he favored using Polish and Viennese Jews instead of the gentry to distribute notes."

"The Prince has great plans for Vienna and Eastern Galicia."

The bill of indictment impresses foreign observers as rather wishywashy, which is natural, no doubt, in view of the importance of the political issues, both national and international, it involves. It is noteworthy for its omissions. It says the prisoners defend their action "on patriotic grounds," but that this "cannot excuse crime" and can only be urged perhaps in favor of attenuating punishment.

It carefully avoids mentioning precisely what these patriotic reasons were—whether to regain the lost provinces, injure French finances or finance an Albertist Putsch or something else.

Moreover, it fails to say what has become of the false plates—it does not even mention them—nor does it say exactly where the machinery and note paper were procured and does not account for 6,000 false 1,000 franc notes.

Prince Cited as Chief Plotter.

Despite its omissions the document is such as has been rarely seen. It says the scheme originated with Prince Windisch-Graetz in 1923, who resolved with several friends—not named—to falsify money. He began then getting from Cologne, from Vienna and probably from other cities the necessary material and machinery and got Gerue to do the actual counterfeiting in the Government Cartographical Institute last Summer.

The precise number of bills falsified is unknown, Gerue saying 25,000,000, Widisch-Graetz 29,000,000 and Zadravecz 34,000,000. One gentleman forger offers this delightful explanation of the discrepancy: "Why of course we kept no books."

Prince Windisch-Graetz is accused of being the starter as well as the originator of the plot, financing it it and gaining accomplices. While the prosecutor rather doubts the Prince's patriotic motives in view of his straitened finances, he points out that Windisch-Graetz showed that half his debts, the total of which amounts to $300,000, were incurred in order to finance the counterfeiting. The Prince admitted intending to recover first of all this initial outlay from the proceeds of the bogus money.

Former Chief of Police Nadossy is charged with being on the inside of the plot with Windisch-Graetz almost from the start, aiding the conspirator both morally and materially, "nothing being done without his knowledge and approval."

He is also accused of supplying the distributers of the money with six forged Rumanian passports and one diplomatic passport, as well as foreign visas. Finally the day Kovach informed him the three counterfeiters had been arrested, he got Baross, Director of the Postal Savings Banks, to provide 400,000,000 crowns and 150,000 francs, which Colonel Jankovitch—one of those the Dutch arrested—deposited with a private bank.

He also sent a man to Vienna to telegraph distributers in Milan and Amsterdam that the game was up.

Role Ascribed to Bishop.

Bishop Zadravecz is accused of giving the conspirators the oath, keeping false notes in his house and even helping to assort and count them.

The role of Baross is cloudier, as he seems to have contradicted himself in his various hearings. According to one story, he knew of the counterfeiting only when Nadossy asked for the above loan. Previously, however, he admitted participating much earlier, but saying that through a third party he had denounced his confederates to Premier Bethlen. In November he said the false notes were deposited at the headquarters of the Tesz, the Fascist Federation.

Premier Bethlen, the indictment says, then going to Geneva, wrote Baron Perenyi, President of the Tesz, asking him to investigate, so that he (Bethlen) would not be disturbed by the affair, adding that the Government would be forced to prosecute energetically any such plot. Perenyi communicated the contents of the letter to Szoertsey, Vice President of the Tesz, who swore that no false notes were in his office, which denial Perenyi reported to Bethlen at Geneva.

Premier Bethlen, however, wrote from Geneva to Baron Prenay to go to Nadossy and demand that he investigate the present plot by any means, if true. Nadossy agreed, but did not follow the order. On the contrary, Szoertsey had previously informed Nadossy that the plot had been denounced, Bethlen also informing Windisch-Graetz and Baross—not knowing that Baross was the denouncer.

It was then decided to remove the notes from the offices of the Tesz and 10,000 of them were deposited in Baross's apartments and a similar number in Szoertsey's house. What has become of 6,000 of the latter is not known, as Szoertsey refuses to say.

Baross later, to the police, confessed participating in the meetings of the counterfeiters and helping to distribute th notes, so the prosecutor concludes that the indictment against him as a direct accomplice must be maintained.

Institute Directors Accused.

General Halts, Director of the Cartographical Institute, and Dr. Kurs, ex-Director, are both accused of directly allowing Gerue to use the institute as a mint for the false money.

When the notes were completed in September, they were taken first to Zadravecz's house, until his religious duties called him to Rome. Then they were hidden in the apartments of Windisch-Graetz in the Tesz offices, where they were counted and assorted. The best 6,000 were given for distribution in Amsterdam, The Hague, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Warsaw and Milan, to Jankovitch, Marsovsky, Louchvary, Andor and Sewers.

admitting Germany to the full right of discussion and decision so long as she has not applied for admission into the League of Nations and has not acquitted all her disarmament obligations under the Treaty of Versailles.

But they are, in reality, neither more nor less than caused by the unpreparedness of everybody for even a preliminary discussion on such an important and vast subject, which might lead to failure to arrive at the adoption of any clear policy.

Whether the postponement will bring any greater measure of accord and so reduce the risks of failure is a matter for no very great optimism; for it is unquestionable that the conception of disarmament, which has grown up as a result of the study of the question, is beyond the scope of an easy settlement.

Want War "Potentials" Controlled.

Thus The Temps this evening is advancing a view largely held in France and says:

"If disarmament means simply a proportional reduction of military effectives of certain powers, then nothing useful nor durable can be accomplished for safeguarding the peace, and the situation which would result would be more dangerous from a general point of view than that created by the present status of armaments.

"It is a matter of common sense that disarmament cannot be realised until the security of all nations is practically organized and solidly guaranteed, and once that is obtained naval disarmament ought to be closely associated with land disarmament.

"Finally all resources, all financial, economic and industrial means, in a word all the potentials of war of each power, ought to be taken in consideration. Only then will it be possible to establish an order of things which will prevent any State disposing of means of war superior to those in control of the League of Nations, should a case arise in which the powers were called upon to act in case of non-provoked aggression."

Manpower Not All Important.

Such a definition of disarmament shows the necessity for most prudent care in entering into any discussion. Reduced to simple terms the French conception of the situation is simply that money and power and the quick industrial reduction of war material are far more important than the number of men under arms or the extent of a military establishment.

Such a conception finds its basis in the United States, which is easily the foremost in the Frenchman's mind of a country potentially the most powerful in war, with England second, Germany third and France only fourth on the list.

Practically only the major European countries, whose disarmament could be effected by a reduction in the number of soldiers, would be Italy and Spain, which have not the potential power of equipment of these others.

France herself is preparing for reorganization of her army in a smaller number of divisions and for one year of conscript service. At the same time France, with the Lorraine mineral fields and a great industrial development, is admittedly much stronger potentially for war than she was in 1914.

Kellogg Accepts Postponement.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Secretary Kellogg today instructed Hugh S. Gibson, Minister at Berne, to inform Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the League of Nations, that the United States Government would raise no objection to the proposed postponement of the armament conference.

Action was taken following receipt of this cable from Sir Eric:

"Members of the Council, France, Italy, Japan, Czechoslovakia, Uruguay, ask postponement of the meeting of preparatory disarmament commission to a date to be fixed by the Council in March, but in any case not later than May 15.

"Have requested the other members of the Council to give prompt opinion. Shall not fail to inform you of decision taken. Will be glad to forward to the President of the Council any proposals you wish to submit."

LONDON IS SURPRISED.

Suggestion Is Made That the Nationalists Bested Briand.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Postponement by the League of Nations of the preliminary disarmament conference was received here with surprise and regret.

With France, Italy, Czechoslovakia and Uruguay in favor of the postponement the movement against the February meeting was evidently greater than the British Government had supposed. It knew there was opposition to the meeting, but it was hoped it proceeded rather from individuals or circles than from Governments and that it could be overcome.

In League circles it is suggested that the preoccupation of Briand in the domestic crisis may have had a good deal to do with it. There has been noticeable since December a stiffening of the French attitude on international matters such as the size of the French armies in the Rhineland and the appointment of a High Commissioner at Dantsic, which, it is urged, shows that the Nationalistic officials of the Quay d'Orsay still are animated by the sentiments of Poincaré and have seized the opportunity of Briand's preoccupations to guide French policy away from his liberal ideas.

Moreover, France, it is believed, has been strongly opposed to a separation of the disarmament problem into military and naval sections and delegating the latter to a conference at Washington. Britain would have undoubtedly acquiesced in that idea if it had been suggested by the United States; and with the two greatest naval powers agreeing it would almost certainly have been carried out.

British and French Far Apart.

But France sees the disarmament problem as a whole. She believes it impossible to divide the problem into industrial, military, naval and air compartments and considers if she were asked to reduce her army, as is almost certain, she might fairly retort by calling attention to the big British fleet.

Then there is the great divergence of views between Britain and France on the scope of the whole conference. The complicated questionnaire issued by Geneva shows how wide in the French view the inquiry must be. It states the potential military strength each nation may draw from its industrial equipment and the advantages of its geographical position.

The British opinion is that such an investigation would lose itself in a multitude of insoluble problems and that practical results can only be reached by confining its attention to much more strictly military questions.

France may therefore hope that, if the few months' delay can be used in quiet diplomatic exchanges to bring the British and French viewpoints closer together, time will actually have been saved by postponing the formal meeting.

Then there is the question of Russia. That dominates the whole hope of effecting any kind of disarmament. The issue raised by the Soviet as to the safety of its delegates in Switzerland may be regarded as of more diplomatic than practical importance. It is a question that could be settled with good will on both sides, if they wished it, but it may conveniently have been raised to put difficulties in the way of approaching the real problems, which neither side is quite ready to discuss.

The Real Russian Problem.

The actual problem is what is the real size and function of the Red armies. Border States, such as Rumania and Poland, profess to regard them with great alarm. The Soviet replies they are only large enough to maintain Russia's position in face of a hostile Europe. The border States have already adduced them as reasons for escaping the decisions of the League.

At a conference last year on international trade in armaments it was laid down that all States should publish the quantity of arms it was importing. But the border States say to the League, "that is unfair to us. We have a dangerous Eastern enemy. Why it is even unfair for the nation from whom we are purchasing arms for our defense to publish in its list of exports the fact it has sold us any."

With such an attitude, assumed by countries far more important with regard to the disarmament problem than in any other way, there has been a feeling at Geneva that an amicable arrangement with Russia on the preliminary meeting on disarmament had very little chance of success. In fact, the more the question was studied the clearer it appeared how extraordinarily complicated it is and how very little hope there is for real progress until the European mess has been further cleaned up.

Greater Success Now Hoped For.

Anyway, it suggested that the preliminary conference, if it had been held on Feb. 18, was almost certain to be adjourned. Merely to draft a questionnaire took two weeks' hard work on the part of the League's committee. Every word was fought over and every sentence analyzed for possible implications, and if it was so difficult to decide on the simple outlines of a possible agreement, how much more difficult would it be to come to any decision.

Consequently, it is hoped that if the conference is only postponed for a couple of months, as is understood here, a great deal of useful clarification of ideas may ensue from an interchange of views between the different States.

In this connection the British Government issued today a formal dementi of a curious rumor.

This was published in certain newspapers here this morning and, according to the Foreign Office, has not a vestige of truth in it. The official denial runs:

"The story that Great Britain had intimated to Poland she would be unable to support Poland's application for a permanent seat on the Council of the League of Nations, if Poland persisted in reducing her military establishment, was emphatically denied by the Foreign Office today.

"It was pointed out that such a suggestion from Great Britain would constitute a reversal of the policy which she is following in regard to armaments.

"Since the close of the war the British Government, as it has had more than once the occasion of showing in recent months, remains, as it always has been, wholeheartedly in favor of any effective scheme of disarmament."

HOUSE REPUBLICANS PLEDGE ECONOMY

Appropriations to Be About $100,000,000 Less Than the Budget, Tilson Tells Coolidge.

TO IGNORE "PORK BARREL"

Congress Would Be Absurd to Cut Taxes and Then Increase Expenses, Leader Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1.—Representative Tilson, Republican leader of the House, told President Coolidge today that a policy of strict economy would be followed by the Administration forces and that appropriations provided for would be about $100,000,000 less than the recommendations made in the Federal budget.

Proposals of an emergency nature, he said, might later add somewhat to the appropriations, but Mr. Tilson came to an agreement with the President that all so-called "pork barrel" proposals would be ignored. There have been suggestions by some members of the House that requests of this kind would be made, calling for expenditures of more than $400,000,000.

"Congress would place itself in an absurd position if it were to cut taxes on the one hand, and on the other increase expenditures to such an extent that there would be a deficit in the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year, thus nullifying the good work already accomplished," Representative Tilson said after talking with the President.

Says Bills Would Block Tax Cut.

"I think the majority members of the House on the Republican side are in favor of making our legislative program conform as far as possible to the financial policy to which it has already committed itself in the revenue bill which was passed before Christmas. There are a great many legislative proposals now pending before the House which have for their purpose great increases in expenditures, many of which cannot be made without interfering with the program of tax reduction.

"Congress cannot, of course, increase expenditures without at the same time increasing income, and the House has already indicated the limit it desires to set upon revenue by the terms of the revenue bill.

"This bill carries large reductions in taxes which are recommended by the executive branch of the Government, based upon the presumption that current expenditures in the Government will not be substantially increased over the present level, and for the balance of the session of Congress and for a long time to come this limitation must be kept in mind not only by members of Congress but by the public."

Reorganization Bill Assured.

Representative Snell, Republican Chairman of the Rules Committee, also assured the President today that the House would pass a reorganization bill. This legislation is to have right of way, he said, after the appropriation measures were considered.

Representative Lehlbach of New Jersey, who also called at the White House, reported that there was a good chance of the retirement law being liberalized, and of the abolishment of the Classification Board.

As against the plans for economy, President Coolidge received from Senator Shortridge of California a request today that he should support a measure carrying an appropriation of $1,000,000 to be used in the prevention of fires in California. Another request was for an additional $10,000,000 for development of waterways.

BILL ASKS $7,574,491 FOR THE COAST GUARD

First Deficiency Appropriation Measure Reported to House Totals $381,233,726.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—An appropriation of $7,574,491 for the Coast Guard for additional vessels and men to combat rum-runners was recommended in the first deficiency appropriation bill reported to the House today by the Appropriations Committee. The bill totals $381,233,726.

Of the Coast Guard item, $3,900,000 is for the acquisition of vessels, $1,642,207 for their maintenance, operation and repair, and $1,932,283 for additional personnel and maintenance expenses. Of the $3,900,000 for vessels $800,000 would be used for the reconditioning and equipment of five 1,000-ton destroyers to be transferred from the navy, $3,180,000 for the acquisition of thirty-five 125-foot offshore patrol boats and $150,000 for five seaplanes.

These additional appropriations, the committee said, are due "to the increased and onerous duties placed upon the service in connection with the prevention of the smuggling of liquor and combatting the activities of the 'rum runner.'"

CHICAGO, Feb. 1 (AP).—A writ of supersedeas to stay the mandate of imprisonment for Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former Director of the Veterans' Bureau, and John W. Thompson, a St. Louis contractor, was granted by the Circuit Court of Appeals today, provided the defendants place their case before the United States Supreme Court within five days.

They were convicted of conspiracy to defraud the Government in the letting of hospital contracts, and were sentenced to two years each in prison and fined $10,000 each.

Today was the last the defense counsel had for petitioning for a stay.

RADICALS THREATEN TAX BILL HOLD-UP

Norris and Couzens Object to Morning Sessions to Hasten Revision Measure.

SENATE MAY SIT AT NIGHT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Attempts by Finance Committee members to speed passage of the tax reduction bill were defeated temporarily late today by Senators Norris of Nebraska and Couzens of Michigan, opponents of important features of the Administration program.

When Senator Smoot, the committee Chairman, and Senator Summons, ranking Democrat, pleaded that the Senate begin work at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning instead of at noon, Senator Couzens said he must decline to have "anything slipped over," and Senator Norris declared he would not permit the bill to be hurried along without full consideration, and implied that a filibuster would be started if "steam-roller" tactics were tried.

This refusal to cooperate for rapid progress was in fact an open declaration of the attitude they had taken privately earlier in the day, when approached by Administration leaders. Both had then replied that they would not let the bill be voted upon "without full consideration."

Because Senators Norris and Couzens objected, Senator Smoot failed to carry his point, and the Senate will meet as usual tomorrow at noon. But Mr. Smoot said he would keep the Senate in session until six o'clock, and would follow that course each day if he could not obtain agreement for 11 o'clock sessions. He added that night sessions would be resorted to if dilatory tactics were continued by the insurgents.

Leaders Still Confident.

In spite of the attitude of Senators Norris and Couzens, Administration leaders believe the bill can be disposed of by Congress in time to reach the President by March 1. Senator Smoot's hope of a Senate vote by Feb. 10, however, may not be realized, as Senator Norris indicated today he would not permit this. Some leaders predict that the vote will come about Feb. 20.

In objecting to an 11 o'clock meeting Senator Couzens explained that the Special Committee, of which he is Chairman, would meet tomorrow and he could not be in the Senate Chamber until noon. When he added his fear that "something might be slipped over" Senator Smoot angrily disclaimed any such intention.

Mr. Couzens said he meant no insinuation, but that, even with the best of faith on the leaders' part, something "might be slipped over."

Senator Norris said he had to attend a meeting of the Agricultural Committee tomorrow morning.

"I don't intend to delay this bill, but if you undertake now to start the steam-roller you will not make any headway," Senator Norris declared. "There are some of us who know how to keep a quorum here, and we may be forced to do this.

"The bill has been here only four days, and already you are trying to put the screws on. It's not justice, and it's not fair.

"If you are going to pass this bill in a few days it is going to be 'slipped over,' as Senator Couzens says. You may have the best of intentions, but it will be slipped over just the same. You are not going to make any headway by trying to use force.

"You say you want to pass this bill by Feb. 10. I won't delay it a moment, but I will insist on fair deliberation on certain items of it. If it is not passed by Feb. 10, then it won't be. You ought not to expect such an important bill to be passed by Feb. 10."

Insurgents to "Fight All the Way."

The suggestions made to the insurgents earlier in the day through intermediaries were that they concentrate their attacks against the bill to a few speeches and not conduct a guerrilla warfare against each item as it came up. The insurgents replied that they proposed to fight all the way without cessation.

Except for a speech by Senator King of Utah explaining his opposition to the bill no progress was made in consideration of the measure today. It had been hoped that the important question of surtaxes would be taken up, but when the section was reached Senator King proceeded with his speech, which was a reiteration of the views he expressed in his independent report on the Finance Committee bill.

Senator King was interrupted frequently, once by a dispute between Senators Smoot and McKellar, concerning the amount of refunds made by the Treasury to taxpayers.

Senator Smoot quoted the total receipts of the Government for nine years as $30,000,000,000, the additional assessments as $2,886,773,000 and the refunds as $854,000,000, but Senator McKellar insisted that to the latter sum should be added an item now before the Appropriations Committee of $150,000,000 for refunds since Sept. 30, 1925.

Quotes from Couzen Report.

Reading from the Couzens report, Senator Norris repeated an allegation that stockholders of Mellon banks in Pittsburgh saved $91,000 in taxes through being permitted to file a consolidated return instead of separate statements. The Couzens report stated that when the investigator demurred to his superior against a consolidated return in this instance, the superior held up his finger, and said: "Sh!—sign on the dotted line." The Couzens report stated that the investigator did sign on the dotted line and was made a division chief.

"Thousands of cases like this are decided in secrecy," said Mr. Norris. "This ought to be enough for us to open the doors and let the sunlight of publicity in."

Senator Norris suggested the introduction of a resolution extending the life of the Couzens Committee. Senator Couzens, who objects to consolidated returns, offered amendments affecting them.

OFFERS ROAD PLAN OF $3,000,000,000

Holaday of Illinois Proposes Federal System Divided Into 64 Routs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A bill calling for the construction, maintenance and regulation of a nation-wide system of hard-surfaced post roads, under which sixty-four routes would be mapped out, one extending from New York City to the Pacific Coast, and others radiating from Eastern cities, was introduced in the House today by Representative William P. Holaday of Illinois, the successor of Joseph G. Cannon.

He advocates an issue of $3,000,000,000 in Federal bonds to build 85,000 miles. Specifications would be entrusted to a commission to be composed of the Secretaries of Commerce, Agriculture and War and the Postmaster General, construction to be directed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

A tax of not less than $10 a year on motor vehicles operated for hire, and not less than $3 a year on all other motor vehicles operated over the roads, together with a tax of not less than one-half a cent a gallon on all gas or other fuel used by such vehicles, would be levied for the payment of interest and principal.

The proposed routes fro mthe East follow:

Route No. 3.—Beginning at New York City and running to the Oregon-California State line, passing through Cleveland, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Cheyenne, to Oregon and California.

Route No. 4.—Beginning at Barnegat City, N. J., and running to the West Coast near Westport, Cal., passing through Philadelphia, Columbus, Indianapolis, Ind.; Springfield, St. Joseph, Denver.

Route No. 8.—Beginning near Eastport, Me., and following the general direction of the East Coast line to Homestead through Bangor, Portland, Portsmouth, Boston, Providence, Newport, New Haven, New York City, Trenton, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Norfolk, Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Jacksonville, and Miami.

Route No. 9.—Beginning on Lake Ontario near Cape Vincent, N. Y., and running to Washington through Syracuse and Harrisburg.

Route No. 30.—Beginning at New York City and running to Buffalo.

Route No. 31.—Beginning at New York City and running to Columbus, through Harrisburg and Pittsburgh.

Route No. 35.—Beginning at Boston and running into Buffalo, through Albany.

"Transportation is one of our vital roblems," said Mr. Holaday. "Freight rates on farm products are burdensome, and freight facilities grossly inadequate during the marketing season. With hard-surfaced roads available motor transportation over short distances will replace railway transportation, and short haul railway transportation facilities will become available for long distance hauling. A nation-wide system of hard-surfaced roads is a vital factor in our plans for national defense."

ALUMINUM INQUIRY DEMANDED BY WALSH

its evidence except on permission of the Aluminum Company. It declares that Dunn, in his reports, made notes that were not of assistance, he having been unable to tell the name of a "prominent manufacturer" interviewed in one instance, and so designated in his books.

His report, in brief, according to Senator Walsh, was "to the effect that the users of aluminum had no complaints to make and that no evidence had been collected warranting a belief that the decree had been violated."

Meanwhile, on a complaint from a user of aluminum that preceded the Dunn report, an investigation was begun by the Federal Trade Commission after the party was "unable to get action" by the Department of Justice. The field inquiry was conducted by I. W. Digges, of the legal staff of the commission, and upon his report a formal complaint was issued against the company.

Refers to Sargent's Position.

The Walsh report says that in September Colonel W. E. Donovan, assistant to the Attorney General, requested A. V. Davis, the President of the Aluminum Company, to visit the Department of Justice, and the latter agreed to permit an examination of books and records, which was started in November.

"This tells the story of the investigation conducted by the department," continued the report, "except that the Attorney General, being examined before your committee, stated that he had never heard of the report of the Federal Trade Commission to which reference has been made, or of any investigation by his department induced by it, until some five, six or eight months after taking office, when he was interrogated about it by a group of newspaper men.

"The date of the occasion was fixed as Oct. 15, 1925. He had then no knowledge of the letter of his predecessor of Jan. 30, 1925, to the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and had never seen it until within the last thirty days (speaking as of Jan. 8, 1926).

"He was unaware that A. W. Mellon was in any wise interested in the Aluminum Company of America, with the character and operations of which he was without any information until he was interrogated as above set forth."

Criticizes "Delay" in the Case.

Senator Walsh criticized the "delay" alleged to have been permitted, saying:

"If the examination had been promptly entered upon following the letter of Attorney General Stone of Oct. 22, it is quite likely that it could and would have embraced all pertinent files including material supplied by the Aluminum Company itself, the long established policy of the commission to give the department free access to its files in such cases not having been reversed until Jan. 16, 1925, when a request was made in the matter of the Chicago Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, as heretofore stated.

"Let attention be directed to the letter of Jan. 30. It asserts that inasmuch as 'there does not appear to be much in your report touching the methods of the company since the year 1922,' the department proposes to bring the investigation down to date. Reference is made above to a part of the report showing apparent violation of the decree as late as August, 1925.

"But why bring the investigation down to date? Why not proceed if the evidence discloses violations as late as 1923? Why permit the statute to run against such by delaying for a year to see whether there have been more recent violations?

"The resolution under which the committee acts was introduced without opportunity for careful study, in the belief that prompt action was imperative and on the theory that the one-year statute of limitations against the proceedings for contempt, Section 25 of the Clayton act, is applicable.

Charges Immunity by Neglect.

"But a study of the whole act leads to the conclusion, in which the department shares, that it does not apply to such a degree as that against the Aluminum Company, and that the general statute of three years barring criminal proceedings is the applicable law.

"That being the case, why should the proceedings be deferred to bring the investigation down ot date, unless, indeed, there was a purpose to condone infractions dating from earlier than 1923 if they were not persisted in thereafter?

"This aspect of the case seems to have been completely ignored by the department. It is perfectly obvious that if the company had been pursuing a course of conduct violative of the decree down to 1923, but has desisted since that time, immunity has been granted by the delay with which the investigation has been conducted.

"Banham, to whom the conduct of the proceedings has been immediately committed, expressed himself as seeing no occasion for special expedition and seemed quite unable to understand that the statute was running daily against possible infractions. He apparently had no thought of the institution of any proceedings based upon acts or a course of conduct within the period of the statute, but not currently persisted in.

"Nor did he think it at all strange that the conduct of the case should be entrusted to him while he was for nine months so absorbed in another important litigation as to find himself unable to give to the matter in hand anything more than the most cursory attention.

As to Withholding of Evidence.

"Another feature of the letter of Jan. 30 deserves notice—namely, the absence of any reference to the likelihood of a refusal by the commission to permit an examination of material secured by it from the Aluminum Company.

"Consideration of the right or wrong, generally speaking, of the present policy of the commission as indicated by its refusal to allow the Department of Justice access to so much of its files as related to supposed infractions of the law by the Lumber Dealers' Association and the Aluminum Company, secured from them respectively, is avoided as a collateral issue. Its refusal in the aluminum case is senseless.

"It is charged under the law with the duty of inquiring into violations of decree in anti-trust cases. To what end? It is itself powerless. The law necessarily contemplated that any evidence secured by it in such a quest should be and would be turned over to the Department of Justice.

Cites Law on Commission's Duty.

"It seems likely from the testimony of Commissioner Van Fleet before the committee that the majority of the commission were entirely oblivious of the provisions of Section 6 (c) of the Trade Commission act, as follows:

"'Whenever a final decree has been entered against defendant corporation in any suit brought by the United States to prevent and restrain any violation of the anti-trust acts, to make investigation, upon its own initiative, of the manner in which the decree has been or is being carried out, and upon the application of the Attorney General, it shall be its duty to make such investigation. It shall transmit to the Attorney General a report embodying its finding and recommendations as a result of any such investigation, and the report shall be made public in the discretion of the commission.'

Sees Acquiescence by Department.

"The Department seems to have acquiesced in the limitation imposed by the commission on the inquiry of the former. No effort was made, as indicated, to get the consent of the Aluminum Company, either directly or through the commission.

"The company could scarcely have refused permission. A declination from it would subject it to embarrassing suspicion, a circumstance which would be perhaps not without weight when, in the month of October following, it was confronted with such a request from the department.

"The assistant to the Attorney General in charge of trust cases asserts that the department has no power to compel the commission to give it access to the files of the latter, but the Senate has:

"'Inasmuch as the evidence before the commission in the aluminum matter was completed pursuant to a resolution of the Senate, it can undoubtedly require the commission to transmit the evidence so accumulated upon which its report to the Senate was founded.

"It is not open to doubt that the Senate would have required the transmission to it of such evidence and the Attorney General requested it to take such action, in which event it would be available for such use as he cared to make of it.

Regarding Voluntary Evidence.

"Some attempt was made to excuse the failure on the part of the department to secure from it the important evidence thus withheld by the commission on the ground that immunity might be gained by its use under Section 9 of the Federal Trade Commission act, as follows:

"'No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing documentary evidence before the commission or in obedience to the subpoena of the commission on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to criminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture.

"'But no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he may testify, or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before the commission in obedience to a subpoena issued by it; provided, that no natural person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.'

"But obviously the law has no applicability to the case of evidence voluntarily furnished, which comprises all evidence the commission secured from the Aluminum Company and the very evidence to which the commission declined access.

The Sole Source of Information.

"The assistant to the Attorney General told on the stand that as to the charge of cancellation of orders it would be necessary to consult the books of the company; so also with the charge of refusal to promise shipments at a definite date, so as to delays in shipments as between seasons; so, too, as to dumping large quantities of metal and as to dumping after the customers had bought foreign metal; so as to discrimination in the price of sheet aluminum.

"On none of these could a final opinion be ventured from the Dunn report, on some of which it was silent, the sole source of information being the books and records of the company.

"It was in this situation that the department, through the assistant to the Attorney General, on Jan. 2, 1925, issued a statement, prepared by Lotz & Benham and carried by the press, to the effect that the department 'has sought through all available channels' to ascertain the facts touching the charge made by the Federal Trade Commission and by Attorney General Stone in a letter prepared, it will be recalled, by Lott, and that 'the facts thus far disclosed,' including such as were secured through interviews with officials of the Aluminum Company, 'do not support the oft-repeated charge that the decrees in question have been violated.'

"It was offered in excuse for the issuance of this statement, so damaging to the successful prosecution of a charge of contempt should the inquiry now still in progress lead to the conclusion that a violation had occurred, that it was put out because a metropolitan newspaper had advertised it would the next day begin an attack on the department because of its delay in the matter. The 'attack' having been launched, it was contended that it in any wise misrepresented the facts in relation to the subject.

Demands Data for Senate Inquiry.

"It is sufficient to say that no business organization could tolerate such procrastination on the part of its legal bureau as has characterized the action of the Department of Justice in the matter under inquiry, nor would it be regarded as exculpation on the part of the head of such bureau to say that he had entrusted the work to subordinates in whom he had confidence.

"It is not expected that the Attorney General will be conversant with the details of all litigation before his Department, and he may well be entirely ignorant of some matters having or calling for its attention, but it is not too much to expect that he will at least be informed concerning a charge by his predecessor and another branch of the Government, in effect, that a fellow member of the Cabinet, at least a corporation of which he is the dominant factor, has been guilty of contemptuous disregard of an injunction of a Federal Court.

"It has been deemed to be quite outside the scope of the resolution under which the Committee acted to inquire whether such a violation has actually occurred or not, that is to say, whether evidence is available to establish such a violation.

"In view, however, of the doubts aroused as to the vigor and good faith of the Department of Justice, it is recommended that the Senate be asked to instruct the committee to enter upon that inquiry and to that end that it direct the commission to transmit to the committee for its use any evidence in its possession relating to the subject of violations by the Aluminum Company of America of the decree against it entered in the District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania on June 7, 1912."

Sargent Upholds Trade Board.

Attorney General Sargent in his letter today cited the law under which the Federal Trade Commission withheld the permission to see its evidence, declaring that the Trade Commission act made it discretionary with the commission whether information in its possession shall be disclosed.

"The Federal Trade Commission, under its organic act, was intended by Congress to aid in the enforcement of certain provisions of the anti-trust laws," asserted Mr. Sargent, "and to supplement the work of the Department of Justice in the elaborate study and investigation which form a necessary step in every anti-trust proceeding.

"But it is clear that Congress never intended the commission to serve as a mere adjunct to the Department of Justice or to operate under the direct commands of the Attorney General.

"The commission was intended to form a coordinate administrative body and to enjoy an independent position similar to that of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Says He Has No Compulsion Power.

The Attorney General further declared it to be clear that he had no legal power to compel the commission to disclose evidence in its possession.

"Whatever might have been the result had Section 3 (g) of the Newlands bill been enacted in its original form," he continued, "it is clear that Section 6 (d) of the act, as it stands, confers upon the Attorney General no power to compel the commission to disclose evidence in its possession.

"Nor is that power conferred by Section 6 (c), or 6 (e), or by any other provision of the act. The investigation in this case was not conducted upon the application of the Attorney General under either Section 6 (c) or 6 (e).

"And even if it had been so conducted, the duty of the commission under Section 6 (c) would not have been altered. That section requires the commission to transmit to the Attorney General only 'a report embodying its findings and recommendations as a result of any such investigation.'

Declares Mandamus Useless.

"In sharp contrast to Section 3 (g) of the original Newlands bill, it does not require the commission to report 'the evidence in relation thereto.' Resort to a writ of mandamus would, in this case, be plainly useless. That writ lies only to compel an officer to act in accordance with some clear ministral duty imposed upon him. Nowhere in the act can there be found any clause which imposes such a duty upon the commission.

"If it be assumed that the commission is under a duty to transmit to the Attorney General, under Section 6 (c), 'a report embodying its findings and recommendations,' the fact remains that the commission has already transmitted such a report.

"The contents of the report are within the discretion of the commission, and mandamus could not be used to control the commission's discretion by compelling it to embody in its report any particular items of evidence.

"Nor would a subpoena be available to compel disclosure of the evidence withheld by the commission. A subpoena cannot be issued on behalf of the Attorney General except in a case already pending in court. No such case as yet exists.

Says Remedy Is Not in His Hands.

"The remedy for the situation, if it exists, is clearly not in the hands of the Attorney General.

"Where an investigation is carried on by the commission pursuant to the direction of the President or either House of Congress, Section 6 (D) of the act requires the commission to report 'the facts' relating to any alleged violations of law which it discovers.

"Section 6 (c) requires it to report to the Attorney General only 'its findings and recommendations' and does not require a disclosure of the facts or the evidence upon which those findings are based.

"The difference in phraseology between the two sections is so marked as to suggest that the Senate may have the power, by resolution, to compel the commission to transmit to it the evidence—i. e., 'the facts'—on which its report is based.

"Where, as here, an investigation has been made under the authority of Section 6 (d), it would seem that the proper body to require a disclosure of the facts is the body which originally ordered the investigation.

"It will be recognized, however, that the expression of a definite opinion on that question would be beyond the purview of Resolution 112.

"Upon these grounds therefore, I am of the opinion that the refusal of the commission to disclose the evidence in this case cannot, under existing law, be now remedied in any proceeding brought by the Attorney General."

A prominent business leader has asked us to find a man to share the direction and administration of his varied interests in America and abroad.

Wanted

Executive Associate—$25,000

This is an unusual opportunity. The man to fill this position probably now holds an important executive position. He must be a leader—a "big" man, liberal in views, progressive in temperament, with general business knowledge and experience and a particularly intelligent interest in the problems of distribution.

A man who knows one or two foreign languages might have an advantage; the post may require an occasional trip abroad and will certainly demand a knowledge of European conditions. Wide acquaintance with American business methods is very important. Tact and poise, ability to meet business men and to conduct delicate negotiations are required.

This position demands primarily administrative and executive ability, but the right man will be an organizer as well. A major part of his work will be the development of a chain store organization of a new type.

Salary $20,000—$25,000 first year; later increase assured through participation. Age 36—44. Headquarters in Boston.

In behalf of our client we invite applications by mail only, giving full particulars as to experience, ability and earnings.

SILKWORTH LOSES; CONVICTION STANDS

RULING COVERS 5 OTHERS

Found Guilty of Bucketing—Sixth Defendant Decided to Serve Term in Prison.

The conviction of William S. Silkworth, former President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, known internationally as a member of the Olympic trap shooting team, with five others, on Nov. 29, 1924, for fraudulent use of the mails in bucketing operations, was affirmed yesterday by the Circuit Court of Appeals. Federal Judge A. N. Hand had sentenced Silkworth to ninety days' imprisonment and fined him $1,000. It could not be learned last night if an appeal would be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Two others, Blaine J. Nicholas and Earl H. Truesdell, members of the defunct brokerage firm of Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdell, were each sentenced to prison for two years; Louis Gillough, who was floor manager of the firm, was sentenced to ninety days in prison and fined $500, and Francis X. Quillan and Edward A. McQuade, who were members of the bankrupt brokerage concern of McQuade Brothers & Quillan, were each sentenced to ninety days and fined $500. De Witt C. Raynor, another defendant, who was a partner with Nicholas & Truesdell, testified for the Government and got off with a sentence of ninety days. He was the only defendant who did not appeal.

Testimony brought out in the trial, which was conducted for the Government by Peter J. McCoy, disclosed that the firm of Raynor, Nicholas & Truesdell began business on Aug. 1, 1920, with a capital of $25,000. In less than two years, according to the testimony, the firm, by using marginal moneys deposited by customers, established thirty-two branch offices in various cities; that millions of dollars passed through its hands through thirty-odd bank accounts; that it carried on bucketing on a prodigious scale, and that toward the end of its career it owed its customers $3,750,000 more than it could pay.

Silkworth's connection, according to the testimony, was in affording protection on the Consolidated Exchange, of which he was President, to the bucketing operations of the firm. During the trial counsel for the defense stressed the fact that there was no Federal statute against bucketing, but Judge Hand ruled against the motion.

Alcohol Prices Reduced.

The United States Industrial Alcohol Company has reduced prices to a base price of 40 cents a gallon for C. D. No. 5,188 prodt, carload lots, in drums f. o. b. plants or competitive delivery points, with the usual differentials for less than car lots. Although the published price last Fall was 53¼ cents a gallon, the new price does not represent an actual cut of 13¼ cents, subsequent quotations having been materially lower than the published price.

Business Is Better, Says W.B.Storey.

Business conditions in the territory served by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway are better than at this time last year, said W. B. Storey, President of the road, yesterday upon his arrival here to attend the directors' monthly meeting today. "Wheat seems a little short," he added, "but it has a good start and appears to be well rooted."

DEMOCRATS PRESS COOPERATION PLAN

taxes on incomes between $24,000 and $100,000. Stressing this, Democratic Senators hold, will make business men realize that the Democratic Party is not bent on taxing them or their enterprises exorbitantly.

A drive for the repeal of those of the so-called nuisance taxes retained in the bill now before the Senate will be part of the Democratic tax legislation program.

The tariff is to be the main issue of the Democrats in this year's campaign for the control of the next Congress. Protection, it will be contended, is burdensome, and especially so to the farmer. An effort will be made to have the Democrats of Senate and House agree on a farm-aid bill, upon which the party will go to the country this year.

Thinks Prospects Are Good.

According to what some Democratic Senator said today, in discussing the program of political issues outlined at Senator Walsh's dinner, the party has every reason to feel encouraged over its prospects in the elections of 1926 and 1928. While none of them professed to know, they subscribed to the idea widely prevalent in political circles here that President Coolidge will be a candidate for a third-term nomination, and this opinion is partly responsible for the determination to make an intensive drive against the Administration in the Senatorial and Congressional campaign this year.

To questions heard frequently in Washington: "Is the President slipping?" "Is the Coolidge honeymoon over?" Democrats of the Senate and House gave affirmative answers today.

The Democratic view, as it was expressed, was that a revolt against the Republican Party was under way in the great corn belt of the West, where, it was said, successful revolts against the party had been initiated in the past. The organization of farmers in twelve Middle West and Northwest States arranged at the Des Moines conference last week to insist upon more advanced Federal farm aid legislation than the Administration is willing to sanction was pointed to as evidence that the Republican Party was in danger of being undermined in the sections where it has had its strongest hold upon the electorate.

Although it was conceded by some Democrats that President Coolidge enjoyed a large measure of the great personal popularity to which his triumph at the polls in 1924 was attributed, they asserted that signs of a reaction against his party were appearing and that the President was certain to share in the detrimental effect of this.

See Advantage in World Court.

The adoption of the World Court resolution was mentioned today as an advantage to the Democratic Party and an injury to the Republican Party. Some Southern Senators predicted that the Ku Klux Klan would disintegrate in the South on account of its opposition to the measure for American adherence to the World Court, the theory of this claim being that Southern Democrats affiliated with the Klan would turn against it for fighting what was considered a party principle sponsored by Woodrow Wilson.

MOVE TO MAKE KREMER DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMAN

McAdoo Supporters Grooming Montana Member—Smith Men in No Hurry.

J. Bruce Kremer of Montana is being groomed by members of the McAdoo group in the Democratic National Committee to succeed Clem L. Shaver of West Virginia as National Chairman. Democrats here learned yesterday, following a dinner to consider the condition of the party given in Washington Sunday night by Senator Walsh of Montana.

The report that Mr. Kremer was likely to be put forward by those who supported William G. McAdoo for the Democratic nomination for President at the 1924 National Convention received credence here because it confirmed information received some time ago by supporters of Governor Smith, whose friends hope to make him the Democratic standard bearer in 1928.

Mr. Kremer is the National Committeeman from Montana. He was formerly a Vice Chairman and before the 1924 national convention the most active Vice Chairman of the committee. He was deposed as Vice Chairman at the first meeting of the committee after the nomination of John W. Davis and the latter's selection of Mr. Shaver as National Chairman, and his displacement by Frank Hague of New Jersey caused great resentment among his friends.

Supporters of Governor Smith were said to have no candidate for National Chairman, in view of the refusal of Mr. Hague to run for that office except during a campaign. If Mr. Hague persisted in his refusal, it was said, Governor Smith's supporters might back Thomas J. Spellacy, who has succeeded Mr. Cummings as National Committeeman from Connecticut and who was Eastern campaign manager in the 1924 Davis campaign.

Members of the committee opposed to Mr. McAdoo were said to realize that Mr. Shaver's retirement before the beginning of the next Presidential campaign was inevitable, but to be in favor of postponing his retirement at this time likely to lead to a clash. Those favoring Mr. Shaver's early retirement, it was learned, have tried to make a point against him because of the financial condition of the National Committee and its inactivity and failure to give any help to the Senatorial and Congressional Committees.

The committee is said still to owe $243,000 for expenses of the 1924 campaign. Of this amount, $150,000 is said to be on three notes with a New York trust company. In addition, there is said to be owing $52,000 on bills for furniture, merchandise and telegraph tolls, and $35,000 on printing bills. The committee's debts on Jan. 1, 1925, were said to have been approximately $383,000, and $243,000 on Jan. 1, 1926.

Those favoring the continuation of Mr. Shaver, at least for the present, have contended in party discussions on the matter that Mr. Shaver had done very well to reduce the committee's deficit by $140,000 in a year. It was recalled that the Cox campaign of 1920 left the Democratic National Committee with a deficit of more than $400,000, and that a considerable part of this was not paid until just before the 1924 convention.

Local Democratic leaders were reported to feel that the argument that Mr. Shaver had permitted the Democratic National Committee to become almost entirely inactive, had much more weight than the argument that he had not done more to reduce the committee's debt.

COURT DECIDES FOR MELLON

Holds That Railroads Must Pay Overtime of Customs Officers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Railroad companies whose trains enter the United States from Canada before 8 o'clock in the morning and after 5 o'clock in the afternoon must pay the overtime wages of customs employes who inspect freight and baggage, according to a decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals today in an injunction suit against Secretary Mellon.

Secretary Mellon got around one injunction order when the lower court restrained him on a petition filed by the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad, holding that he could apply the overtime pay theory to ships and not to trains, under the tariff amendment of 1920.

The Secretary then charged the overtime pay to the railroad companies under the tariff act of 1922. The plaintiff railroad and ten other roads sought a second injunction. The Appellate Court ruled that the Tariff act of 1922 was not involved in the original proceeding.

It is probable the railroad companies will appeal.

drill." Such an instrument was found at the scene later. This drill appeared to be the thing needed, for the work then went forward with greater speed.

About this time Rafferty began to feel hungry. He advised the band of that fact. One of the men said that they had nothing, and Rafferty, who had politely thanked them for their consideration about the coal, informed them that his wife had made up some sandwiches for him when he went to work the night before. One of the robbers found them, loosed Rafferty's bonds and supplied him with the sandwiches.

At 4 A. M. the door of the vault yielded and the yeggs filled eleven mail pouches with the contents of the vault. Until a complete check-up is ended, some time tomorrow, the exact character of the loot is unknown. It was determined, however, that at least $50,000 of the haul was in postage stamps of all varieties, bundled in packages of 10,000 each.

The robbers before leaving warned Sullivan and Rafferty not to attempt to touch the explosives left behind. They told the two men that if they freed themselves to let the explosives alone.

"You wait until the police come along," they said. "They know how to handle this stuff. You might hurt yourselves."

Postmaster Burgess was informed at once and he notified Park D. Colvin, Chief Postoffice Inspector for the New England States. Colvin, over the wire from the Boston office, sent three inspectors to the scene at once to begin an investigation.

Later he came to Pawtucket himself and after going over the events of the crime expressed amazement. He said that it was the largest postoffice robbery ever staged in the New England States.

"The idea of a band of thieves breaking into a first-class postoffice," he said, "and taking everything they wanted and then getting away clear is surely something novel. There have been cases where isolated offices have been broken into, but the Pawtucket instance is quite extraordinary."

Checking up, Chief Inspector Colvin found that the postoffice had been virtually stripped of everything of value in the way of mail. In addition, the robbers had taken every stamp lying about, including those issued for Postal Savings accounts.

Colvin, in addition to ordering Inspectors Preslin, Pendleton and Anderson, regularly assigned to this territory, to concentrate on the trail of the robbers, wired for additional help tonight.

Inspector Reilly of Worcester and Inspector Sullivan of the Boston staff were ordered to report here at once. Chief Inspector Colvin sent full details of the robbery to Washington.

The usual rewards, amounting to $2,000, have been posted, but it is thought likely that a special reward will be offered for the arrest of the daring band.

In addition to the Federal inspectors, local and State police are working on the case.

UPHOLDS JAPANESE CONDUCT IN CHINA

Matsudiara Says His Country Has Tried to Keep Out of Dissensions There.

PLEADS FOR FRIENDLINESS

Ambassador Asserts Amity With America Stands on Solid Basis of Humanity.

A plea for greater sympathy toward Japan's conduct in China was voiced yesterday by the new Japanese Ambassador, T. Matsudaira, before business men, bankers and lawyers at a luncheon given in his honor in India House, Hanover Square, by the American Asiatic Association. Judge Elbert H. Gary, John D. Rockefeller Jr. and Otto H. Kahn were among those who attended.

Admitting that "Western people sometimes have difficulty in comprehending the relation that exists between Japan and her great neighbor, China," Ambassador Matsudaira said that when Japan sent an army into Kwantung last year it had consisted of only 3,500 men, and that it had to protect the lives and interests of almost 200,000 Japanese in the leased territory along the South Manchuria Railway. He said as soon as the disorder ended the troops were withdrawn.

While it was of greater interest to Japan than to any other nation to preserve peace and order in China, he said, Japan had consistently refrained from supporting any faction in Chinese dissensions.

After tributes to Mr. Matsudaira and to the late Admiral Viscount Kato by Lloyd C. Griscom, President of the association, a former American representative in Japan, the Ambassador was introduced by General James G. Harbord.

"If I have done anything to promote good relations between the United States and Japan, I have only followed the established policy of the Japanese Government and the earnest desire of the Japanese people," said the Ambassador.

"It has been said that business is the life of a nation. To this I would like to add the thought that business is a great instructor and a great maker of friends. The great commerce that crosses the Atlantic between England and the United States—the greatest in the world—is one of the safest links in the chain of friendship that holds the two great English-speaking nations together. In the same way the commerce between Japan and the United States—much the greatest in the Pacific—has been of notable benefit in making us know and understand one another.

The Ambassador cited the differences of language, history, customs and manners as making it not easy at all times for the West and the East to understand each other. "It is fortunately the case," he continued, "that underneath the differences there lies the broad, deep and solid foundation of a common humanity, sustaining the edifices of our different civilizations. It is happily the case that, ever since the opening of our country wise men in responsible positions in America and Japan have made the effort to cement and develop our friendship."

DIRECTORS TO PAY $425,000.

Stockholders' Action Against Board of Trumbull Steel Co. Is Settled.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 1 (AP).—Settlement of a stockholders' action against directors of the Trumbull Steel Company of Warren, Ohio, to which the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company was made a party defendant, was effected here late today with the sanction of Chief Justice Powell of Common Pleas Court.

Trumbull directors, according to the settlement, and the Cliffs company are to pay the Trumbull Steel Company $425,000. The Trumbull company is to reassign to its defendant directors and the Cliffs company dividend warrants of the Trumbull-Cliffs Furnace Company, a corporation jointly promoted by the Trumbull Steel and the Cliffs companies.

The action was an outgrowth of difficulties encountered by the Trumbull Steel Company which were blamed on discrepancies in the account of its former President, Jonathan Warner. Warner had made restitution in the approximate sum of $2,500,000, it was announced before Justice Powell.

Directors denied any responsibility for the troubles. Warner was not a defendant in the suit settled.

Police Chaplain Is Guest of 800 Friends at the Astor.

The Rev. Joseph A. McCaffrey, Catholic Chaplain of the Police Department, was the guest of more than 800 friends at a dinner in his honor at the Hotel Astor last night. G.; the Corrigan Council of the Knights of Columbus, of which he is also chaplain; members of St. Rose of Lima Church, where he was once pastor, and the Resurrection Church, which he now serves, all were represented.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin, referring to Father McCaffrey's success in raising money for church purposes, commented: "It is no difficult task to raise money in the Police Department. But I can't commend the judgment that was used in the last administration in spending it."

Other speakers included Martin Conboy, Eugene Kinkead, the Rev. Dr. J. R. Mahony, the Rev. John F. White and Father McCaffrey.

BOSTON ELEVATED PROFIT.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 1.—The Boston Elevated Railway shows a profit of $502,195 for 1925, according to the seventh annual report of the trustees made to the Legislature today. The total income was $34,547,379, the largest amount in the road's history and of this, $33,790,441 was passenger revenue. The number of passengers carried was 365,636,286. The road also shows a large increase in bus service.

The basic wage rate of 72½ cents per hour for surface motormen and conductors established by the 1924 Arbitration Board was continued unchanged by the Arbitration Board of 1925. The differential the past year, however, for the one-man car and bus operators was increased to 10 cents per hour above the basic rate.

GETS SOLE RIGHTS TO FILM MARINES

Metro-Goldwyn Signs Contract With Lejeune for Picture Starring Latter's Men.

LIMITS OTHER COMPANIES

Order That They May "Shoot" Only Ordinary Manoeuvres Brings Complaints.

The United States Marine Corps has plunged unreservedly into moving pictures, it was announced by the Metro-Goldwyn Picture Corporation yesterday. For a period of one year the company will have exclusive rights to make all feature pictures of the marines, it was said, under a contract just signed with Major Gen. John A. Lejeune, commander of the corps.

The negotiations were consummated after General Lejeune had seen a presentation of "The Big Parade," which brought him to the conclusion that a similar picture with members of the Marine Corps playing the stellar rôle would stimulate recruiting. The story to be filmed by the Metro-Goldwyn organization is now in the course of preparation and will probably bear the title "Tell It to the Marines." George Hill will be the director and Mary Brian is slated to take a prominent rôle.

News of the existence of the contract caused some complaint among other moving picture concerns which have heretofore easily obtained the cooperation of most branches of the Government, the activities of which have seldom been tied up by such a contract as the Metro-Goldwyn Company obtained. Although officials of the Fox Film Corporation who could be reached yesterday denied knowledge of a complaint reported to have been made by them to Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, it was said in one quarter that the Fox concern considered the contract an attempt to "take the wind" out of their forthcoming film production of "What Price Glory," in which marines are the principal figures.

The Fox Company said, however, that their production would not be interfered with. Raoul Walsh will leave for the West Coast within two weeks and will start "shooting" the picture immediately. At Mr. Hays's office, at 552 Fifth Avenue, no complaint had been received, it was said.

Metro-Goldwyn representatives insisted yesterday that General Lejeune was the one who had taken the initiative in the effort to convert the marines temporarily from fighting to acting. They said he had been impressed with the production of "The Midshipman," in which the Navy Department had cooperated with their company.

The terms of the contract were not made public but it is understood that the Marine Corps will not be paid. All expenses, however, will be borne by the moving picture company, while the marines will be put through special manoeuvres for it. There will be nothing to prevent the filming by rival concerns of ordinary actions of the marines, as, for instance, when they are on parades, but no special formations will be made for their benefit.

SKYSCRAPER TO RISE ON OLD 'TOWER' SITE

$3,000,000 FOR PROPERTY

Bought by Syndicate—The Tower Structure Was First With Steel Frame to Be Built in City.

Lower Broadway is to have another skyscraper, the second to be announced within a few days. The two projects involve an expenditure of about $18,000,000.

Last week it was announced that a forty-two-story building would be erected on the site of the old Astor House, Barclay Street and Broadway, and yesterday the Standard Arcade Building, at 44 to 50 Broadway, was sold as a site for a thirty-five-story building.

The property, which consists of a four-story building fronting 81.9 feet on Broadway and running through the block 170 feet to New Street, where it has a frontage of 79.9 feet, was sold by Joseph F. A. O'Donnell and Norman S. Riesenfeld, operators, to a syndicate composed of H. Craig Severance, Charles L. Fraser, F. C. Tanner and others.

Property Held at $3,000,000.

There are 13,500 square feet in the plot, and according to William A. White & Sons, the firm negotiating the sale, the property was held at $3,000,000.

O'Donnell & Riesenfeld purchased the property about five years ago from the Standard Oil Company of New York, which erected the present Arcade in 1915 from plans prepared by Severanace & Van Allen. All the leases were made by the Standard Oil Company of New York and expire May 1, 1928, when the building will be demolished and the new office building will be erected on the site from plans drawn by Mr. Severance.

This parcel of land is of particular interest to New Yorkers, as its southern portion was the site of the famous Tower Building, which was the first steel skeleton frame building to be erected in this city and has been called the "daddy of the skyscraper." It was erected in the early '80s from plans by B. L. Gilbert on a lot fronting twenty feet on both Broadway and New Street.

Although only seven stories high, it was much discussed by architects and builders, as it marked a radical change in construction methods.

Twin Towers Were Planned.

In 1907 the same architect who planned the Tower Building designed a thirty-story building with twin towers to occupy the site sold yesterday. This project was never consummated, as the property was sold to the Standard Oil Company and the present arcade structure erected.

Although final plans for the new structure have not been completed, it is understood the building will have banking quarters on the Broadway and New Street fronts and office suites on the upper floors. It will be built by Charles L. Fraser, who recently completed the Bar Association Building, in West Forty-fourth Street.

William A. White & Sons have arranged a twenty-year building and permanent mortgage loan to finance the project and will manage the new building.

EMPLOYES CONFESS PLOT TO ROB BANK

Pecora Will Seek Indictments for Two Who Admit Guilt, Teller and Depositor.

ALL FOUR IN $20,000 BAIL

Watchman at National Butchers' and Drovers', Who Revealed the Scheme, to Get Purse Today.

Acting District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora made known last night that William Hartman and Raymond Rappolt, two employes of the National Butchers' and Drovers' Bank, at 501 Seventh Avenue, had confessed to him during the afternoon their entire participation in a scheme to steal $47,000 from the bank last Friday night.

Mr. Pecora said he would ask the Grand Jury tomorrow or Thursday for indictments for grand larceny against the two employes mentioned, against Louis Hoerber, the paying teller of the bank, and against Robert Feinstein of the Gardenia Costume Company, 363 West Thirty-eighth Street, a depositor in the bank, who, it is alleged, induced the three employes to steal the money to cover up overdrafts which Hartman had made up by check. All four men are now held under $20,000 bail for examination on Thursday.

Mr. Pecora said that Hartman and Rappolt repeated to him in detail how $10,662 had been stolen and turned over to Feinstein at the bank on Friday. Hartman declared that $10,000 of the amount was in Federal Reserve bills and was turned over by Hoerber, paying teller, while he took the $662 in gold coin in a bag and handed it to Feinstein. Both of these sums, Mr. Pecora said, were found in Feinstein's possession at the time of his arrest.

John Peters, the bank watchman who gave the plan away, is to receive a purse today at the bank as a reward. It was intended to make the gift yesterday, but this was not done, as four of the twenty-nine directors were out of town and could not be reached. Each director is making a voluntary contribution.

NICE, Feb. 1.—Riviera society was provided tonight with a murder mystery with the finding of the body of Mme. Mathilde Delahaye, a wealthy French Winter resident of Nice, who is known to hundreds of visitors as a gay frequenter of smart hotels and dancing clubs.

Her throat had been cut with a razor, but she had been dead many hours when servants found her. Nothing had been stolen from her luxurious apartment, even her valuable jewels being untouched.

Four arrests have been made tonight, including a young Frenchman, 29 years old, who was a friend of Mme. Delahaye.

APPEALS TO EDITORS TO AID EDUCATION

Vanderbilt Chancellor Urges Bond Between Newspapers and Southern Schools.

ASKS RICH FOR ENDOWMENTS

Too Many Poor Schools, Ballard Declares—Editors Pledge Aid to Academic Advancement.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 1.—A concerted effort toward improving educational facilities in the South was begun this morning when leading Southern editors and publishers met at 10 o'clock in Alumni Memorial Hall as guests of Vanderbilt Universitq. The meeting was begun by C. A. Craig, after the guests from nine States had been entertained at breakfast at the Hermitage Hotel and were taken on an automobile tour of the city.

Victor H. Hanson, publisher of The Birmingham News, presided. The newspaper men attending were:

James B. Nevin, managing editor, Atlanta Georgian.

Marshall Ballard, editor, New Orleans Item.

Dr. Thomas W. Rainey, associate editor, Leader, Lexington, Ky.

John A. Park, publisher, Raleigh Times, Raleigh, N. C.

C. B. Gillespie, editorial staff, Chronicle, Houston, Texas.

James E. Chappell, Birmingham News.

Major E. B. Stahlman, publisher, and J. G. Stahlman, executive director, The Banner, Nashville.

Resolutions will be prepared and submitted at the meeting of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association at Asheville, N. C., in July.

The delegates visited the Hermitage this afternoon and were entertain d at dinner at the Belle Meade Club, followed by a smoker in Memorial Hall.

Other editors and publishers, unable to attend the meeting pledged their support to the effort to develop Southern university education. Outlining the purpose of the conference, sponsored by Vanderbilt University, Chancellor James H. Kirkland expressed the view that newspapers could be of immense help in giving impetus to the advancement of education.

"We may a: well recognize the fact that educational problems are a public interest. They are neither private nor personal. In a strict sense there are no private institutions, but all are public."

"After the war the South went through a process of hynotizing itself," Chancellor Kirkland said. "The system of education about which the South boasted was inferior. The South then faced the necessity of catching up, and in the last twenty-five years has begun to judge itself by higher standards.

"The practical problem which we are facing in this conference is whether educational institutions and the press can make themselves serviceable to each other," he said. "We have asked these distinguished representatives of the press to meet us and tell us how we may build our work, make it more useful, more vital, more valuable from the standpoint of news, and we are seeking this opportunity to tell you that our work is not a private affair; that an institution such as the one which has invited you here is a public institutions entitled to public support."

Lack of understanding between newspapers and educational institutions was deplored by J. B. Nevin of Atlanta.

The South does not need more universities, was the view of Marshall Ballard of New Orleans, but it has too many bad ones. The effort should be to get rich men to leave their money to institutions already established and cease trying to build up apologies for such institutions.

He recommended a system of publicity for colleges where all news would be cleared. There are things going on in colleges and universities at all times that are of intense interest to newspaper readers, he said

"Don't put so much money in rockpiles and plate glass and façades, but put more in personality. Emancipate the Faculties," he suggested. "Most universities don't pay their department heads more than a first-class salesman would get."

While observing that many Faculty members get all they are worth, he advocated improving the personnel to be worth more to the school.

It is in the universities that ignorance, smallness and provincialism are to be combatted, Mr. Ballard said. Regardless of the rather "inflated importance" of the newspapers, he said that he believed that the greater power rests within the universities themselves, the Faculties and the boards of trust.

J. A. Park of Raleigh, N. C., predicted that the outcome of the conference would be for the participants to go back home with a new conception of what educational institutions mean.

Opening Week of Lord & Taylor Centennial

"100 Years of Building for Tomorrow"

It is a common mistake to speak of successful people as people who have arrived. The only people who really arrive at their destination are the failures because they stop instead of going on. But successful people are always traveling. And it is so with institutions.

The slogan adopted for our Centennial is a slogan of tomorrows, not yesterdays. We are still building, still striving, still traveling. The edifice of this business is still in course of construction, built far towards completion, but still far from the goal.

Our Centennial is in no sense a Centennial of Self-Satisfaction, but rather a Centennial of Search for Greater Usefulness in Serving.

We celebrate three epochs: The Past for its Difficulties . . . The Present for its Responsibilities . . . The Future for its Hope of Both!

BEGIN CENTENNIAL OF LORD & TAYLOR

WORK OF DUNN, WAR ARTIST

Patrons Lend Quaint Articles Bought at Store for Exhibition—Many Congratulate the Company.

The twelve months' celebration of the centennial of the founding of Lord & Taylor, the only store in New York which has remained unchanged in name for a century, began yesterday with an unveiling of five mural paintings by Harvey Dunn, war artist of the A. E. F. in 1918. The murals, which occupy five windows on the Fifth Avenue side of the store, trace the growth of New York in the five periods corresponding to the five stages in the store's history, 1826, 1853, 1863, 1872 and 1914.

The artist has chosen for all the scenes a long-distance view from the New Jersey side and has studied the types of people of the period, accentuating the costumes and given in the background the changing skyline. Mr. Dunn was commissioned by Lord & Taylor to execute the work and the murals later will decorate the employes' recreation room on the eleventh floor.

Antique maps, designed by Professor Lucian Bernhard, are shown with the murals and give a more comprehensive idea of the plan of the streets for each period. The clothes, too, of each of these historic dates are shown—heirlooms of dresses, laces, shawls and bonnets—which revive the magic of merchandise which has outlived fashion. These pieces include items purchased at the old Lord & Taylor stores fifty to seventy-five years ago.

For several days old customers, aware of the coming centennial celebration, have brought in treasures that are pertinent to the occasion. One woman lent a handsome brocaded dress of the sixties. It was of heavy yellow brocades with small roses with a tight bodice and was draped with a bustle, fashionable at that time. A petticoat of soft dull green corded silk, trimmed with real lace, completed the costume. The owner said that it was purchased by a member of her family at the store when it was at Broadway and Grand Street, some time between 1860 and 1865.

Articles dating back a hundred years, embodying the stages between the business of yesterday and that of today, are on exhibition at the store, and all day messages of congratulation were received by Samuel W. Reyburn, President of the company. The Jewelry, Leather and Fancy Goods Salesmen's Association sent a delegation with a framed, embossed testimonial. Among those abroad who cabled good wishes were the American Chamber of Commerce in France; Gordon Selfridge of London, Carr, Kane & Sloan of London, Liberty & Co. of London and Paris, John Barker & Co., Ltd., of London and William Whiteley, Ltd., of London.

Others who sent messages were J. S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce; Albert H. Wiggin, President of the Chase National Bank; Percy H. Johnston, President of the Chemical National Bank; Strawbridge & Clothier of Philadelphia, J. L. Hudson & Co. of Detroit, L. Bamberger & Co. of Newark, L. S. Ayers & Co. of Indianapolis, John Shillito Company of Cincinnati, R. H. Macy & Co., Stern Brothers, B. Altman & Co., John J. Slater, Franklin Simon and Tiffany & Co.

With the centennial as inspiration, artists, decorators and designers have just closed a contest for a symbolic design to interpret "The Spirit of Modern Retailing as a Service." The contest was sponsored by the Art Directors' Club of the Art Centre and the jury of awards was headed by Robert W. De Forest. Nearly 500 artists competed for awards amounting to $3,000. The first prize of $1,000 was won by a war veteran, Herbert Roese of this city, whose symbol was a Greek figure watering a century plant from a vase. This and the other fourteen prize winners, whose awards ranged from $11 to $750, are on exhibit at the Art Centre.

PROF. OSBORN DEFENDS 'AGE OF MAN' EXHIBIT

Natural History Museum Head Makes Brief Reply to Attack by Cardinal O'Connell.

Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn, President of the American Museum of Natural History, replied briefly yesterday to Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, who had assailed the authenticity of the exhibits in the Hall of the Age of Man. Professor Osborn said that the evidence of the age and ancestry of man "still stands."

Cardinal O'Connell's attack was made on Saturday afternoon in an address before the League of Catholic Women at the Academy of Notre Dame in Boston. The prelate said that no evidence existed proving the Neanderthal man, or the "cave man."

He said that the exhibits in the Hall of the Age of Man "might be justly termed the grotesque gullibility of so-called scientists." He strove to show that the Piltdown man, for instance, was a hodge-podge of miscellaneous bones, originally strangers to each other.

Professor Osborn's reply was:

"When the character of George Washington was attacked President Coolidge pointed out of the White House window to the Washington monument. He said, 'the monument still stands.'

"The only reply that I have to make to the Cardinal is that the evidence assembled in the Hall of the Age of Man still stands."

COLLEGE RAISES $145,238.

Lutheran Institution on Staten Island Seeking $500,000.

Wagner Memorial Lutheran College on Staten Island, which is campaigning to raise $500,000 for an endowment fund, reported last night that $145,238 had been contributed in the Greater New York area, Buffalo and Connecticut, with one division in New Jersey failing to make a report.

Staten Island led the list of contributors with gifts of $35,762. Three divisions of Brooklyn gave $29,968. The Bronx gave $11,620, Manhattan $6,976, Long Island $6,434, two divisions of New Jersey $7,538, Orange and Nassau Counties $4,075, Westchester County $1,500, Buffalo $14,200 and Connecticut $22,100.

Between six and ten churches in each division are raising the funds and expect to have the $500,000 by Feb. 8.

while these organizations are being effected," and added that he thought the Federal Trade Commission had been "derelict" in performing its duties.

Stating that bills are pending to "abolish" the commission, Senator King continued:

"Some of us will pass those bills, not because we do not feel that there should be a Trade Commission properly functioning, nor because we feel there is not a broad field for an organization of that character, but because we believe the present Administration is wholly indifferent to the growth of corporations and trusts, and, indeed, is pursuing a policy that inevitably will lead to the consolidation of all important industries in the hands of a limited number of corporations.

"Indeed, the President of the United States, in his speech in New York, seemed to pronounce a benediction upon these organizations, these trade associations, that are doing so much to crush legitimate business and to destroy competition."

Norris Ridicules Welfare Program.

Senator Norris followed, saying:

"Just think, what a wonderful thing it would be—one man the only buyer of wheat in the United States and the same man being the only fellow who sold bread! That will eliminate overhead costs.

"And, besides, he proposes to establish hospitals for children and amusement parks, so that it would relieve municipalities and taxpayers from looking after the little folks as they grow up.

"One of the objects of that $2,000,000,000 corporation is to see that every child gets a square deal, and if we could have only one man buy all the farmers' products and the same man sell all the food that the people would consume, would not the Senator see what a heaven we would live in right away?

"What a wonderfully fine time we would have with all the children cared for and provided with playgrounds and hospitals, and we would pay for it out of bread. We would not need to pay any more taxes. We would be in heaven before we knew it.

"We would have one man running the whole thing. We could abolish a good share of the Government, because this man would have a monopoly of the purchase of food products, and likewise a monopoly of the sale of them."

Referring to hospitals and playgrounds being for philanthropic purposes, Senator Norris added: "There is no idea of making money involved in it."

Tendency to "Caesarism" Decried.

"And I am very much afraid," said Senator King, resuming his speech, "that some people will be caught by the Greeks when they come bearing gifts.

"Undoubtedly we are tending toward Caesarism in our industrial life, and a good many of the American people feel that we should have a Caesar in our political life. Whenever there is any controversy between the Congress and the Executive instinctively it would appear a majority of the people take sides with the Executive."

One of the LaGuardia resolutions calls on the Trade Commission to inform the House what action, if any, has been taken by it to ascertain whether the Ward Food Products Corporation is a monopoly, combination, agreement or operating in restraint of trade.

The other resolution directs the Department of Justice to inform the House whether it has initiated any proceedings to prevent a combination in the baking industry or taken steps to punish any persons instrumental in effecting such a monopoly or restraint of trade.

The Federal Trade Commission also was asked for a report detailing the course followed by it in compliance with the La Follette resolution passed by the Senate on Feb. 16, 1924.

"Frenzied Finance" Plot Charged.

Mr. Manly declared that if the "bread trust" investigation ordered by the La Follette resolution had been prosecuted vigorously and in good faith, "this outrageous conspiracy would have been checked in its inception," but that with it now at maturity, "it can be crushed only by the most drastic methods."

It was "up to the Senate," he added, to find out why its order of investigation had been ignored.

Picturing the merger as "frenzied finance," Mr. Manly continued:

"The sinister purposes of the conspiracy are indicated by the transparent camouflage of philanthropy with which it is cloaked. If it were an honest commercial enterprise there would be no reason for this maudlin pretense of charity. And it is nothing but pretense. Not one penny is pledged for any philanthropic purpose. Not a nickel is definitely set aside.

"American farmers will not fail to grasp the significance of this proposed food trust. When it is completed they will have only two buyers for their products—the Meat Packers Trust for their livestock and the Ward Food Trust for the rest of their products, including grain.

"Nor will American mothers sit complacently by and pay perpetual tribute to the 'Food King.'

"'Down with the Food Trust' will be the slogan in the next campaign if the Coolidge Administration does not move swiftly to crush this evil conspiracy."

WOMEN FIGHT 'BREAD TRUST.'

Baltimore Organizations Will Protest to Coolidge and Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 1.—Two organizations of women who have heretofore been active in fighting increase in the price of bread have declared war on the $2,000,000,000 bread corporation with a "soul" born in this city Saturday afternoon. They will carry their fight direct to President Coolidge.

The Housewives' League of Baltimore and the Baltimore Housewives' Alliance are leading in the battle upon William B. Ward's combination.

In announcing that a delegation of women would call upon the President, Mrs. E. Palmo Dowell, Chairman of the Bread Committee of the Housewives' League, said:

"The $3,000,000,000 firm is a terrible thing. Mr. Ward adds insult to injury when he states that the corporation will look after the welfare of American children."

A resolution of protest to be forwarded to President Coolidge, the Federal Trade Commission and Maryland Senators and Representatives was drafted at a meeting of the league today.

The women's organizations declared that a "bake your own bread" movement would be launched at the Food Show, opening next Monday.

ACTIVITY IN BAKING SHARES.

All but Two Issues Lost Ground in Flurry Over Merger Plans.

The announcement of the formation of the $2,000,000 Ward Food Products Corporation by William B. Ward caused a great deal of activity in the baking shares in Wall Street yesterday. Nevertheless, with one or two exceptions, all of them lost ground.

The only one of the baking shares to reflect activity and strength which could be traced directly to this new development, was Ward Baking Company Class B shares, which advanced to the day's high of 85¾ and closed the day with a net gain of 2 points on a turnover of 24,600 shares.

Act to Remove Elevated Spur.

The Board of Estimate sitting as the Committee of the Whole adopted a resolution yesterday directing the Corporation Counsel to draft a bill for presentation t othe Legislature authorizing the removal of the elevated spur in Thirty-fourth Street between Third Avenue and the East River, Borough President Julius Miller said the change would improve vehicular traffic conditions.

ANCIENT GOLD CURIO ON EXHIBITION HERE

A little sheaf of golden wheat, valued at $35,000, resting in a red-leather box, was exhibited by Dr. Jacob Hirsch, reputed to be the world's largest dealer in archaeological objects, at the Reinhardt Galleries, 970 Fifth Avenue, yesterday. It was a votive offering to Demeter, goddess of the fertility of the soil, and was excavated on the site of the ancient Greek City of Syracuse in Sicily.

The delicate stems bearing kernels of wheat, with the waving fronds above them, are set on little gold spirals which permit them to wave as if in the wind, although they are strong enough to stand erect. The leaves, if they may be called that, are also very delicate, and the fine markings in them may be distinguished. Dr. Hirsch says that it is the only specimen of its kind in the world that he knows of, and came from an Italian collection. He had known of it for thirty-five years, but only recently managed to buy it.

The other objects in his collection, which will be on exhibition Thursday, are mostly statuettes of the Greek school, perfectly preserved, two of which, Dr. Hirsch says, cannot be found in any museum. There is also a head of Hera, a larger than life size work in marble, so perfectly preserved that the fingers do not find an imperfection in the surface of the features.

M'QUIGG CHAMPIONS NATIONAL DEFENSE

Warns We Are the Creditor of the Universe and That Creditors Are Not Popular.

WANTS NO MORE WARS

But Legion Commander Says That Quarrels Are Almost Certain to Arise.

John R. McQuigg, National Commander of the American Legion, in an address last night at the Waldorf, saw danger to the peace of America because the United States was now "the creditor of the universe." He warned against the efforts of "well-meaning but misguided people" to deprive the nation of its means of defense. The dinner was given in Commander McQuigg's honor by the New York Department of the American Legion and was attended by representatives of every county in the State and from almost every one of the 900 posts.

Commander McQuigg declared that persons attempting "the creation of an impossible utopia" opposed "anything in the nature of national defense, opposed the army and navy and would abolish both, opposed military instruction in our schools and colleges and are just now engaged in a nation-wide campaign to force the Government to abandon such instruction."

"They set much store by world courts and Hague tribunals," the Commander continued, "and that is well. But let us remember that neither courts nor tribunals can accomplish the impossible.

"The men who compose the Legion know what war is. They have seen it at its worst and they want no more of it, if it can be honorably avoided. But the Legion recognizes that controversies and quarrels between nations are almost certain to arise, and that more agreements not to have those things happen have been to a large extent futile. For that reason, if for no other, the American Legion advocates the maintenance of adequate forces for internal and external national defense.

"The civilized world is indebted to America. We are the creditors of the universe, and the frailties of humanity are such that debtors are not specially fond of their creditors. We were one of the powers least affected by the war—last in and first out, after the job was done—and this very fact is even now creating some feeling abroad."

Other speakers at the dinner were Congressman Ogden L. Mills, President Nicholas M. Butler of Columbia University, and Colonel Harry C. Wilder, Commander of the New York State Department of the Legion. Congressman Mills discussed pending legislation affecting the Legion, including the universal draft bill and the bill covering the retirement of disabled emergency army officers. He said that the legislative situation was such that he could venture no prediction over the outcome.

President Butler, who said he represented "the old folks at home," praised the valor of the legionnaires and said that when the curtain descended on a war in Europe it went up on another war at home, the fight to maintain American institutions of liberty and of government by constitution. He told the legionnaires that they could be of great service in the battle to maintain the highest standards of citizenship and of civic thought.

ASSAILS THE PACIFISTS.

McQuigg Resents Their Opposition t Reserve Officers.

National Commander John R. McQuigg of the American Legion turned his fire on the "ultra-pacific parlor Bolsheviki" who would abolish the Reserve Officers' Training Schools, in American colleges, in an interview yesterday.

"The training schools mean a great deal in our plan of national defense," he said. "In an emergency thousands of young men will be prepared to assume the rank of lieutenant or captain without the necessity of additional camps. We must not end that branch, despite the vicious attacks being made upon it."

General McQuigg said the Legion faced as its big problem the care of sick and disabled veterans, thousands of whom were in hospitals. The present year will be devoted to a nation-wide drive to end this situation.

Many legionaires were at the Hotel Vanderbilt to greet their Commander, and he held an informal reception in his rooms.

VETERAN ASKS INFORMATION

Want Congress to Declare Policy on Our Foreign Possessions.

Joseph C. Thomson, New York State Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, wrote an open letter to President Coolidge yesterday suggesting that the President send a message to Congress in an effort to get a declaration of policy with reference to the foreign possessions of the United States.

Mr. Thomson said that the Philippines are considered an ideal country for the development of a rubber producing industry, but that unstable conditions there and the failure of the United States to make a declaration of policy as to the islands' political future have tended to prevent the investment of capital on a sufficient scale to make America free from foreign control of its rubber sources.

EXONERATE WALKER DRIVER.

Homicide Court Witnesses Say Collision Was Unavoidable.

Ernest Ellifsen, chauffeur for Mrs. James J. Walker, who was arrested following a fatal collision between a car he was driving and a taxicab, was exonerated of the technical charge of homicide in the Homicide Court yesterday. On New Year's Day his car struck a taxicab at Seventh Avenue and 139th Street, and Joseph Kramer, who was riding on the running board, was thrown off and killed.

Harold Singer of 436 East 138th Street, the Bronx, who was driving the taxicab, testified yesterday that Policeman Hostetter of the West 135th Street Station, who was also on the running board with Kramer, was taking the latter to the station house to question him regarding another accident in which Kramer's helper had been hurt. Both men, he said, blocked his view and the accident was unavoidable.

Watch The Roses In Your Cheeks

WATCH them jealously and be sure they're always there. Not alone for their beauty but because they are an index of your health and vigor. The lipstick and the rouge pot can mislead no one, yourself least of all. The roses that come from good food and sound sleep are the only kind that count. Save for accidents and the plague you may have the flush of good health and rich, red blood. See that your body is properly nourished. Eat food that your stomach can handle without effort. Be moderate with everything but milk. Be extravagant with milk. Take milk with every meal. Milk contains everything needed to make the roses bloom in your cheeks and it is the only food in the world that does. Milk is the cheapest food you can buy. There is no waste, it is all food. More than anything else, it will help you to shoulder the peculiar responsibilities ahead of you. It will create nutritional habits of lasting value. But, more important, it will put the roses in your cheeks and keep them there.

DISMISSALS WIDEN MOORE-HAGUE SPLIT

Four More of Governor's Appointees Ousted From Jersey City Park Department.

29 HAVE GONE IN A WEEK

Said to Have Been in Reprisal for Refusal to Heed Suggestions in State Appointments.

The apparent breach in the political alliance of Governor A. Harry Moore and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City was reported to have been made wider yesterday by the dismissal of four more employes of the Department of Parks and Public Buildings of Jersey City. This makes a total of twenty-nine persons appointed by Mr. Moore when he was Director of Parks and Public Buildings who have been dropped from the city payroll within one week in reprisal, it was said, for the Governor's refusal to heed Mayor Hague's suggestions in regard to State appointments.

Although both the Governor and persons close to Mr. Hague have denied the talk of a break between them, Mr. Moore appointed yesterday as his military aid Hugh Kelly, one of the Jersey City employes dropped from the payroll, who is one of his close friends. Further, the four persons dropped yesterday by John Saul, Director of Parks and Public Buildings, were dismissed after Deputy Mayor John Malone, who is acting during Mr. Hague's absence in Florida, had said there would be no further dismissals. Mr. Saul said again that the men were suspended "in the interests of economy."

Mr. Malone talked with Mr. Saul late in the afternoon and announced he did not "quite understand what Saul is driving at."

"I am greatly surprised at the latest dismissals," he said, "because I was given to understand Saturday that Director Saul would heed the advice of those of his friends who were advising him to defer any further drastic action while Mayor Hague is away. I do not reconcile his assurances given last Saturday with his latest action in dropping four more city employes."

Mayor Hague was expected to return from Florida on Feb. 8, but yesterday it was said he would not return until Feb. 15.

While the apparent efforts of Mr. Hague to "discipline" the Governor followed the latter's refusal to heed suggestions of the Jersey City Mayor, they were started originally, it was said, by Mr. Moore's "presumption" in suggesting the appointment of his friend, Arthur Potterman, a member of the Jersey City Board of Education, to the City Commissionership vacancy created by his own resignation. Instead Mayor Hague appointed John J. Beggans, his friend and follower. Next Mayor Hague was displeased, it was said, over the Governor's appointment of Fred Bloodgood as his secretary, and then when other appointments of the Governor ignored his own recommendations he decided upon the "reprisal."

Governor Moore last night reappointed Chancellor Edwin Robert Walker of Trenton and State Banking and Insurance Commissioner Edward Maxson of Summit. He also named John C. Feil of Newark as budget assistant to succeed William S. Hunt of Newark, resigned.

FORD'S ROAD SHOWS GAINS.

Profit in 1925 $1,059,883 More Than in 1924, Says Annual Report.

Operation of Henry Ford's railroad, the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, during 1925, resulted in $1,059,883 more profit than in 1924, according to a statement made public yesterday.

From gross operating receipts the report showed a saving in net operating income of $3,614,644, compared with net $2,554,761 the previous year. Operations in December resulted in net of $273,643, compared with an operating deficit of $32,227 in December, 1924.

LLOYD'S OF LONDON CAN BE SUED HERE

Claim That Action Can Be Filed Only in Britain Is Upset by Court of Appeals.

In an opinion handed down yesterday the Circuit Court of Appeals said that Lloyd's, London, can be sued in this country, thus departing from a decision of Judge Knox of the District Court, to the effect that he was not certain that the courts here had jurisdiction in an action against the corporation.

The action in which the decision appeared was instituted by William Otis Badger Jr., Milo Otis Bennett and Paul D. Compton as counsel for Miss Edith Bobé, a modiste, for $10,000 insurance on a platinum and diamond bracelet, which was stolen from her on Sept. 15, 1924. In presenting the case before the Circuit Court, counsel explained that the company declined to pay the insurance on the ground that the binder had not been accepted, although the company had received the premium of $202.85.

The court was told that Percey Graham McKinnon, Chairman of Lloyd's, had explained under oath the English method as follows:

"No underwriting member of Lloyd's or syndicate of such underwriters is entitled to style himself or themselves Lloyd's, nor do they in fact do so."

Mr. Badger pointed out that the only contract signed in the case was signed in the name Lloyd's, and that the agent who made the signature asserted his authority to do so. Commenting on the decision of the Circuit Court, Mr. Badger said:

"Lloyd's denied the authority of the Federal Court to try a case of this sort and made the distinction that while underwriters at Lloyd's do an insurance business, Lloyd's London never transacts any insurance business but is purely a bureau of marine information.

"Miss Bobe can now go on and try her case in the Federal court on its merits. This decision probably will be hailed by thousands of claimants against Lloyd's who heretofore have been advised that Lloyd's could only be sued in London, England."

The opinion was written by Judge Manton and concurred in by Judge Rogers. Judge Learned Hand dissented.

NASH SISTERS TO TESTIFY.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 1.—Florence and Mary Nash, now starring in "A Lady's Virtue" in New York, are expected to appear in the Albany Surrogate's Court on Feb. 9 to aid their mother, Mrs. Philip Nash, of 2,178 Broadway, New York, who is charged by her sister, Mrs. Mary Keough, with exerting undue influence on her spinster sister, Nora E. Mack.

Miss Mack left Mrs. Nash $500,000 which she had received from their brother, the late "Johnnie" Mack, Albany millionaire. Mrs. Keough, in her action before Surrogate George Lawyer, claims she was entitled to part of the money left by her sister Nora.

Mack was the proprietor of the "White House" at Steuben and James Streets, and was a picturesque figure in Albany. When he died he left a house filled with valuable paintings and bric-a-brac gathered from all parts of the world. His fortune was estimated at upward of $2,000,000.

The Nash sisters were the favorite nieces of Mr. Mack and it was largely through his desire that they studied for the stage. When he died he left his fortune to be divided equally among his three sisters.

Mrs. Nash denied that she ever exerted any undue influence over her sister Nora. She said that after the death of her brother she and Nora made wills in which they left their money to each other, to be held in trust for Mary and Florence Nash.

ONTARIO TO CHANGE PULPWOOD POLICY

New Contracts Will Require Full Manufacture Before Pulp Is Exported.

$80,000,000 TO BE SPENT

Erection of New Mills and Hydro-electric Development Will Increase Output.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Feb. 1.—James S. Lyons, Ontario's Minister of Lands and Forests, in announcing today the terms of the new timber contracts about to be consummated between the department and five pulp and paper companies, estimates that new revenue of $2,000,000 a year will be brought into the Provincial treasury. This will be possible through the cutting of millions of cords of additional pulpwood. It will also mean an increase in newsprint production.

An important feature in the new contracts is the prohibition of the export of any semi-manufactured product. All the pulp must be manufactured into newsprint before export will be permitted and 15 per cent. of the total production is to be reserved for Canadian consumers. This is slightly in excess of domestic consumption at present, but is designed to protect Canadian publishers.

The complete development necessary under these contracts will require a total expenditure of $80,000,000 in the erection of pulp and paper mills, transportation facilities and power development by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission on the Nipigon River.

The all-Canadian manufacturing clause is entirely an innovation, and means that the wage bills paid to Ontario labor in the pulp industry will be doubled and the capital invested doubled as well.

Another provision requires the pulp operators to designate each Summer the area to be cut over the following Winter. In giving approval to cut, the department may stipulate that all merchantable timber is to be cut simultaneously, which will reduce the fire and wind hazard. This will also tend to increase the use of jackpine and conserve the diminishing spruce reserves.

To further encourage the use of jackpine the dues on spruce and balsam have been increased. This method will further assist in making reforestation immediately possible. The department reserves the absolute right to pass regulations regarding brush disposal.

Instead of selling a fixed area, as formerly, the Government today sells the cordage only, and while a company is restricted to a certain area it must confine its operations to a smaller area.

The lessees are to be required to cooperate with the department in buying pulpwood from the settlers. The accounts owing the settlers will be a first lien on the assets of the company in case of failure.

The policy of the Government has been extended to include all renewals of pulpwood contracts. For instance, certain companies are now manufacturing sulphide and shipping the semi-manufactured product to the United States to be made into paper. When these firms hereafter approach the Government for new pulpwood supplies they will be required to undertake complete manufacture of all pulp into newsprint or renewals of contracts for further pulpwood supplies will not be made.

Austrian Paper Money Decreases.

During the first three weeks of January Austrian paper currency in circulation decreased nearly $23,000,000 and discounts decreased $8,143,000, while the metal reserve was only $5,000,000 lower than at the end of December, according to a cable from the Associated Banks of Vienna to F. J. Lisman & Co. Over 60 per cent. of the circulation, including current account liabilities, is covered by the reserve. The industrial situation is reported to be improving in Austria.

SUES MOTHER-IN-LAW AND A NAVAL OFFICER

Californian Says They Enticed His Wife to Leave Him and Stay Here With Them.

Papers in a suit by Cameron K. Wylie, a San Francisco advertising man, against Mrs. Sadie L. Hart, his mother-in-law, also of that city, and Lieutenant Roger S. Ranschausen, U. S. N., of San Mateo, Cal., were filed in the Supreme Court yesterday. Wylie is suing for $250,000 damages on the ground that Mrs. Hart and Lieutenant Ranschausen alienated the affections of his wife, Mrs. Constance Carolyn Wylie.

The papers were served at the Hotel Langdon on Jan. 18, but Mrs. Hart, on whom the service was alleged to have been made, asserted in an affidavit that she was not in the hotel at the time and that the papers were handed to Mrs. Wylie, her daughter. She applied yesterday to set aside the service, and also asserted that the action should be tried in the Federal court.

The complaint attached to the petition says that the Wylies were married in 1921 and lived happily together until Jan. 8. Wylie alleged that since last May his mother-in-law and the naval officer had alienated his wife's affections and acquired an influence over her, and that Ranschausen "has enticed her away from the plaintiff, and has ever since detained and harbored her in opposition to the plaintiff's most peaceful efforts to obtain her from the defendants' control and custody." The complaint was signed on Jan. 12.

Yesterday's hearing was adjourned until Feb. 15.

EDITORIALS READ IN SENATE

Johnson and Oddie Put New York Times Articles on Record.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Two editorials in THE NEW YORK TIMES were laid before the Senate today. Senator Johnson of California read one from yesterday's issue entitled "What the World Thinks of 14," with this introductory comment:

"With the consent of the Senate I desire to read a brief leading editorial which was published yesterday in THE NEW YORK TIMES. I read this editorial because THE NEW YORK TIMES has been one of the foremost advocates of internationalism, and has, since the commencement of the debate upon the subject, constantly insisted that we should enter the League of Nations."

Senator Oddie of Nevada asked that there be printed in The Record an editorial from today's TIMES, entitled "Romance of the Budget." He made no comment.

When buying an Automobile ask about the Hardware

OF INTEREST to MOTORISTS AUTOMOBILE SALES AGENTS and AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS

PLATING and enamel will give a lot of snap and sparkle to any kind of hardware on a car—in the salesroom.

But they won't keep snap and sparkle on every kind of hardware when the car begins to get the gaff on the road.

Rust is no respecter of plating or enamel. It attacks the metal underneath if that metal is corrodible.

Soon there are rust-spotted door and window handles, corroded rails and striker plates, rusty screws and fasteners—snap and sparkle of metal parts fading to a dinginess that gives a car a shabby look.

But when the hardware is solid BRASS or BRONZE it retains its good looks.

Under two out of every three roofs

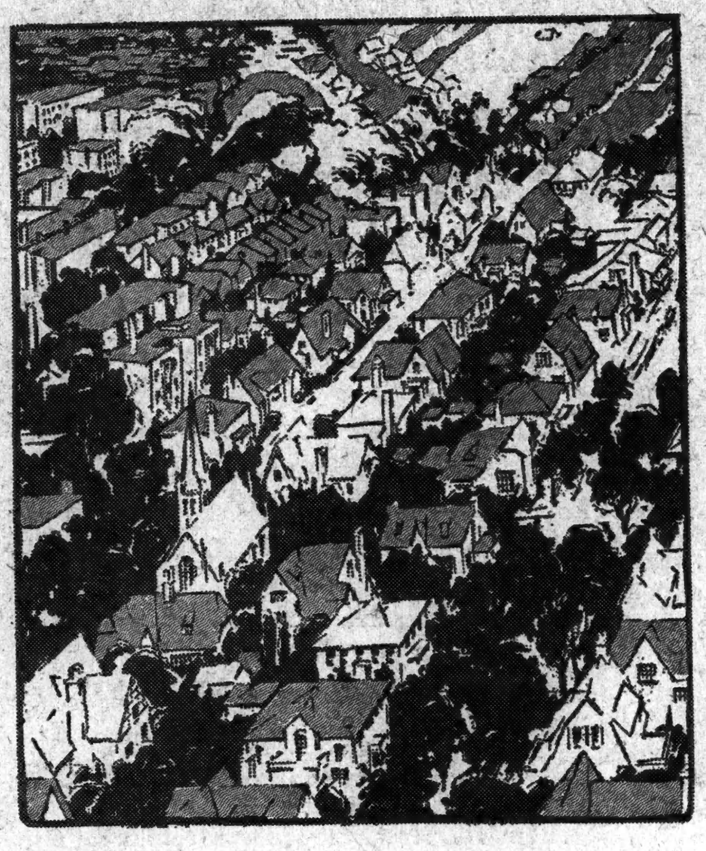
SUPPOSE that every Tribune family in The Chicago Territory lived under a red roof. Imagine yourself on an airplane ride, starting from Chicago, and passing out over the cities and villages of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Wisconsin.



You would see a mass of red roofs. In 1151 towns in The Chicago Territory you would find two out of every three roofs painted red. Sixty-five per cent of the families read The Sunday Tribune, and in not one of these towns does The Tribune reach less than 20% of the families. Zooming out over Chicago's suburbs, a solid stretch of red roofs, almost unbroken, greets the eye. And on to the outer suburban circle—Aurora, Elgin, Joliet—from two-thirds to three-fourths of all the homes receive The Chicago Sunday Tribune

More red roofs beyond! Galesburg, nine out of ten; Mattoon, Rockford, Lincoln, Kewanee, more than half; Moline, Monmouth, Pontiac, Princeton, two out of every three. In Indiana, Elkhart, LaPorte, Goshen, from one-half to two-thirds. Seven out of ten in Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, Mich.; Escanaba, two out of every three; Iron Mountain, four out of five.

And so on, in Wisconsin, with Beloit, Madison, Janesville, Neenah; and in Iowa—Ottumwa, Muscatine, Keokuk, Clinton, Cedar Rapids—prosperous and populous cities where at least every other family reads The Tribune.

Having visualized this vast array of red roofs—of Tribune homes—consider the infinite possibilities for sales among Chicago Tribune readers. There is an ever changing, renewing investment of billions of dollars, among the readers of one newspaper—in a rich territory confined to the limits of five adjoining states.

Take a glimpse, for instance, of a few separate rooms in these Tribune homes. Listed below are only some of the commodities for which every householder is a prospective purchaser.

THE KITCHEN

Stove	Linoleum	Soaps
Refrigerator	Electrical cooking devices	Cleaners
Kitchen cabinet	Food products	Brushes
Tables	Aluminum ware	Mineral water
Chairs	Electric dish washers	China

THE LIVING ROOM

What advertiser has exhausted this market or covered the 1,100,000 homes where The Tribune is read? Only a partial list of the every day commodities used in a few of the rooms under these million red roofs is indicated—just enough to suggest the limitless possibilities in a proper use of Tribune space.

Why seek further fields or more difficult markets when one newspaper reaches more than a million prosperous families in this territory?

THEY have decided it! Over night values are changing . . . You have seen it happen before.

One day a sleepy Basque village, the next scintillating Biarritz! Suddenly just one smart place in London to live—Mayfair! In New York—Park Avenue!

The right people decided to live in a place—over night the values rise. Today it is happening in Florida—at Floranada Club.

Society from two continents is creating this international resort

The people who made Biarritz, Mayfair, Park Avenue values are making Floranada Club values.

A group of friends, powerful socially and financially, conceived the idea. A new international resort! The Europeans wanted a climate better, more equable than any their resorts offered. The Americans wanted an ideal playground nearer their active interests.

They found 3600 acres—enough for a small exclusive development—on the East Coast of Florida, just where the Gulf Stream is closest to the shore. Halfway between Palm Beach and Miami!

Cables hummed . . . The land was bought!

Immediately Mr. Cass Gilbert, the celebrated architect, started plans for the great Casino, the Yacht Club and other buildings.

The founders are already planning their houses at Floranada Club

For the King of Greece Mr. Howard Major of Palm Beach has planned a residence at Floranada

The Countess of Lauderdale planned her house.

Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury announced that she would build at Floranada a delightful house for her daughter.

Mrs. Horace E. Dodge decided to build. Mrs. Alexander W. Biddle of Philadelphia, also Mr. Samuel M. Vauclain, Mr. Clyde Milne, Mr. John S. Pillsbury are some of those definitely interested in Floranada Club.

An unusual opportunity for the investment of modest capital

Because they intend living there themselves the founders of Floranada Club are insistent on the character of the development. They want it a congenial community. Therefore, care is being taken to provide for the man of background, rather than wealth. While there will be definite restrictions at Floranada Club, plots are being planned to sell as low as $4,000. The smaller house will be as artistic, as varied, as the estates.

The famous DIXIE HIGHWAY runs through Floranada Club's acres, which are skirted by the Florida East Coast Railroad and traversed by the East Coast Canal

Any purchaser may become a member of a golf club, the Yacht Club and the Casino.

The white beach at Floranada Club is bordered by beautiful lots, other plots front the beautiful waterways that will make the club property so delightful a place to live. Or you may build in the sweet-scented privacy of a grove of pines. Every possible assistance will be given for immediate building, whether your house is large or small.

Tomorrow, February 3rd, is the opening day

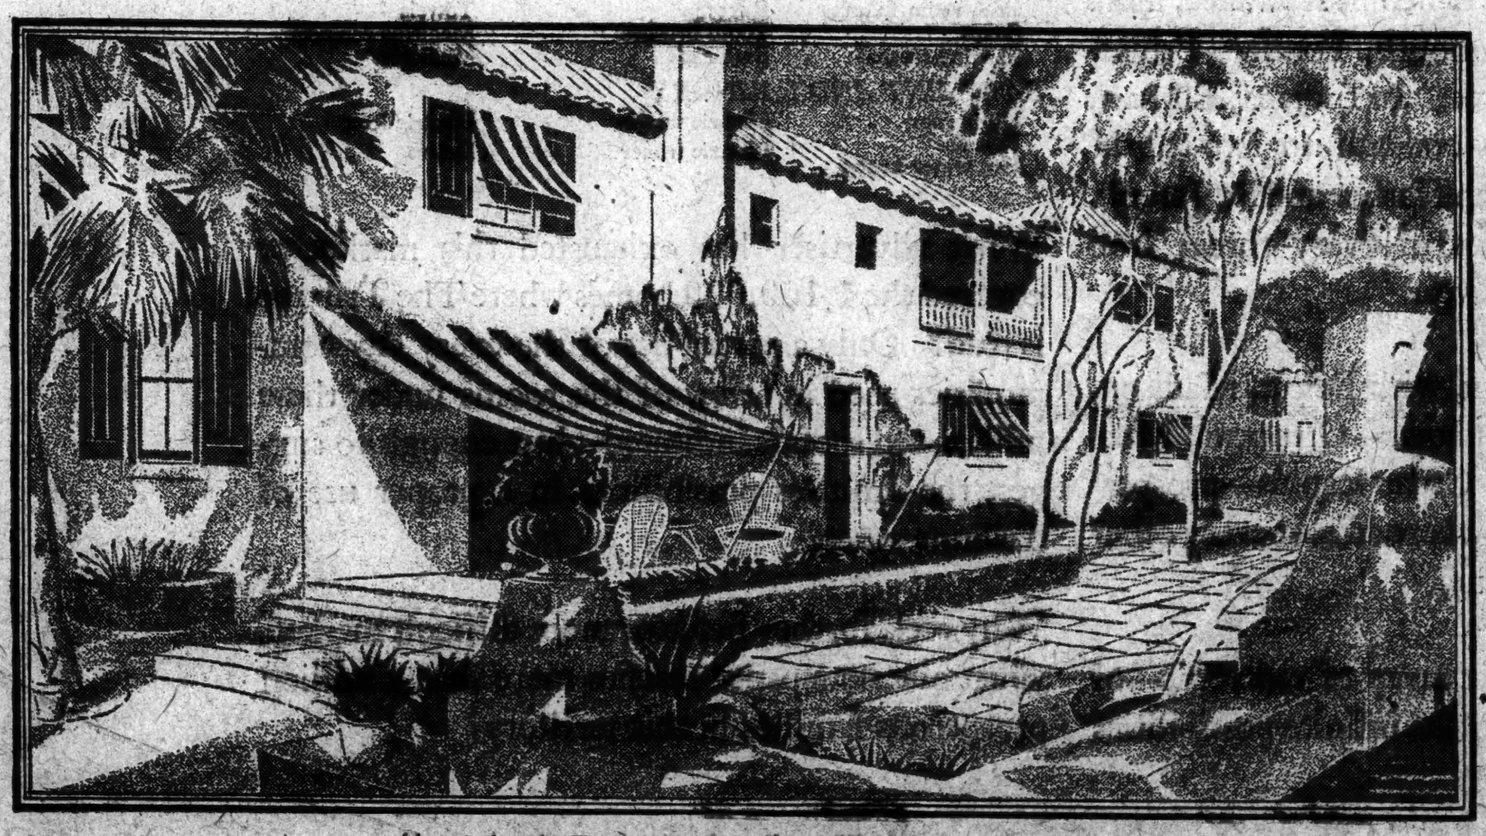
Actual sale of Floranada Club property will begin tomorrow, February third. The flood of reservations that has been pouring in for the past two weeks indicates that record figures will be attained. Many have filed open reservations, lots being assigned by the company.



A house is planned at Floranada Club for the KING OF GREECE—cool rooms overlooking tropical gardens—to rest in after the royal sport of tarpon fishing which is better near Floranada Club than perhaps anywhere in the world. HOWARD MAJOR, architect

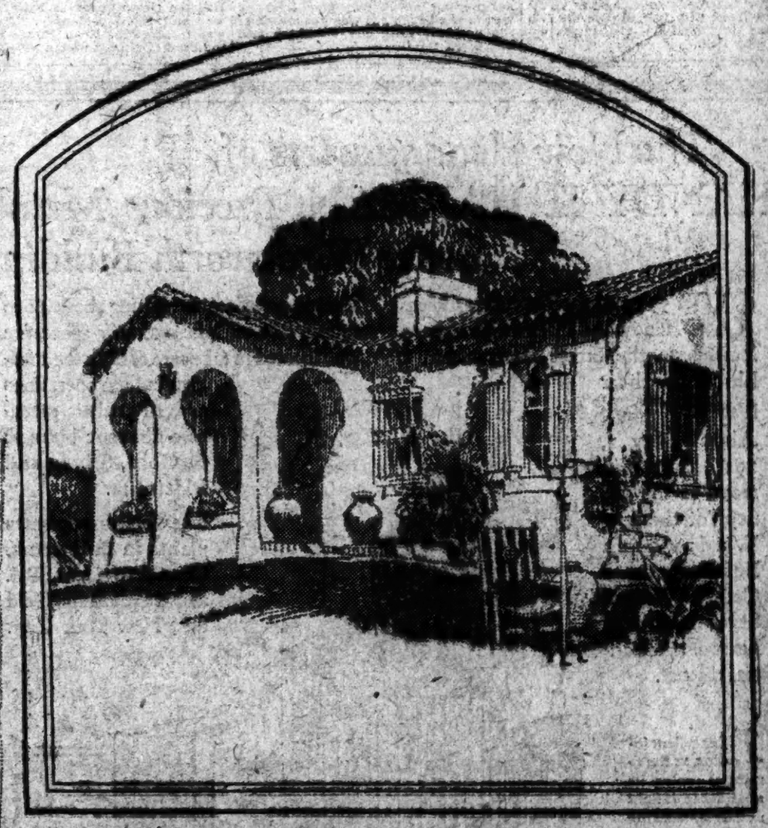
Florida's bank deposits increase two million dollars for every day

A careful estimate of deposits in all banks in the State of Florida shows an increase of approximately two million dollars for every banking day in the first three months of 1925. Leading bankers declare that this rate of increase has been maintained or surpassed since April 1st.

Actual figures show that deposits in Florida state banks and trust companies alone increased nearly $90,000,000 from January to April 1, 1925.

These figures do not reflect a sudden wave of prosperity. In the five years from January 1, 1920 to January 1, 1925, deposits in Florida's national banks grew from approximately 187 million dollars to over 375 million dollars, an increase of more than 100%.



One of the charming small houses Mr. Howard Major is planning for those who do not wish the responsibilities of a large establishment. Mrs. Alexander W. Biddle is to build one of the most delightful of these smaller homes

TO SELL $75,000,000 OF 4 1-4% CITY BONDS

Berry Will Ask Bids in First Major Financing by the Walker Administration.

NO INCREASE IN CITY DEBT

Proceeds, With $20,000,000 in the Sinking Fund, to Be Used to Retire $95,000,000 Short-Term Notes.

Controller Charles W. Berry announced yesterday that he would sell $75,000,000 corporate stock and serial bonds of New York City on Tuesday, Feb. 16, 1926. He will advertise in a few days for bids on what will be the first major financing undertaken by the Walker Administration, which took office on Jan. 1.

The bond issue will help retire the city's corporate stock notes which are outstanding to the amount of $95,000,000. To raise the difference of $20,000,000, it is understood, the city will make use of its sinking fund. The financing operation will wipe clean the city's financial slate as far as short-term corporate stock notes are concerned, converting these notes into long-term bonds.

Controller Berry indicated he was fairly certain that the taking up of the corporate stock notes by the proposed sale would obviate the necessity of any additional sales of long-term bonds this year.

"It should be borne in mind," said the Controller, "that the forthcoming sale of bonds to the amount of $75,000,000, in no way increases the city's debt, nor does it in any way decrease the city's debt-incurring power. It is merely a conversion of short-term paper into a long-term bond. I wish to make this point absolutely clear."

An additional statement from the Controller's office said:

"The purposes for which these bonds are to be sold are: to take up $28,000,000 of corporate stock notes issued for subway construction; $17,000,000 corporate stock notes for water supply; $25,500,000 corporate stock notes for construction of schools and $4,500,000 corporate stock notes which were issued for 'Various Municipal Purposes.' The corporate stock will mature in fifty years from the date of issue and the serial bonds will have different maturities running from one to forty years, all bearing interest at 4¼ per cent. Sealed proposals for these bonds will be opened by Controller Berry at his office in the Municipal Building at noon on Tuesday, Feb. 16, 1926."

The last bond issue floated by New York City amounted to $60,000,000, and was sold last May to a syndicate headed by the National City Company on a bid of 102.3197 in a sale in which virtually all the large and small banking and investment houses in New York were represented by offers. The 1925 bonds carried a 4¼ per cent. interest coupon, and were sold to the public at prices to yield from 3.25 to 4.05 per cent.

While there have been rumors that the city intended floating a new bond issue these have been complicated by reports that the city was within $42,000,000 of its debt limit. The first report of Controller Berry, issued yesterday, however, showed that the city's gross funded debt of $2,098,853,726 included the outstanding corporate stock notes, and these notes may be refunded, dollar for dollar, without changing the status of the city's debt.

The city, in addition to the amount represented by the corporate stock notes, could borrow up to $147,000,000 if it desired, it was declared, but no financing of the latter proportions is contemplated. Mr. Berry's report placed the amount of corporate stock notes outstanding on Jan. 1 at $91,800,000, and about $4,000,000 additional of these notes are reported to have been issued since the first of the year. It is regarded as certain that all the large banking institutions in New York and most of the small ones will submit bids for the new bonds, as the credit of New York City has always been in a class by itself in the municipal borrowing field.

OFFERS BILL TO AVERT PORT DISCRIMINATION

Senator Butler Would Regulate Rail Rates on Freight for Export and Import.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Senator Butler of Massachusetts introduced today a bill providing for the regulation of preferential rates on railroad freight for export or import. This measure, which was presented in slightly different form in the last session, declares it to be the policy of Congress to promote, encourage and develop ports and port facilities and to coordinate rail and water transportation; to insure the free flow of the nation's foreign commerce through the several ports of the United States without discrimination, to the end that reasonable development of the ports shall not be handicapped by unwarranted differences in rail and ocean transportation rates and charges, and to provide as many routes as practicable for the movement of the nation's export and import commerce.

SON VISITS EX-KAISER.

Former Monarch Is Affected by First Meeting in Two Years.

DOORN, Holland, Feb. 1 (AP).—Profiting by the first day of the abolition of the visa between Germany and Holland, former Crown Pince Frederick William of Germany arrived here this morning and passed through the village unobserved to his father's chateau.

The meeting between the former Emperor and his son was very touching, for it was the first time in more than two years that they had seen each other. William embraced his son and was unable to master his emotion, but the former Crown Prince displayed his usual gayety.

Princess Hermine, who had previously made visits to Frederick William at Oels, is reported to have greatly facilitated the reconciliation, which, owing to the Prince's attitude in militaristic and monarchist quarters in Germany, had been deemed impossible.

It is thought, however, that the principal reason for the reconciliation is to be found in the matter of the settlement of the royal properties, which, rumor says, President von Hindenburg has promised will be favorable to the former royal families, and that a meeting of the members of William's family at this place is to discuss this subject.

The police guard around the chateau has been doubled.

TWO WOMEN DIE IN FIRES.

One, Ill, Burns to Death in Bed; the Other Is Killed Lighting Stove.

Mrs. Margaret Davis, a paralytic, 53 years old, of 409 Cherry Street, was burned to death in her kitchen yesterday. Her bed had been moved to the kitchen for warmth during the cold weather, and the bedclothing caught fire from an overheated range. Her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Smith, had left her a few minutes before.

The fire was discovered by a neighbor, Henry Benson, who climbed the slippery fire escape to Mrs. Davis's window which he found fastened. He smashed the glass, but was unable to enter because of the smoke and flames.

Meanwhile an alarm had been turned in and Battalion Chief Edward J. Rogan with firemen entered the room. They found the stove heaped high with coal and red hot and the bed in flames. Mrs. Davis was dead before the firemen could remove her.

Special to The New York Times.

HICKSVILLE, L. I., Feb. 1.—Mrs. Lena Slimm, 77 years old, the wife of August Slimm of John Street, Hicksville, was burned to death in the back yard of her home yesterday afternoon. Her body was found by her daughter, Mrs. Martha Fitting. Apparently her clothes had caught fire while she was lighting an oil stove. Her husband was in the house but was not aware of the accident until his daughter told him of it.

HARRIS WOULD BAR DIPPED MILK SALE

Practice Nullifies Efforts to Keep the City's Supply Pure, Commissioner Says.

CALLS IT HEALTH MENACE

Tells Producers He Needs Larger Staff to Cope With Bootleg-Milk Problem.

A demand for legislation forbidding the sale of dipped milk was made yesterday by Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris at a luncheon given by the Metropolitan Certified Milk Producers at the Biltmore. "The sale of dipped milk should be abolished as an abomination and a menace to the public health," the Commissioner declared. "It has been proved that at least 90 per cent. of the adulteration of milk in this city ensues from the practice of selling dipped milk.

"It is ridiculous to take elaborate precautions in milk production, in maintaining the most sanitary conditions at the dairies and farms, and then permit cans to be opened and exposed to dust and dirt, while a man with dirty hands ladles out milk into containers of doubtful cleanliness.

"The criticism may be made that in remedying such evils we are raising the price of a commodity, or rather of an important essential of life, to a level where it becomes prohibitive. But that is no answer to the problem. A way must be found to provide pure milk for the masses at a price they can afford to pay.

"There will be the problem of bootleg milk until we have an adequate staff of inspectors. At present we have seventeen men to cover seven States and two Provinces in Canada. Obviously there should be five or seven times that number."

Commissioner Harris pointed out that of the entire quantity of milk sold in New York only 1½ per cent. was certified. He said that the certified producers had gone far in solving the milk problem for the selected few, but that their ideal should be one of service to the whole community. He also declared that much butter and cream cheese manufactured from impure milk was being sold, and predicted that the Sanitary Code would in the near future be amended to cope with this evil. More frequent and thorough inspection of milk handlers, he said, would also be required.

Pressure was being exerted by Western dairymen to gain a foothold in the East, the Commissioner said, but the Health Department would stand pat until milk from other regions was subjected to the same tests as were made in New York.

The luncheon was part of an all-day joint meeting of the Metropolitan Certified Milk Producers and the Certified Milk Producers of America. Eighty-five members of the two organizations were present.

FORD AIDS DANCE MANAGER

Interested in Detroit Girl's Effort to Popularize Old Dances.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 1.—Henry Ford has come to the aid of a former Detroit girl, Margaret Allen, President of the National Stage Woman's Exchange, an organization devoted to the self maintenance of unemployed actresses.

Miss Allen was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ford at an old-fashioned dance at Dearborn a few evenings ago. She is manager of a ballroom in New York and Mr. Ford is interested in her effort to prove that the revival of old-fashioned dances is something more than just a fad and that these dances can be made popular.

The order was filled at the River Rouge plant of the Ford Company within seven weeks.

ASKS THE CHURCHES TO AID UNION LABOR

Bishop McConnell Says They Can Help Social Betterment, With No Fear of Radicalism.

Churches were urged to cooperate more closely with labor organizations in working out the problems of a shifting social order in an address last night by the Rev. Francis J. McConnell, Methodist Episcopal Bishop of Pittsburgh, before the annual dinner of the Presbyterian Union of New York City at the McAlpin.

What the laboring man wanted, he declared, was "not sympathy expressed through missionery work, but an atmosphere in which social changes and improvements can be achieved." Such an atmosphere, he held, could be created in the public mind if churchmen would strive for it.

He expressed satisfaction that "we can give honest consideration to the problems that confront society, and labor in particular, today, without being hissed as Bolshevists and 'Reds.'"

Such a thing as true radicalism no longer existed in the United States, he said. The American Federation of Labor, he asserted, was conservative rather than radical, while the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which he termed the most radical labor body here, did not advocate revolution by violence, but by consent.

"Who is going to consent?" he asked.

In view of this, he held, the church could cooperate with labor "on a basis of respect and understanding, and give labor leaders what they want—a straight-from-the-shoulder discussion of their problems. They would thus make for the betterment of all concerned."

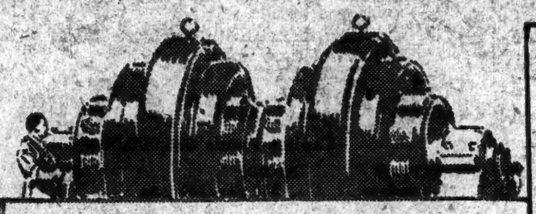
Sales Mount Despite Shifting Markets

Eloquent Testimony for McGraw-Hill Four Principles of Industrial Marketing



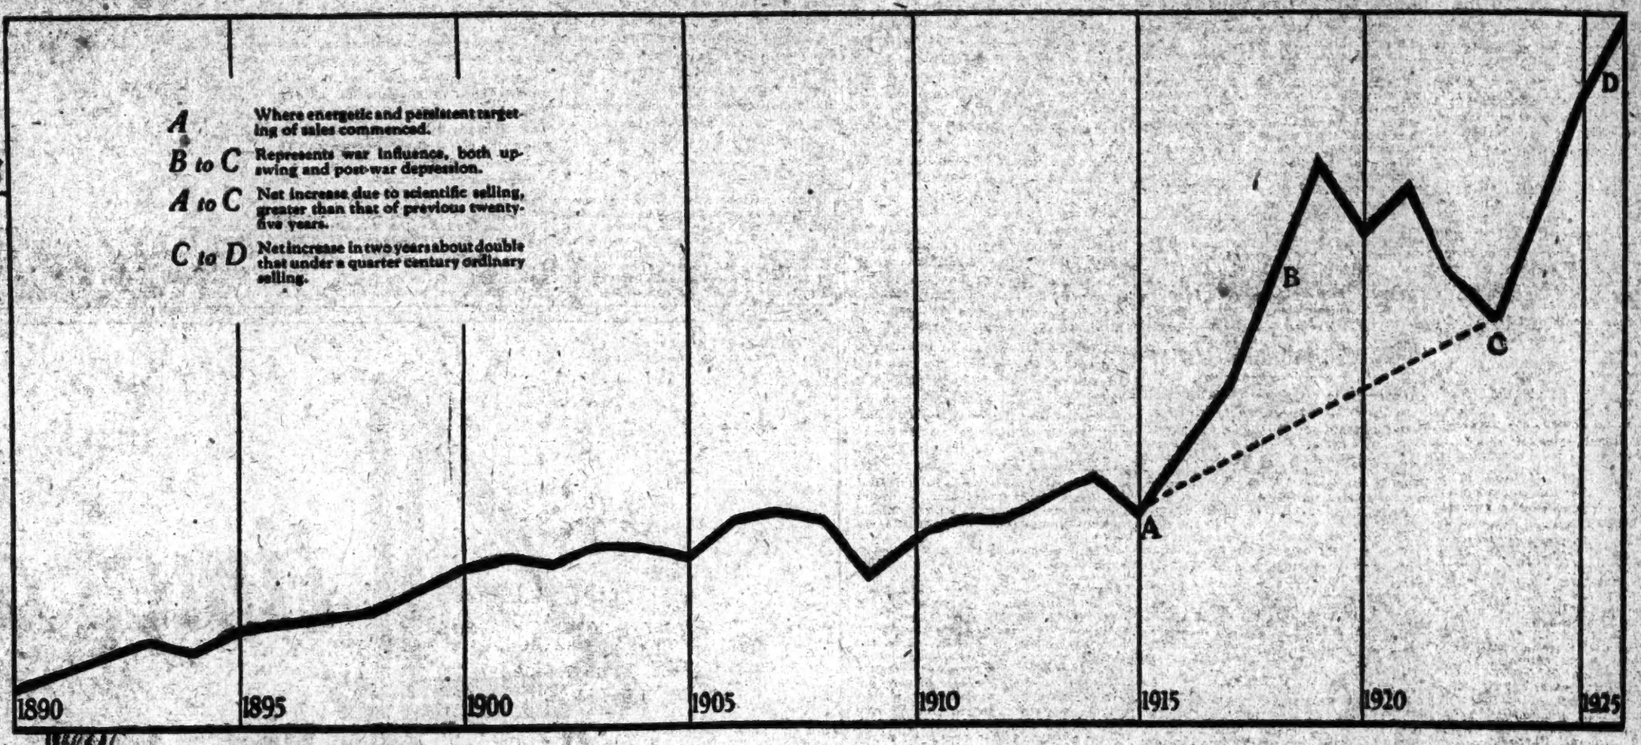
What the Weston Electrical Instrument Corporation did, as expressed in terms of the McGraw-Hill
FOUR PRINCIPLES OF INDUSTRIAL MARKETING

1. Market Determination: Each Market was analyzed and its sales possibilities were accurately appraised. The application of Weston instruments in solving the problems of each industry was also carefully worked out. This provided the salesmen with definite information on which to base their selling and eliminated misdirected effort.

2. Buying Habits: Since Weston salesmen were selling service first and instruments only as an incident to the service it became important to contact with the men who came closest to the problems involved. This idea was behind the careful study of buying habits.

3. Channels of Approach: The Weston Sales promotion program to get its story to the proper persons was nicely balanced to include the intensive use of publications which cover worth-while buying groups: manufacturers' literature and special missionary work through salesmen. These were supplemented by certain worthwhile exhibits.

4. Appeals that Influence: The Weston advertisements and literature were changed from descriptions of instruments and made a source of helpful information. Industry found in them solutions of its problems and suggestions for more efficient and economical operation. Salesmen keyed their selling to the same basis of helpfulness. This type of appeal was very helpful in winning recognition for Weston representatives.



AT SOME time in its career most every business faces a situation that is perplexing. The course is not always charted—the way not always clear.

The Weston Electrical Instrument Corporation faced perplexing situations not only once, but often. Tied up as they were with the electrical industry, their problem continually was to keep abreast of its ever-shifting development.

More than once the company saw markets which consumed as much as 40% of its volume gradually disappear. Fortunately the foresight of Weston engineers anticipated developments. The needed new types of instruments were ready.

But would Weston continue to keep sales mounting under shifting markets and the highly competitive conditions ahead?

What would be the position of the company when important patents expired?

These were the questions which faced the Weston corporation at various times.

The company answered them by deciding on a policy of intensive study and cultivation of markets. Not only were present markets analyzed and appraised, but trends were studied and many types and forms of new instruments were developed to meet the future markets. Complete detailed studies of the production problems of each market were placed in the hands of the Weston field organization. Salesmen were equipped to know where business was to be obtained and how to perform a service to the customer in getting it.

This plan squares perfectly with the McGraw-Hill Four Principles of Industrial Marketing, and the results prove their effectiveness.

The net result of ten years operation under this plan shows in the chart. A gain in eight years greater than that of the previous twenty-five is an achievement, while a gain in the past two years of about twice the gain of a quarter century is tremendous testimony to scientific selling.

Every manufacturer who sells to industry cannot fail to recognize the soundness of these McGraw-Hill Four Principles of Industrial Marketing. The important thing is to apply them to one's own selling. To help accomplish this the McGraw-Hill Company offers its fifty years accumulated experience with industry. The same wide knowledge of industry which makes the McGraw-Hill publications the authority in their fields is available to individual manufacturers and their advertising agents in working out their sales programs.

Each McGraw-Hill office is able to extend this service to manufacturers in its territory. Its staff of Marketing Counselors will be available at any time for conference on this most important matter. Such counsel is freely offered in the interest of efficient selling to industry.

SAYS DEATH PENALTY DOES NOT STOP CRIME

Darrow Appears Before House Committee as Opponent of Capital Punishment.

CITES ENGLISH HANGINGS

He Holds Execution of Pickpocket Afforded Harvest for Similar Thieves.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Clarence Darrow of Chicago, who has practiced criminal law for fifty years, today placed himself on record before a committee of Congress as an opponent of capital punishment.

As he slumped into his seat preparatory to beginning his talk, he puffed at a cigarette and swiftly appraised those he was about to address.

Mr. Darrow briefly discussed the Leopold-Loeb case as "one that was not likely to be duplicated in a thousand years," and "more generally misunderstood by the public than any that had come under his observation." He did not mention Leopold or Loeb by name.

Capital punishment was not a deterrent of crime, Mr. Darrow contended, and added that it was futile for the State to apply it as a corrective of crime. In qualifying as a witness, Mr. Darrow stated that he had appeared in about fifty cases in which the penalty was hanging or electrocution.

Mr. Darrow came to Washington at the solicitation of supporters of the bill aimed at capital punishmen in Washington.

"Have any of your clients ever received the death penalty?" Mr. Darrow was asked.

"Not yet," replied the witness.

"We're all killers at heart," he said. "Of course, I have never taken anybody's life, but I have often read obituary notices with considerable satisfaction. It just happens that circumstances have favored me."

With hands thrust in his pockets, Mr. Darrow delivered a long-drawn-out lecture on religion, law, prohibition, the underworld and murder.

"England," he said, "used to kill a man for picking pockets. They held their executions on a high hill so all could see and feel the deterrent effect, but there were more pickpockts among the crowds surrounding the scaffold than at any other time. We are not as honest as they were in England in those days.

"If capital punishment really prevents crime, we should execute our murderers in the public square, on high hills, or on the tops of our skyscrapers. Everybody should be required to attend; the schools and factories and business houses should be let out, just as they are on a holiday. The children should start right by seeing what we do to those who go wrong. Movies should be taken, and the front pages should be covered with details of the murderer's last hours.

"If the teachings of all the great ethical leaders of humanity are true, society is going at it the wrong way. Maybe they are wrong, but they have taught that the world is to be made good and clean of heart by love, and not by hate. I don't know if they are right; I do know that their teachings are not followed, though they are accepted."

Alleges Criminals Are Made Cautious.

Mr. Darrow said that his experience had led him to the conclusion that capital punishment has the effect of making the criminal more cautious and wary in planning crime so as to escape detection. He illustrated his point with what he described as the "barnyard psychology" of a boy surreptitiously lifting a pot of jam from his mother's shelf and shifting the onus on to his baby sister the next time by daubing her face with the jam.

Mr. Darrow stated that 90 per cent. of crime is found among boys or men who began a life of crime in early youth. Most of these criminals, he said, are poor and uneducated boys who have never had a chance.

Regrets That Rivalry of Opera Companies Keeps Her From City's Stage, She Says.

Mary Garden, prima donna of the Chicago Opera Company, went on the air last night for the third time in her career and seemed to enjoy the experience. Miss Garden sang at the annual dinner of the Fred F. French Company at the Hotel Biltmore, the music being broadcast by Station WJZ.

Her songs included "Depuis le Jour," an aria from "Louise," the opera in which she made her début at the Opéra-Comique in Paris in 1900; "Habanera," from "Carmen"; "At Dawning," by Charles Wakefield Cadman; "Serenade" by Tosti, and a group of Scotch songs, among which was "Comin' Thro' the Rye."

Last night's radio appearance was her first in New York for three years, Miss Garden said. "Oh, it has nothing to do with New York audiences," she explained quickly. "I belong to an opera company. And opera companies are worse than prima donnas."

She locked her fingers to indicate the rivalry of competing opera companies, explaining that the Chicago Opera Company stayed away from New York because of the Metropolitan.

"I only wish my New York audiences could hear me in my latest role, 'The Resurrection.'" Miss Garden said ecstatically. "That's a role for you. It's magnificent. Tonight I leave for Boston on the sleeper to sing 'Pelleas and Melisande' tomorrow evening. So you see, I'm not a free woman—not when it comes to singing."

REBUFFS DOHENY AGAIN.

Federal Circuit Court Denies Appeal on Lease Cancellation.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 1 (AP).—Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, lost his fight today in the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals to prevent cancellation of the Doheny leases in the naval oil reserves in California.

A petition seeking reversal of the court's recent decision in the case was overruled. Counsel for Doheny obtained a stay of execution to enable him to prepare an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court.

The Circuit Court decision stripped the oil magnate of his rights to naval oil lands in California under the leases and also canceled $11,000,000 in allowances granted by the trial court for work done at Pearl Harbor and in the California fields.

SEEK HEALTHIEST MOTHER.

15,000 Will Compete in United Neighborhood House Contest.

Fifteen thousand mothers, members of seventy-five Mothers' Clubs of the United Neighborhood Houses, it was announced yesterday, will begin undergoing weight tests today as the preliminary of the Healthiest Mother Contest conducted by the United Neighborhood Houses. The winner will receive a prize of $100 on Feb. 24 offered by the Life Extension Institute.

The weights of the contestants will be recorded during the next two weeks at the Neighborhood Houses, where nurses will examine them, and those whose general health seems best will be sent for more detailed examinations to the Health Center and Chelsea Clinic. There the seventy-five district winners will be chosen, and from them will be selected, at the Department of Health, the prize winner.

Dr. Louis I. Harris, Health Commissioner, endorsed the contest yesterday, saying it was the first of its kind, and that he hoped it would interest all mothers in their own and their children's health, impressing upon them the importance of periodic health examinations.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Sisterhood of Mount Neboh Temple, 564 West 150th Street, will hold its annual bazaar in the vestry rooms of the temple Feb. 8, 9 and 10.

The nineteenth anniversary of the founding of The New Yorkers, an organization of native-born residents, will be celebrated on Feb. 15 with a dinner dance at the Hotel Astor. Mrs. Olive Stott Gabriel is President.

The Southern Women's Education Alliance, 377 Madison Avenue, appeals for funds to continue its activities among young women in the Southern States in educational and occupational training. Last year 883 girls were helped. The alliance acts in cooperation with the Universities of North Carolina and Virginia.

Gen. Bullard Says Support Was Assured to Hanson in the Seattle Strike.

CALLS IT 'MILITARY SECRET'

F. H. Sisson, Speaking at the Same Meeting, Declares Europe Is Liquidating Her Hates.

Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard revealed yesterday that the crushing of the I. W. W. strike in Seattle in 1919 was not due to the initiative of Mayor Ole Hanson, who at the time received credit for ending the disturbance. Instead, General Bullard said, a telephone call from Washington advised Mayor Hanson to take energetic measures, an dassured hi mof the support of the United States Army in the emergency.

Addressing the Government Club at the Hotel Astor yesterday, General Bullard, who is President of the National Security League, said:

"I am letting you into a military secret when I tetil you that Ole Hanson was called up from the office of the Secretary of War in Washington, and told that he must have backbone in meeting the crisis. He was told that the Army would back him up in whatever steps he undertook."

Episodes like the Seattle strike and the blowing up of bridges and tunnels during the war were warnings, General Bullard continued, "that the National Security League is still needed. We must still guard not so much against foreign enemies as against the traitors in our own country in case of trouble."

After ten years of war and its aftermath Europe it at last "liquidating her hates," Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, told members of the club. Mr. Sisson said that 1925 had been "the first year of peace" since the World "the first year of peace" since the "Almost overnight there seems to have come over Europe a marked psychological change," Mr. Sisson declared, "a desire for peace that is paramount even to the prejudices and hates and national aspirations which once seemed so vital. In a year which began with the organization of the Dawes plan, which saw the Locarno Conference and finally the entrance of the United States into the World Court, we have moved further toward peace as a reality in world affairs than ever before since the beginning of the twentieth century.

"Europe has moved out of the by-paths of chauvinism and radicalism toward sane conservatism. For the first time since the war men are working without the threat of impending disaster, without the battle between hope and fear, faith and doubt as to the future.

"I have the feeling that for a quarter century no year has opened with so much promise and so great a warrant for optimism as 1926. The will to work and the will to live pervade this new world of today; and from that will to progress, progress will be made. The turn to the right which has marked 1925 may then be the clearly defined trend of the new year."

Mr. Sisson expressed his satisfaction with the entry of the United States into the World Court, but regretted we had not entered the League of Nations "under proper conditions."

BRENNAN SENTENCED TO DIE

Ex-Policeman's Penalty Set for Week Beginning March 8.

John J. Brennan, a former policeman, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Alonzo G. McLaughlin in the Kings County Court to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison in the week beginning March 8 for the murder of Samuel Krainin in the Clymer Street Police Station on Jan. 5. Brennan offered no response when the Court asked him if he had any statement to make. His attorney, David Malbin, made several motions, including one to set aside the verdict on several grounds, all of which were denied.

Brennan's mother, Mrs. Mary A. Brennan, and his sister, Agnes, were the only members of his family present. It was said that Mrs. Anastasia Brennan, the convicted man's wife, was ill at their home. No move has been made for an appeal from the sentence, but his relatives are preparing to make one which will stay his execution at the time scheduled.

President Says Rate Plea Is Based on Facts for Proper Authorities to Judge.

HEARING RESUMES TODAY

City Expected to Close Its Case After Calling Maltbie and Consulting Engineer.

Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson, in an interview published on Sunday concerning the pending application of the New York Telephone Company for increased rates, criticized the methods of computation used by the company, and in reference to comparison made by the company between the rates of telephone service and the cost of living, said:

"The comparison made by the company appears to have been presented to confuse the issues and to make a basis for higher rates superficially attractive. The President of the New York Telephone Company, who apparently authorized the comparison, knows better or should know better."

J. S. McCulloh, President of the company, made this comment yesterday:

"The statement attributed to Mr. Nicholson is skilfully phrased in line with the usual contentions of the city in all litigations involving the rates of public utility companies in this city. Although the statement is erroneous in what it says, its greatest significance is in what it omits to say. His imputation that the President of the New York Telephone Company is either ignorant of the fact or is attempting deliberately to deceive the public is apparently an expression of personal viewpoint. He is entitled to his opinion, but I may say for the company that it bases its case on the law and the facts. It is content to leave to the proper authorities the determination of the facts and the merits of the case."

When the hearing on the company's application is resumed by the Public Service Commission today, Assistant Corporation Counsel M. M. Fertig will call Milo R. Maltbie, the city's expert, and James G. Wray, a consulting engineer of Chicago. It is expected that the city will close its case with these witnesses, and that tomorrow the company will cross-examine Manfred K. Toeppen, a consulting engineer, on valuation problems of public utilities.

Representatives of the city commented during the day on the fact that in 1924 and 1925 the company spent nearly $700,000 in legal fees to accomplish its purpose of obtaining higher rates. It was said that during the same time the cost in legal fees to the city was only between $35,000 and $40,000. The city, it was pointed out, was carrying the main burden of opposing the claims of the company.

Dividends Regularly for 40 Years

Constant war on waste
Products of first quality
Uninterrupted dividends
Stability of earnings
Small profits per pound on large volume

The life history of Swift & Company's operations is thus briefly summarized.

The chemical laboratory and the constant search for improved methods have reduced waste to a minimum. They have also enabled us to improve greatly the quality of your meat.

Thrift and conservative policies have made it possible to pay dividends without interruption for 40 years, although our profits have averaged only a fraction of a cent per pound of product.

Swift & Company thrift has benefited others beside Swift shareholders. A portion of the gains resulting from thrift is passed along to the producers of live stock and to the consumers of meat. Competition sees to that.

4 times as many

Here's News –

On all regularly priced cigars, cigarettes and tobaccos purchased in United Cigar Stores in the Metropolitan District, we now give 4 times as many Profit Sharing Certificates as heretofore—8 instead of 2 on the dollar.

Here's Money –

Here's Why –

We're celebrating our 25th year in business and want to make this our Jubilee Year. In the 25 years we've been giving them, these certificates have saved the people $75,000,000.

Here's How –

United Profit Sharing Certificates—which millions of people have come to regard as actual currency—enable you to buy hundreds of useful, beautiful and desirable articles, of standard make and recognized value, for yourself, your home, your family or friends. With these certificates you can shop at our Premium Store in the same way as at a department store. Step into any United Cigar Store and ask for a United Premium Catalog.

And remember—at all United Cigar Stores—Cigars Good—Cigarettes and Tobaccos Fresh—Service Right. Buy regularly at United Cigar Stores and save 12c on the dollar. Save coupons.

WHELAN says -

People used to say "Coupons made the United"—Now they know that the United made the coupon!—They know that good cigars—fresh tobaccos and cigarettes and good service made the United—Coupons made possible a cash discount on even the smallest purchases—a practical device most suitable to the cigar store business—Smokers are saving six-million dollars in United Cigar Stores this year.

NEW PUFFED BODICE SHOWN

Dresses and Skirts Continue Short, Knee Display Remaining Popular.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The general features of Chantal's line of Spring dresses are bouffant bodices, full skirts, sometimes pleated all around, sometimes circular and gathered again in pleats and sometimes pleated but unpressed, to give the dress more fullness.

The tailor-mades have short coats and are made up in coarse woolen materials, or in "fancy" fabrics. Some have collars made with two short bands crossing in front. The blouses to go with these are made of Shetland wool lace, banded with kasha.

For sports wear a circular cape has inverted godets and may be worn over a chiffon gown, plain or banded with stretched kasha. Other printed chiffon gowns, with gathered skirts, have small boleros of plain chiffon lined with white. Shantung gowns banded with cloth or kasha, also shown for sport wear, have pretty straight collars made from a small band of corded linen or georgette. The very newest two-piece suit is a jumper and skirt of black taffeta having a cravat of white taffeta. This costume made a great sensation.

For evening wear there are light chiffon capes trimmed with tulle, and chiffon gowns with collars of waxed ostrich feathers. The colors favored are sand, pink, old red, light almond and green. The waistline is still a little lower than natural.

Le Long has a large collection, all in his cinetic type. Advocating the principle of movement in dresses, his gowns are flaring, with panels, pleats and scarves. The short skirts remain, but are very full, with the waistline somewhat higher, but irregular, shorter in front or back. Many of the waists give blouse effects. There are no more boat shaped necks.

The materials used are chiffon, georgette, plain or printed, and fine ducklingdown jersey and taffeta. All the materials are self-trimmed in biases, tucks, insertions, incrustations and the like. Two new colors are pale green, vert de au, and a special pink named rose matignon. These two colors are sometimes together in a bold but harmonious opposition. Brown, which was popular during the Winter, is no longer seen.

For business women Le Long has created several special costumes. The typical business frock is an ensemble, with the underdress feminine, and a decorative and plain, neat outer coat.

Many black lace gowns of very thin lace, sometimes lined with white lace, have flowers at the belt. A few dresses are shown with handbags to match and motor coats have blankets to match.

A new line was introduced to the Paris fashion world tonight when the well-known house of Drécoll held a formal Spring and Summer opening. Simply explained, it is a puffed bodice over a flaring skirt. This new "bouffe" is even applied to tailored suits with the addition of high collars and white jabots. There are no godets, but all kinds of pleats and shirred chiffon on the gowns.

M. Jenny, who also presented Spring and Summer models for the first time tonight, offered a new fabric called "Angora jersey." It is used in sports suits and shirred dresses, banded with stitched taffetas or golden or silver leather.

There is not the slightest sign in these two collections of lengthening dress. All the gowns shown are still quite short and there is no tendency to depart from the so-called "knee-displaying" skirt.

Drécoll's coats continue to flare. Some are with Swiss embroidery on taffeta, others of georgette or crêpe de chine hemmed with shaded wool or lace or embroidered in varicolored straw. Printed chiffon banded with velvet ribbon was also effectively used. There are many circular capes in Drécoll's collection, some of chiffon or tulle for evening wear. Others had high collars of fur.

Drécoll has used lace inserted on chiffon or tulle to a considerable extent in gowns. There are many pleated tulle gowns on metallic foundation. Some of the dresses are embroidered in beaded fringe, while pleated silver-cloth frocks and silver-pleated gowns are strikingly shown. A beautiful white georgette frock is striped with angora jersey bands.

All Drécoll's skirts are very short, with a natural waistline. The sleeves have been widened, with large pleated or square ruffle.

Prevailing colors in the collection are pink, yellow, "period green," chalk white and some gray.

Many of Jenny's suits have straight coats half-length in bright colors—red or beige, or navy-blue or black pleated skirts. Some of these coats are hemmed by a circular ruffle. The colors are high and there are a few boleros opened upon a white blouse.

Jenny's cloaks continue to flare. There are large pleats or pressed godets and occasionally godets are stitched as pleats. There are many ruffles in Jenny's dresses this season. On the woolen dresses there is a single ruffle at the hips or mid-length of the skirt.

There are likewise numerous ruffles displayed upon chiffon or crepe de chine gowns. Some blue taffetas, with crepe to match, are trimmed with small ruching.

EMILY POST

In her book "Etiquette," which is the unquestioned authority on correct table appointments and usages, Mrs. Post says:

"A water glass standing alone at each place makes a meager and untrimmed looking table." As a beverage Mrs. Post suggests ginger ale—either alone or combined with other beverages or fruit juices.

When asked which ginger ale she considered best, Mrs. Post unhesitatingly said Clicquot Club Pale Dry. She said:

"I think Clicquot Club Pale Dry is much the nicest ginger ale I have ever tasted. It is attractive in color, tempting, sparkling, and delicious in flavor. In fact, it seems to complete the hospitable effect of a perfectly appointed table."

She was a little thing and we remember she walked slowly.

They Came for 2 Weeks —and Stayed 22 Years!

We remember that they came in the Spring of 1904. He was a big, strapping young fellow with a worried look in his steel-blue eyes. She was a pale little thing with a sad sort of smile and we remember that she walked slowly.

They had been married two years and had "put up home" near Columbia University. She was one of those overwilling, conscientious women, who delight in keeping the home spotless as a new pin. So she broke down and her adoring young husband suggested a rest where it was quiet and comfortable.

They came for two weeks. A month later they sublet their apartment. Six months later they sold the furniture. Today they are still at the St. George.

That's one picture of the St. George. It is a friendly, companionable hotel. It has all the comforts of home with none of the drudgery. And so people stay.

Today the St. George is the fourth largest hotel in New York. It takes a whole block on Brooklyn Heights—only 4 minutes from Wall Street and 15 minutes from Times Square. Express Subway station in the building.

When you first arrive you are amazed at the number of sumptuous lobbies and restful lounge rooms. The orchestra very likely will be entertaining. You will notice people are contented.

When you see your room you will be amazed again. First at its unusual size. Second at its novelty, for here you get two rooms for the price of one—a beautiful living room by day and an equally delightful sleeping chamber by night. Furniture is of the finest and decorations are a pleasure to see.

When you dine you will be surprised once more. At the St. George you have the choice of three luxurious dining rooms — with modest prices for perfect food.

So that's why people stay so long at the St. George. Accessibility, large "two-in-one" rooms, splendid food, delightful social atmosphere. For a day or a year you'll be happy here.

What little story Mr. Colton has for "The Shanghai Gesture," put on last evening at the Martin Beck, he spreads thin and unskillfully through four highly embellished acts. For the rest, he serves up a piquant sauce of life in the Shanghai underworld among the habitues of the licensed quarter, of white degeneracy and exotic excitations in general, with esoteric insinuations masquerading half-respectfully in the rich vestments of Chinese scenes. As the crafty Chinese Mother Goddam, keeper of the best-known house in the district, and clearing house for stupendous State and commercial secrets, Florence Reed plays the monotonous-voiced, sly Oriental in the idiom of the melodramatic stage. Bronchial troubles before the footlights and incidental music behind the scenes both contrived to make the play difficult to hear last evening. But after the showiest scenes the audience applauded enthusiastically, as though it had got what it expected and sought.

All the action of "The Shanghai Gesture" passes between noon and midnight on one Chinese New Year's Day at the "far-famed house" of Mother Goddam, 17 San Kaisu Road, Shanghai, China. That sobriquet she had picked up among the jolly tars of the American Navy and retained as evidence of her sense of humor. At the close of the second act the plot begins to emerge. After the fish course of a dinner given to Sir Guy Charteris, taiman of the British-China Trading Company, with all of the most respected people of the city as guests, Mother Goddam reminds him of one thing he had forgotten—that she is the woman who twenty years ago had lived with him, believing his purely conventional promises of marriage. In short, he had made her what she was that night.

For the time being Mother Goddam appears to have the upper hand and to be enjoying the full sweetness of a revenge planned for long, cruel twenty years. Alas! this venerable dowager of the licensed quarter has unwittingly smitten her own head. In the next act it appears that one of the revelers in her house that New Year's night is her own daughter by Sir Guy Charteris, and, for the time being, in the none too innocent company of Prince Oshima of Japan. And that is how it comes about that Mother Goddam kills her own daughter in a lurid final scene and brings the curtain down to a threnody of sobs and lamentations.

In the meantime, "The Shanghai Gesture" introduces as by-play the intimacies of such a background in the Orient. In the second act, as pièce de résistance of the dinner, a young English girl is sold to the highest bidder in a rabble of impatient junk-men, and Mother Goddam as auctioneer seems at that moment to plumb the nadir depths of depravity. Yet stay! Even this woman of professional evil retains her personal ideals. In the next act she washes her cheek, rather ostentatiously, where it has been kissed by Prince Oshima's unbridled and thoroughly intoxicated inamorata. In spite of these divertissments, however, "The Shanghai Gesture" never quite cloaks the barrenness of its plot and story. For most of the pyrotechnics go off all by themselves, with scant relation to the fable.

In costumes and scenery Mr. Colton's play has been richly adorned. "The Grand Red Hall of Lily and Lotus Roots" for the second act, "The Little Room of the Great Cat" for the third, and especially "The Green Stairway of the Angry Dragon" for the fourth, are lavish in their traditional gold ornaments, their regal panelings, their mosaics and Chinese reds. The series of latticed stairs and platforms in the final scene, climbing to dizzy heights above the stage, are beautifully designed and created. And the Oriental costumes, spangled and brocaded, fairly bewilder the eye. For so jejune a drama, the scenic investiture becomes sheer luxury.

Miss Reed's part has been written in one key of restraint, dignity and sly humor. Although she plays it faithfully throughout, four acts of this unrelieved even temper become rather tedious. As Sir Guy Charteris, Mr. Morris plays the cynical and jaded English degenerate according to formula. Miss Duncan goes through the maudlin scenes of her part as the sinful daughter with the familiar bravura. Mr. Gordon acts well the Japanese Prince. A large cast of hangers-on, dinner guests, coolies, servants and businesslike "apprentice mice" prove adequate to their incidental responsibilities.

STARS TO AID ACTORS' FUND

Features of Annual Performance at Jolson's Theatre Today.

The annual benefit performance in aid of the Actors' Fund of America will take place this afternoon at Jolson's Theatre. Those announced to take part include Lina Abarbanell, José Alessandro, Martha-Bryan Allen, Irene Bordoni, Walter Catlett, Herbert Corthell, Cicely Courtneidge, Berton Churchill, Bijou Fernandez, Gitz Rice, Yvonne George, Ernest Glendinning, Sessue Hayakawa, Jack Hulbert, Dennis King, Madge Kennedy, Otto Kruger, Gregory Kelly, Willard Mack, Grant Mitchell, Fania Marinoff, Helen MacKellar, Nance O'Neil, Blanche Ring, E. H. Sothern, Queenie Smith, Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer, Laurette Taylor, Van and Schenck, Charles Winninger and Irene Franklin.

The numbers will include a sketch by H. I. Phillips, entitled "Cross-Examinations in a Court of Domestic Relations"; "The Honeymooners," by Aaron Hoffmann; "The Bottle," by T. P. Taylor, and "Hector Was No Pup," by the author of "Isabel." In addition, Roger Wolfe Kahn will lead the Biltmore Orchestra; the march number from "The Vagabond King" will be sung; a musical number entitled "Dear Yesterdays" has been staged by Joseph Santley, and another dance number has been arranged by Ned Wayburn.

Fields to Produce 'The Girl Friend.'

Lew Fields will presently re-enter the field of musical comedy production, with a musical piece entitled "The Girl Friend" as his first offering. It will be presented on Broadway in March and will be followed by a revue.

Mr. Fields himself will not appear in "The Girl Friend," the cast of which will be headed by Sam White and Eva Puck. "The Girl Friend" was written by Herbert Fields, Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, authors of "Dearest Enemy."

FUN AND SENTIMENT BLENDED IN 'EMBERS'

A chess game in infidelities with a checkmate arrived at by a move so obvious that it is almost obsolete in the modern comedy form of the game furnishes equally the matter of merriment and that of sentiment in "Embers," as imported from France in an English package by A. E. Thomas and presented to New York last night by Henry Miller and his company in Mr. Miller's own theatre. The French original by Pierre Wolff and Henri Duvernois combines melodrama and polite farce in the shameless and irresistible fashion of Paris. There they dare to be at once and in the same breath noble and naughty—to play with love and take the consequences. In spite of it they are also often very fond of their wives. And they dote on their children. That's Paris.

This is New York. What Mr. Thomas was supposed to do was to make this very French play into something which says the same thing in English. It can't be said in English, exactly. So Mr. Thomas has had the courage to let a lot of it stay as French as the English words will let it. Some of the English words are very plain words indeed, where the situation is most French. On the other hand, Mr. Thomas has written into the piece passages of comedy so deftly done that they ought to be French. They are delightful.

If you happen to like the really French part, it is all delightful. If you happen to think of the other delightfully different things Mr. Thomas has done, you may be struck with amazement and surprise at what the French have done to Thomas. Anyway, it is an interesting and ingenious invention, interestingly and ingeniously furnished with a new dress.

Henry Miller was the wronged husband who got so abundantly even by adding two wrongs together to make a right and sweetening the dish with gestures of kindness and generosity. He provided the combination of inner—and incorrigible—simplicity and sincerity with outer urbanity which the part called for. Moreover, he succeeded in playing in admirable key with the French play without being in the least French.

Miss Crews was the originally wrong lady who loved a rotter and found him out a bit late. Quite a deal of acting is required of that lady. She has to make perfidious passionate love to the wronged husband and do it in vain, she has to have a noble attitude of recovered virtue spoiled. Miss Crews does it all in her accustomed competent manner, though Mr. Miller explained that she had "jumped into the part" at the last minute.

An excellent comic French father-in-law was supplied by Edwin Nicander without the aid of gray mustaches, and a picturesque and very nasty cat got everything that was coming to her from Ilka Chase. Florence Shirley was the young person who supplied the human sacrifice for the two wrongs that composed the right that made everything right in the end. Let that high privilege suffice her.

"THE MATINEE GIRL" HERE.

New Musical Comedy at Forrest is Modest and Mildly Agreeable.

THE MATINEE GIRL, a musical comedy in two acts and six scenes. Book and lyrics by McElbert Moore and Bide Dudley, music by Frank Grey. Directed by Oscar Eagle; dances and ensembles staged by S. Lee Rose; produced by Ed Rosenbaum Jr. At the Forrest Theatre.

A simple and modest musical comedy, with one or two pretty good reasons for modesty, arrived last night at the reasonably new Forrest Theatre, in Forty-seventh Street. It is entitled "The Matinee Girl," and as musical comedies go it may be described as about average. Judged strictly by content, as a matter of fact it probably rates a bit below that, but for some reason the total effect is mildly agreeable—certainly not irritating. The answer is to be found in the production's happy unpretentiousness.

"The Matinee Girl" begins promisingly in a theatre box, but thereafter proceeds along traditional musical comedy lines, with a pretty good dash of "David Garrick" in its second act. A yacht and a patio provide the backgrounds for most of the action, and the humors, in turn, are of a serviceable nature. Some lively moments in the second act did much to justify a rather languid beginning.

Most of the comedy is accounted for by one Gus Shy, last seen hereabouts in "Lollipop." He is given more to do in "The Matinee Girl," and is considerably more comic. Not convulsing as yet, you understand, but conveying unmistakably the feeling that development is under way. The beguiling Juliette Day is another member of the cast. The conventional leading rôles are looked after by James Hamilton and Olga Steck, matters being made difficult for Miss Steck by the fact that the plot calls for her to undertake one of those masculine masquerades. For an entire act Miss Steck would have the rest of the cast believe that she is a cabin boy, and her success can be explained only on the ground that they didn't want to spoil things.

The tunes are sufficient unto the evening and the scenery and costumes a little less than that.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The first of a series of matinees of "Little Eyolf" will be given at the Guild Theatre this afternoon, and "The Great Gatsby" will open at the Ambassador tonight.

"Up the Line," which had been expected to open here next week, will remain on tour a few weeks longer.

"Hello, Lola," now at the Elting, will move next week to the Maxine Elliott, at present occupied by Mme. Kalich's revival of "Magda."

"The Right Age to Marry," with Mr. and Mrs. Coburn as its stars, opened last night in Atlantic City.

Carroll MacComas will play the leading feminine role in "You Can't Win," soon to be produced.

The opening of "The Unchastened Woman" at the Princess Theatre has been deferred to Tuesday evening, Feb. 16. "The Master Builder," accordingly, will continue at the theatre through next week.

"The Night Duel," which opens at the new Mansfield Theatre on Feb. 15, had its first performance last night in Albany. Marjorie Rambeau is the star, and Daniel Rubin the author.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

Her Two Flames.

MEMORY LANE, with Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel, William Haines, John Steppling, Eugenia Ford, Frankie Darrow, Joan Standing, Dot Farley, Katz Price and others; written by John M. Stahl and Benjamin Glazer; directed by Mr. Stahl. Prelude, "The Bird Song" from "Pagliacci." Vincent Lopez and his orchestra. "Ko-Ko Baffles the Bulls," an "Inkwell" cartoon. At the Mark Strand.

An amusing, smoothly running small town comedy, labeled "Memory Lane," is the principal screen offering at the Mark Strand this week. In it a baby shares honors with the natural and charming Eleanor Boardman. The child, who unfortunately is not conceded a place in the list of players, was blissfully unconscious that the great grinding machine so close to him was a camera, and he never knew, as he slept in his high-back chair, that spectators throughout the country would laugh hilariously at his quiescent 2-year-old countenance. He registers wonder in his first waking moments and possibly because of the blaze of artificial light—and his rebellious expression at being rudely disturbed to look at a great big toy horse evoked a wave of merriment in the theatre yesterday afternoon. Afterward this tiny performer climbs from his chair on to the table and starts to attack the sugar-coated birthday cake, which action brought forth another peal of delight. He elicited murmurs of sympathy when eventually he flopped over on the table with his little head using the cake as a pillow.

In the introductory episode of this photoplay there is a humorous tangle, which while it might not happen very often in everyday life is nevertheless diverting. The subsequent chapters are unfolded with a gentle appreciation for subtlety and also for wholesome nonsense. John M. Stahl, the director of this feature, was also coauthor of the chronicle with Benjamin Glazer. Mr. Stahl has inserted a number of cheerfully original ideas in the course of telling the tale, which concerns a girl named Mary, who had two sweethearts. On the night she is to be married to Jimmie Holt she finds herself rather reluctant to give up Joe Field. She kisses Joe and then hurries into the house for the wedding, after which she and her husband endeavor to slip away quietly in order to avoid on that rainy night the customary shower of rice and slippers. They are, however, discovered, and in the excitement Joe, who was not even a wedding guest, finds himself pressed into the car. He pulls down the brim of his hat and officiates as chauffeur. Then there follows the discovery of his identity by Jimmie, who alights from the car and enrages Joe so completely that the latter drives away with the bride, leaving Holt standing in the soaking rain. Mary and Joe were stranded miles out in the country without gasoline and are only rescued from their dilemma at sunrise.

Following that Mary returns to her husband, being held blameless for the sorry adventure. They live happily for two years, and then ensues a laughable stretch when Joe appears as a showoff, loud in his dress and manners. This is a come-down for Joe, and Mary, who at first was quite thrilled at the idea of seeing her old beau, concludes that she made a very wise choice.

Miss Boardman is restrained and attractive and she dresses the part of Mary conscientiously. Conrad Nagel is sympathetic as the fortunate husband. William Haines gives an earnest performance, but in the closing scenes he is too much like a race track tout, which is possibly due to Mr. Stahl's zealousness to introduce sufficient raison d'être and comedy.

Vincent Lopez and his orchestra blaze the trail for this film. Mr. Lopez gives a rattling good entertainment in which melody is mixed with humor. This musical offering and the photoplay yesterday caused one to forget the miserable weather outside.

SZIGETI WINS AN OVATION.

Violinist Confirms His European Reputation as a Master Artist.

The second recital of Joseph Szigeti at Aeolian Hall last evening confirmed his European reputation as a master violinist. He is virile, firm and dignified, rather than emotional. He kept his audience absorbed through an exacting program, each number leading to recalls. Unlike Heifetz, Szigeti, instead of seeming to ignore his instrument in a lofty manner, centered his whole mind upon it. Corelli's "La Folia" gave this impression. Mr. Szigeti was recalled twice at its conclusion.

Bach's rarely heard Sonata in A minor for violin alone was played with the breadth and authority which mark the mature artist. For this the violinist was recalled three times.

A first performance here of Schubert's Sonata in A was with the calm elegance suitable to the composition. For contrast, Mr. Szigeti offered a first performances in New York of a Busoni "Albumblatt," dated 1917, its only claim to distinction being the composer's name. A Debussy Sonata, also of the year 1917, shone with the originality and individuality of its composer.

Mr. Szigeti closed his highly successful recital with one of Hubay's characteristic pieces, "Scene de la Csarda," and was clamorously recalled to play an encore.

GIL VALERIANO IN DEBUT.

Tenor Displays a Voice of Warm and Pleasing Quality.

Gil Valeriano, assisted by Frank La Forge, gave his first public recital in this city last night in Town Hall. Mr. Valeriano has a tenor voice of warm and pleasing quality. He sings with a good command of tone color and an excellent legato. His voice is unusually well placed and unusually well controlled for a singer of limited experience. The program included songs by Donaudy, Handel, Pergolesi, Sibella, Franz, Loewe, Strauss, Lalo, Koechlin, Padilla; songs less frequently sung by Ybarra ("Granadinas") and "Guetary" ("Minina"); three songs by Mr. La Forge and the well-known tenor aria from Flotow's "Martha."

Mr. Valeriano was particularly effective in the Spanish songs, which he sang with an instinct for their style which is inborn, and in the aria, which displayed his upper register to marked advantage. He also showed taste and sympathy with songs of other nations and in other tongues than his own. This was a promising début. The audience repeatedly recalled the singer.

Jewish Theatrical Guild Benefit.

Mayor Walker plans to attend the entertainment for the benefit of the Jewish Theatrical Guild at the Manhattan Opera House on Sunday night.

"Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May," the song written by the Mayor, will be sung by Harry Cooper as part of the program. Others who will take part include George M. Cohan, Sam Bernard, George Jessell, Louis Mann, William Collier and the Four Marx Brothers and their company. The various acts will be introduced by Bertha Kalich, Robert Warwick, Wilton Lackaye, Mary Nash, Grant Mitchell, Florence Reed, Loney Haskell and others.

CHALIAPIN TO WRITE OPERA

Will Produce It With Young Singers After Tour of "The Barber."

DETROIT, Feb. 1 (AP).—Before the end of 1926 Feodor Chaliapin, the Russian basso, hopes to realise an ambition of two decades—a tour of the United States and Europe in an opera of his own production. He said so today shortly after his arrival for a concert appearance.

"Long ago," he said, "I conceived the idea of touring in a single opera, appearing not only in the big cities but in the smaller places as well. But the producers to whom I went offered me old scenery—and old singers. With such it would be impossible. I insist upon youth. No wornout sopranos and tenors for me. I will be the oldest in my company—and I will be the boss. Maybe I boast, but it will be the finest production you have ever seen."

"The Barber of Seville" is the opera chosen. Chaliapin already has engaged several artists to assist him in the venture and the stage sets now are being made in Paris. Should the venture succeed, Chaliapin said, he will abandon the concert stage.

An operetta also is being planned by the basso.

"For a long time I have had a melody in my head," he said. "Some day soon I will write it." And he hummed a dozen lilting airs.

OLGA PETROVA AT PALACE.

Sings Songs in Three Languages and Makes a Speech.

The new bill at the Palace Theatre is headed by Olga Petrova, who, despite her versatility, elects to restrict herself to a group of songs—English, Spanish and French. At the matinee yesterday these were received by the audience with every evidence of approval—so much so, as a matter of fact, that Mme. Petrova was tempted to make a long, long speech. Prospective patrons may attend the Palace in safety, however, because by this time not only has the speech probably been condensed but Mme. Petrova has doubtless decided more definitely as to what kind of accent to use.

The Palace program also includes a new clown from Spain, named Pepito—a comic who would plainly be more at home before Continental audiences but who contributed some amusing moments for all that. Others on the bill include Jack Rose—he of the straw hats—and a musical number, offered by Herman Timberg, entitled "Berlin vs. Liszt."

At the Hippodrome the beguiling Wilda Bennett heads the program, with Pepe de Albrew as a dancing partner. Among others are Solly Ward and an Albertina Rasch ballet.

LITTLE THEATRE IN LONDON

The "Arts" to Seat 350 Persons and Be Combined With Club.

LONDON, Feb. 1 (AP).—A new theatre, which will hold only 350 persons, is being planned by a few enthusiasts interested in the theatre from the art and production sides. It will be called the Arts Theatre of London and part of the premises will be used as a club.

The idea is to try out new plays for short runs, with a change of professional casts drawn from players and producers who are members of the club.

Audience Cheers Toscanini.

A special concert given by Arturo Toscanini and the New York Philharmonic Society last night in Carnegie Hall featured compositions which Mr. Toscanini had played on previous programs given here and attracted a very large and enthusiastic audience. The compositions were the Bach-Abert Prelude, Chorale and Fugue; Mendelssohn's Nocturne and Scherzo from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Siegfried's Death and the Funeral March from Wagner's "Götterdämmerung" and Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony. These performances were heard with intense interest. At the end of the concert the audience not only applauded, but cheered.

Louis James Poolers Give a Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis James Pooler gave a dinner last night at the Ambassador. Their guests were ex-Governor and Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brokaw, Mr. and Mrs. Anson W. Burchard, Mr. and Mrs. William Moore, Mr. and Mrs. J. Philip Benkard, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Van Beuren, Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist, Mrs. Herbert Shipman, Mrs. John B. Morris, Robert LeRoy, Francis Henry Balfour Byrne, Chesley Richardson and Louis Gordon Pooler.

Eureka Pipe Line Report for 1925.

The Eureka Pipe Line Company, Inc., a former Standard Oil Company subsidiary, yesterday reported an operating loss of $308,353 for 1925, against net income of $32,961 in 1924, equal to 64 cents a share on the $5,000,000 capital stock outstanding. The company last year paid out $200,000 in cash dividends, following which there was reported a deficit of $408,352. This reduced the profit and loss surplus to $2,827,185 as of Dec. 31, 1925, against $3,235,538 at the end of 1924.

HAMPDEN TO REVIVE 'CYRANO DE BERGERAC'

His Season With Ethel Barrymore to End Next Week—She Is to Appear in a Modern Comedy.

Walter Hampden and Ethel Barrymore will end their joint starring season at Hampden's Theatre next week, and Mr. Hampden will revive "Cyrano de Bergerac" during the week of Feb. 15. Miss Barrymore, it is announced, will be seen at another theatre early in March in a modern comedy, of which it is said at this time only that it is the work of a well-known playwright.

Mr. Hampden and Miss Barrymore, at the end of their engagement, will have given fifty-four performances of "The Merchant of Venice" and seventy-four performances of "Hamlet."

LOFT FILES COMPLAINTS.

Sues Frank Steinhardt, Havana Capitalist, Over Two Deals.

The complaint in the suit brought some months ago by George W. Loft against Frank Steinhardt, Havana capitalist, was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday. Mr. Loft sues for $400,000 on two claims. The first cause of action alleges that on June 23, 1920, at the request of the defendant, he lent 4,000 shares of Sinclair Consolidated Oil stock to him, to be returned on demand, or in any event within a week, and if the stock was not returned Steinhardt was to pay the full market value. The stock was not returned, and it is alleged that the value on June 30, 1920, was $125,000.

The second cause of action alleges that on March 26, 1920, Loft and Steinhardt agreed to buy a sugar plantation from Emeterio Zorrilla for $1,300,000, of which $650,000 was to be in cash. Mr. Loft alleges that Steinhardt agreed to pay half this sum and that the plaintiff advanced $60,000 while Steinhardt paid only $50,000. The plaintiff accordingly sued for $275,000 as the balance due on half the payment.

SMITH HEADS SHIP OWNERS

President Re-elected and Governors Chosen at Annual Meeting.

Alfred Gilbert Smith was re-elected President of the American Steamship Owners' Association at its annual meeting yesterday. William Newsome and Paul H. Harwood were elected Vice Presidents.

The following were elected to serve on the Governing Board: Alfred Gilbert Smith, H. F. Alexander, Calvin Austin, Ernest M. Bull, Ira A. Campbell, Harry C. Carr, Gale H. Carter, Robert Dollar, J. R. Gordon, Robert F. Hand, Paul H. Harwood, James Kennedy, Edgar F. Luckenbach, Winthrop L. Marvin, Emmet J. McCormack, Franklin D. Mooney, Frank C. Munson, William Mewson, Eugene E. O'Donnel, H. H. Raymond, Charles H. Reach and R. H. M. Robinson.

Reports of the year's activities of the various committees were presented. Mr. Smith urged that the association be represented at the International Shipping Conference to be held in London in April.

RUBBER PRICES DECLINE.

Crude rubber reacted yesterday, spot and future prices declining from 1 to 3 cents per pound, spot ribbed sheets yielding 2 cents, to 68 cents, while shipment rubber lost the maximum ground. Business was on a moderate scale, the turnover running to a small tonnage in spot and April-June delivery.

Stocks in London experienced the first decrease in several weeks, the total of 9,943 tons showing a reduction of 199 tons from the amount held a week ago. The London market also showed unsettlement, spot going 1¼d lower, at 32¾d.

Quotations for the leading grades follow:

SCREEN NOTES.

At the Rialto next week the film feature will be Robert J. Flaherty's South Sea production, "Moana." Mr. Flaherty made "Nanook of the North."

The International Film Arts Guild's revival today at the Cameo is Charlie Chaplin's noted directorial achievement, "A Woman of Paris." Cecil B. De Mille's film conception of Sir James M. Barrie's play, "The Admirable Crichton,"—which is known as "Male and Female" on the screen—will be exhibited tomorrow.

TO TRY FOR SCHNEIDER CUP

Second British Entry Received by the Royal Aero Club.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Another British entry for the Schneider cup race has been received by the Royal Aero Club. It is from Colonel W. A. Bristow, one of the best known British aeronautical engineers, who will fly a monoplane constructed on entirely new lines.

This is the second British entry, the first being made when Mr. Saunders announced his intention to send out a team of three machines.

$4,000,000 Wuerttemberg Loan.

Proceeds of the $4,000,000 Consolidated Hydroelectric Works of Upper Württemberg thirty-year gold loan to be offered this week by W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc., will be used, it was said yesterday, for the construction of two new hydroelectric plants, several new sub-stations, the enlargement of existing plants, extension of the company's distribution system and for the retirement of floating indebtedness. Besides the first mortgage security embracing the company's hydroelectric plants and other properties, fifteen counties in Württemberg will be jointly liable for the payment of the principal and interest of the loan.

ASK FOREIGN TRADE SERVICE

Resolutions for Its Founding to Be Put Before Chamber of Commerce.

Resolutions favoring the establishment of a foreign commerce service under the supervision of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Service will be introduced at the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, according to a report sent to the members yesterday by Howard Ayres, Chairman of the chamber's Committee on Foreign Commerce and the Revenue Laws.

A bill is now before Congress, known as H. R. 3598, Mr. Ayres said, which will greatly increase and facilitate American foreign trade. The bill provides for a service to consist of officials to be graded and known as commercial attachés, assistant commercial attachés, trade commissioners and assistant trade commissioners. The bill would readjust the duties of the men now in this service of the Government.

Loan Here Stirs German Shares.

The recent offer of an issue of $3,000,000 twenty-year 7½ per cent. mortgage bonds, with stock purchase warrants attached, for Leonhard Tietz, Inc., a large German chain store, has stimulated the activity of the shares on the Berlin Stock Exchange, according to a cable received by the bankers here who sold the bonds. The shares sold yesterday at $19.93, as compared with $17.34 on the day before the bonds were issued. The warrants on the bonds call for fifteen shares at $20 per share.

DRAMATISTS EXPECTED TO CREATE CLOSED SHOP

Meet Today to Hear Report of Contract Committee in Fight With Film Producers.

Another meeting of the American Dramatists, at which it is expected that the playwrights will formally adopt their new contract and create the closed shop, will take place this afternoon at the Hotel Roosevelt. The playwrights will hear the report of the Contract Committee, of which George Middleton is the Chairman, and will probably take action of a definite nature.

The adoption of closed shop by the playwrights grows out of the recent agitation brought about by the financing of Broadway producers by film manufacturers, notably the Fox company. If the playwrights take the expected action today play producers will be permitted to deal only with members of the association hereafter.

3 Attractions Move to New Stages.

Three productions were transferred last night to new stages.

"The Student Prince," after running for more than a year at Jolson's and the Ambassador, moved from the latter house to the Century.

"Princess Flavia," which has been playing at the Century, was transferred to the Shubert, and "The Monkey Talks" was moved from the Sam H. Harris Theatre to the National.

Mme. Jeritza Again Sings Fedora.

Mme. Jeritza, whose many concert engagements this Spring, foreshadow an early opera farewell, began what is probably her last fortnight and the Metropolitan's thirteenth week by singing for the third time in "Fedora" at the opera last evening. There was a brilliant supercription house. Edward Johnson sang for the first time as Count Loris, while Mr. Scotti, the Misses Guilford, Dalossy and Alcock, Messrs. Bada, Wolfe, Pelletier and others reappeared, and Mr. Papi conducted.

Very exclusive!

The fabrics which we so carefully test to make sure they're all-wool and fast color are all woven to our special order—no one else can show them!

Our designers collaborate not only with the best mills here, but with the best mills abroad.

Thanks to the quality of our business as well as the volume, our position in the trade is unique.

This season, for example, as a result of our foreign affiliations, we are showing even more novelties than the high priced tailors.

Rogers Peet soft hats and Derbies are designed to give the utmost in Style and Quality—values we're proud to have bear our name.

MRS. L. H. GALBRAITH WEDS R. A. COWLES

BRIDE OF OWEN JOHNSON

Mrs. Gertrude B. Le Boutillier Wed to Author by Rev. Dr. McLeod —His Fifth Marriage.

Mrs. Lotta Hamilton Galbraith was married to Russel A. Cowles yesterday at noon in All Angels' Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-first Street. The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Dr. S. De Lancey Townsend, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Harry P. Nichols in the presence of members of the two families. There were no attendants. A reception and wedding breakfast followed at the Plaza.

The bride, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hamilton of this city, was the widow of George L. Galbraith, who was Treasurer of the Coronet Phosphate Company of New York and Florida. This is also the second marriage for Mr. Cowles. His first wife, who died about a year ago, was Miss Louise M. Pfarrius. He has two sons, Ernest F. Cowles, who married Miss Katherine De Voe, and Francis R. Cowles, who lives with his father at the Plaza. Mr. Cowles is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Ansonia Clock Company and head of the firm of Russel A. Cowles Company, investment securities of 100 Broadway.

Mr. Cowles and his bride left yesterday afternoon for California to be away about a month. On their return they will be at the Plaza until they go abroad early in the Summer.

Johnson—Le Boutillier.

The marriage of Mrs. Gertrude Boyce Le Boutillier, widow of John A. Le Boutillier, to Owen Johnson, author, took place quietly on Sunday in the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. Malcolm James MacLeod, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the two families only. There were no attendants and no reception.

The bride, who is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christian N. Bovee, was first married to Hugh Mackay. They were divorced and she later was married to John A. Le Boutillier, who died about two years ago. She is a sister of Mrs. Bertrand L. Taylor Jr. of 615 Park Avenue.

This is the fifth marriage for Mr. Johnson, three of his wives having died. The second, who was Miss Esther Cobb, a singer known as Mme. Cobina, after their divorce became the wife of William May Wright. Mr. Johnson is the son of Robert Underwood Johnson, former American Ambassador to Italy.

MRS. CHURCH JR. REWED BY A PRIEST

Rites at Vanderbilt Home Just Before Sister Was Married to E. E. T. Smith.

BY THE REV. T. F. MURPHY

Announcement from Boston that the former Muriel Vanderbilt of this city and Frederick Cameron Church Jr. of Boston, who were married with Episcopalian rites in Newport last Summer, were remarried here recently by a Catholic priest was followed last night by this report by The Associated Press:

"An unusual double wedding took place on the afternoon of Jan. 7 in the palatial Vanderbilt home in Fifth Avenue.

"While hundreds of guests were gathered in the great drawing room to await the marriage of Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt to Earl E. T. Smith, a quiet ceremony was being concluded in an adjoining room to effect the remarriage, in the ritual of the family faith, of her sister, Muriel, to Frederick Cameron Church Jr. Few, if any, of the guests had the slightest inkling of the unscheduled ceremony.

"Confirmation of the report that the two ceremonies—so dissimilar in the staging—occurred almost simultaneously came last night from an authorized spokesman for Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, mother of both girls.

"Muriel's remarriage occurred just a few minutes before that of her sister, and Father Thomas F. Murphy officiated at both."

Confirmed by Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Confirmation of the remarriage came yesterday in an announcement from Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, who is now in Florida. The statement read:

"Not feeling that it was of interest to the press, it was not previously stated that some time ago a marriage ceremony was performed between my daughter and Mr. Church by a Roman Catholic priest."

The first marriage of Miss Vanderbilt to Mr. Church, who is an insurance broker, took place last July at Beachmond, Newport, which Mrs. Vanderbilt had leased. The ceremony was performed by Suffragan Bishop Herbert Shipman of the New York Diocese of the Episcopal Church, who was assisted by the Rev. Stanley C. Hughes, rector of Trinity Church, Newport.

$7,000,000 ALBA HOTEL OPENS AT PALM BEACH

Formal Event Set for Feb. 17—Duke of Alba Said to Have Postponed His Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 1.—Palm Beach's new $7,000,000 hotel, the Alba, was opened informally tonight. Only a score of guests attended the opening, although hundreds of visitors from this and nearby cities inspected the hotel.

Although Manager Fred Reed announced several weeks ago that the hotel would be ready for occupancy, few persons believed that the work would be sufficiently completed to permit the opening before Feb. 15.

The new hotel which was built by the Southern Florida Realty Company, of which Maurice Hecksher is president, was not thought of until last May and it was June 15 before the building began. Since that time 1,400 men have been working day and night to complete it.

The Alba is of mission Spanish style, built of concrete throughout and fireproof. It occupies the site of the old Palm Beach Hotel, which was destroyed by fire last March, on Northlake Trail, running back to Bradley Place. It is five stories high and has 550 rooms. Only four of the five floors are ready for occupancy now but the entire hotel is expected to be complete by Feb. 17, when the formal opening will be held. Governor John Martin of Florida and many northern visitors are expected to attend.

The ground floor is devoted to shops and a great arcade passes through from the lake trail to Bradley Place. Above these shops are the Spanish gardens and the hotel itself. The first floor contains the lobby, writing rooms, card rooms and a huge ballroom and grill room. The decorations are Spanish.

ONE IN THREE FAMILIES IN CITY OWNS A RADIO

One of every three families in New York City and one of every five families in the rest of the United States owns a radio set; radio sales have increased from $5,000,000 to more than $500,000,000 in the last five years, and nearly $15,000,000 was spent on broadcasting programs last year.

These are the outstanding facts revealed by a nation-wide survey of the radio industry, the findings of which were announced by Arthur Williams, Vice President in charge of commercial relations of the New York Edison Company, at the opening of the third annual Edison Radio Show at Fifteenth Street and Irving Place, yesterday.

There are twenty-two broadcasting stations in the metropolitan area, while all of Great Britain has only seventeen, France and Germany having thirteen stations each. With a total of 563 broadcasting stations throughout the country, the United States far outdistances the combined total of stations of all the rest of the world.

LADY KAYE IS HOSTESS.

Gives a Luncheon for Duchess of Norfolk and Lady Rachel Howard.

Lady Lister Kaye, who has been at the Ambassador since her return from England, gave a luncheon yesterday for the Duchess of Norfolk and Lady Rachel Howard, daughter of the Duchess, who have been the guests of Mrs. William V. Griffin. The other guests were the Countess of Limerick, Mrs. Arthur Glasgow and her daughter, Miss Marjorie Glasgow, of London; Mrs. Henry White, Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. Francis S. E. Drury, Mrs. James Watson Gerard, Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Mrs. F. Gray Griswold, Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Francis Key Pendleton, Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mrs. Ernest Iselin, Mrs. James Cox Brady and Miss Mercedes de Arango.

The Duchess of Norfolk and Lady Rachel Howard will go to Washington later for a visit with the British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, and his wife, Lady Isabel Howard.

Lady Lister Kaye is the former Miss Nattica Ynaga, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Ynaga of this city, and a sister of the late Duchess of Manchester, the former Miss Consuelo Ynaga.

MGR. McGEAN VERY ILL.

Pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church Has Heart Disease.

Mgr. James H. McGean, pastor of St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, in Barclay Street, is critically ill with heart disease at the rectory. He is the oldest priest in active service in the Archdiocese of New York, pastor of the oldest church in the archdiocese and has served longer as pastor of one church than any other priest.

The Monsignor is 85 years old, he has been pastor of St. Peter's for forty-five years and the parish is 141 years old.

The oldest Catholic Church in the city is noted for its activities. Every day there are noon services and vespers for business people.

Miss Laura Lane to Wed on Feb. 16.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edwin Lane of 11 Winfield Avenue, Mount Vernon, have sent out invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Laura Lane, to Frank Montgomery Dunbaugh Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Mrs. Robert Stone of Brookline, Mass., and the Misses Frances Gibson and Josephine Buckner of Bronxville and Elizabeth Hunn of this city. Joseph B. Dunbaugh will be his brother's best man. Kenneth Chalmers of Scarsdale, Waldo Tucker of this city, Elliott Bates of Bronxville and George J. Dunbaugh Jr. of Chicago will be ushers.

Miss Michelle Bouvier Operated On.

Miss Michelle Bouvier, one of the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Vernou Bouvier Jr. of 521 Park Avenue, is recuperating at her home from an operation for appendicitis. Miss Bouvier had suffered from a sudden acute attack and was rushed to the Harbor Sanitarium. Her engagement to Henry Clarkson Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Scott of St. Louis, was announced yesterday.

8000 Years After

CHARLES LAMB is authority for the statement that, according to Confucius, the art of roasting or broiling was discovered by the accidental burning of a litter of nine new-farrowed pigs when a Chinaman's dwelling caught fire

Yet today, 8000 years after, it is no easy matter to get a good roast or a perfect broil.

STECHER IS VICTOR; KEEPS WORLD'S TITLE

Throws Poddubny With a Body Scissors and Wrist Lock After 1:38:47.

TRIES HOLD THREE TIMES

Twice Russian Breaks Loose, but Weakens and Loses First Match in 25 Years.

S. ZBYSZKO QUICKLY WINS

Pins Leppanen to the Mat in 10:29 in 71st Regiment Armory—10,000 See the Bouts.

Joe Stecher of Dodge City, Neb., retained his world's heavyweight wrestling championship last night by throwing Ivan Poddubny, the roaring Russian, with a body scissors and wristlock after 1 hour 38 minutes and 47 seconds of gruelling work on the mat. It was the first defeat for the big Russian in his twenty-five years and more of competition.

Before a crowd of 10,000 that jammed the Seventy-first Regiment Armory at Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue, the two mammoth athletes worked desperately, one to defend his laurels, the other to gain the crown which he has sought for many years. The bewhiskered Russian gave a fine exhibition and there were times when it seemed he had victory within his grasp, but Stecher always was able to get out of his antagonist's grasp before it was too late.

Stecher tried many times to apply his famous scissors hold on the rotund invader, and it finally was with this hold that he succeeded in winning the fall. The age of the Russian, who is 45, did not seem to make any difference in his stamina, for, although he grunted and gasped from start to finish, he stood up remarkably under the punishing holds applied by the titleholder.

Russian Has Fine Record.

It was a strange experience for Poddubney to find his shoulders pinned to the mat and a feather in the cap of the American. For many years the best wrestlers of Europe have unsuccessfully attempted to gain a fall over the Russian and when the seemingly impossible was at last accomplished last night, Poddubney arose blinking in consternation.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, another veteran, won the semi-final in easy fashion when he pinned Charles Leppanen in 10:29. This bout went on after the main event and was Zbyszko's from the start. The Pole tipped the beam at 225, outweighing his opponent by twenty pounds. He used his strength at every turn and also appeared more skillful than Leppanen.

Renato Gardini won the other bout to complete the program when he threw Joe Zigmund in the shortest time of the night. Gardini put Zigmund's shoulders to the mat in 6:31. At 205 pounds he was outweighed by twenty-five pounds by Zigmund.

Carpentier Is Introduced.

Before the main bout Georges Carpentier, former light heavyweight champion of the world, was introduced from the ring, and a cup, presented by Tito Schipa, the operatic tenor, was displayed. The cup has been offered to the Italian wrestler in this country who proves his superiority.

It was eight minutes before the men went to the mat for the first time, the previous time having been taken up solely with clawing at each other's torsos, heads, hips or any other place that appeared unguarded. When they did finally go to the mat they didn't stay there, and twenty-two minutes had elapsed before there really was any great threat of a fall. They went to the mat and alternated in getting holds and losing them as the other wriggled out. It was during this scrimmage on the canvas that Stecher first tried to apply his famous scissors, but Poddubny was anticipating the move and successfully eluded the legs that sought to entwine him.

The end came rather suddenly after the men had been struggling rather vainly on their feet for some minutes. As both pawed each other in mid-ring, Stecher leaped swiftly for Poddubny and brought him to the floor, where for a minute or two the Russian gave as good as he took. At last Stecher's legs shot out, circled the Russian, and clinched. It was the first time in the bout that Stecher had really locked his heels in the scissors and the crowd rose as it sensed that at last it was to see what the mighty Russian could do against the scissors hold.

Poddubny Breaks Hold.

The answer was not long in coming for Poddubny reached down with one of his great hands and gently pulled apart the legs which are said to have burst a bag of wheat by pressure. The crowd roared its admiration of the Russian, but instantly Stecher was again upon him with another scissors. This time as Stecher locked his heels he fought for the Russian's hands in order to prevent him pulling the legs apart again. He caught them but could not prevent Poddubny from wriggling loose.

For the third time Stecher fixed his legs about Poddubny's middle. Now it was that Poddubny's great girth, which had saved him frequently early in the bout from Stecher's entwining legs, proved his undoing. As the champion put on the pressure his knees gradually began to disappear in the rolls of flesh about Poddubny's waist. The Russian heaved and writhed but the knees sank deeper until finally Stecher's red clad knee was half out of sight. At this time Stecher stretched out Poddubny's left arm above his head and pulled backward and down. For two minutes Poddubny resisted before the hand of the referee slapped the back of Stecher as the victor.

Joe Komar, the lithe Lithuanian, won the first preliminary bout from Theodore Gowgrchin, Serbian heavyweight, when the latter was disqualified after 24 minutes 30 seconds of wriggling around the canvas.

Charlie Hansen, the big Minnesota Swede, won the semi-final from Tommy Dyas, Holland heavyweight, after a tussle which Dyas thought he had won. Hansen emerged not only defeated but fairly well crippled. The Swede scored his victory with a toehold in 16 minutes 36 seconds.

State Cut in Baseball, Bike, Hockey Receipts Is Proposed

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Under a bill introduced tonight in the Legislature by Assemblyman Cuvillier, New York, Democrat, the State would receive 2 per cent. of the gross receipts from all baseball, hockey and bicycle contests. The measure would require that the State's share of the receipts from such sports be paid into the State treasury within seventy-two hours after the contest is held. The bill would add a new section to the general business law. It would require that the admission price be printed on the face of tickets for these contests.

MET. AMATEURS WIN INTERCITY HONORS

10,000 SEE FAST BOUTS

McNamara and Blitman Turn In Fine Performances on Program at the Garden.

Amateur boxers from the metropolitan district won ten of the twelve inter-city bouts held in Madison Square Garden last night, while 10,000 spectators cheered both the results and the quality of the action provided. Two Philadelphia boxers, Harry Blitman in the 112 pound class and Fred Washington in the 147-pound division, were the only invaders to survive. All representatives of Pittsburgh and Boston met defeat.

The finals will be held tonight.

One of the best bouts of the night was the 118-pound encounter between Johnny Mariello of Boston and Jimmy McNamara of the Oxanam Association of New York.

The bout was full of heavy hitting and gore from the first bell and the Boston boxer took a terrific lacing from McNamara, who had Mariello on the verge of a knockout, but could not quite put him out.

The second of the intercity bouts in the 112-pound class, between Harry Blitman of Philadelphia and Johnny Burns of the Holy Name Club, New York, metropolitan champion at the weight, was a ding-dong battle, which had the crowd cheering through the three rounds.

Although he was boxing the metropolitan title holder, Blitman waded in and swapped punch for punch with Burns, to take the judges' decision at the end. Blitman had a stiff left jab that earned the decision for him.

Patsy Ruffalo, 126-pound metropolitan champion, scored a popular victory when he slashed his way to the judges' decision over A. Andrucci of Pittsburgh, after three hard rounds in the 126-pound class.

HERMAN WINS; RIVAL UNCONSCIOUS AN HOUR

New Yorker Knocks Out Datto in Twelfth After Taking Two Counts of Nine in Third.

Datto was carried to his corner unconscious, and it was an hour before he was revived. A physician reported he was suffering from a slight concussion of the brain.

BALDUC IS BEATEN BY KID SULLIVAN

Veteran Junior Lightweight Gets Decision in 10-Round Bout at the Broadway.

SILVERS TRIMS DE MARCO

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Coming back to the rink after an absence of nine months, Steve (Kid) Sullivna, Brooklyn veteran of fifteen years in boxing and former holder of the junior lightweight championship, last night carried off the decision from George Balduc of Lewiston, Me., in their ten-round bout before 3,000 fans at the New Broadway Arena, Brooklyn.

It was an uninteresting bout that followed two ten-rounders which bristled with action. Sullivan won the decision of Judges Charles F. Mathieson and George Le Cron and Refree Kid McPartland because he knew too much for the wild swinging, awkward lad from Maine.

Sullivan outboxed Balduc in seven of the ten rounds. Balduc won the fourth and the sixth. The fifth was even. Sullivan won every other round.

Balduc was willing, but that was about all. He was awkward and clumsy on the offensive and missed like a novice with the majority of his punches. Other punches of the Maine lad whizzed through the air and landed harmlessly on Sullivan's shoulders. Sullivan, on the other hand, stood off cleverly and coolly met his rival's rushes with stiff left jabs to the face or right crosses to the head.

Sullivan the Master.

In the boxing at long range Sullivan was clearly Balduc's master at almost every turn of the bout. Sullivan finished the bout with a commanding lead on points.

In the fourth round, after a bad start, Balduc appeared to advantage, missing less frequently than in previous sessions, while Sullivan was content to keep on the defensive. The fifth was even and a slow round—so slow, in fact, that the crowd booed and stamped feet through the three minutes.

In the sixth Balduc's offensive entitled him to the honors, the action, however, being slow, and in the seventh the crowd started walking out on the embattled pair.

Joey Silvers, Brooklyn lightweight, carried off the decision from Cuddy De Marco, Pittsburgh lad, in a slashing ten-round bout, which served as the semi-final. His superior boxing ability in the early round gave Silvers an advantage in points which De Marco could not overcome despite a strong closing rally.

De Marco finished the stronger of the two and stung and rocked Silvers several times from the sixth session to the finish. But the consistent boxing of the Brooklyn lad off-set the spurts of De Marco, who brought the crowd to its feet with a furious offensive through the ninth and tenth rounds.

Silvers weighed 136 pounds and De Marco 137.

Schwartz Rallies at End.

A rally through the last two rounds earned Corporal Izzy Schwartz, west side flyweight, the decision from Joey Ross, Hoboken youngster, in the first ten-rounder. The contest was fiercely fought throughout, and the margin of victory which Schwartz enjoyed at the finish was decidedly slim.

The lads left the ring bearing marks of the furious head to head clash at close quarters and the spirited exchanges at long range which were crowded into the ten rounds. Both were bruised and bleeding and weary at the final bell.

Ross enjoyed a slight lead on points entering the ninth round, but weakened in the face of Schwartz's furious closing rally in the last two rounds. Schwartz weighed 106¾ pounds and Ross 112¾.

In the first bout, scheduled for four rounds, Jerry Mullins, Brooklyn heavyweight, knocked out Clarence Webb, New Yorker, in 2 minutes and 35 seconds of the second round.

ROSENBLOOM TO BOX MOODY AT PIONEER

Harlem Middleweight Faces Test in Briton Tonight—Bouts at Other Clubs.

A middleweight bout of twelve rounds will be the principal attraction tonight at the Pioneer A. C. Maxey Rosenbloom, Harlem lad, is to tackle Frank Moody of England. Rosenbloom is promised an important bout in Madison Square Garden before the end of the current indoor season if successful against Moody tonight.

Vincent Forgione, east sider, is to fight Irish Tommy Jordan of Brooklyn in the ten-round semi-final. In a six-round match Lew Hersh, Pioneer favorite, will engage Murray Fuchs.

Three eight-round bouts, two six-round contests and a four-rounder constitute the flstic program offered at the 102d Engineers Regiment tonight. In the eight-round bouts the principals will be Barney Shaw vs. Willie Pfotenhauer; Morris Mroloven vs. Charlie McCain, and Wee Jimmy Collins vs. Harry Brooks.

Bernie Hufnagle, Williamsburg welterweight, and Jackie Reed of Newburgh will be rivals tonight in the feature bout of six rounds at the Twenty-seventh Division Train Armory, Brooklyn.

JOE THOMAS DIES.

His Greatest Bout Was Against Ketchel—Succumbs in Boston.

BOSTON, Feb. 1 (AP).—Joe Thomas, 3d, former pugilist, who fought the leaders in both the welterweight and middleweight classes during his ring career, died today at the Boston City Hospital following an operation for stomach trouble.

His greatest bout was with Stanely Ketchel, then middleweight champion. The referee stopped the 20-round contest after Thomas had been knocked down eleven times and Ketchel had been sent to the mat seven times.

Hawkes Wins Australasian Tennis Titles In Singles and Doubles in Straight Sets

ADELAIDE, Australia, Feb. 1 (AP).—J. B. Hawkes won the lawn tennis singles championship of Australasia today, defeating J. Willard in straight sets in the final match here today, 6—1, 6—3, 6—1.

Paired with Gerald Patterson, Hawkes also won the doubles championship, defeating J. O. Anderson and Pat O'Hara Wood, 6—1, 6—4, 6—2.

John B. Hawkes has been looked upon for several years as one of the greatest doubles players in the world, but he has not been highly rated as a singles player. He was a member of the Australian team last year and played with Patterson in the interzone doubles match with France. They lost to Borotra and Lacoste. Hawkes is a left-handed player and his reverse twist service is one of the most difficult to handle in the game.

TERRIS KNOCKS OUT CARR IN THE FIFTH

Weakens Rival in Third With Body Punches and Wins Before 9,000 at Buffalo.

GRAHAM IS DISQUALIFIED

Loses to Tommy Ryan in Third—Jimmy Slattery Easily Defeats Tommy Robson.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 1 (AP).—In the final bout here tonight Sid Terris of New York, challenger for Roc y Kansas's lightweight crown, scored a knockout over Luke Carr, Buffalo, in the fifth round of their scheduled ten-round bout before 9,000 fans.

Terris floored Carr for the count of nine with two blows to the pit of the stomach in the third round and thereafter had the Buffalo lad at his mercy. Previously Carr had been giving a good account of himself.

Bushy Graham of Utica, one of the contenders for the bantamweight crown, was disqualified in the third round of the second ten-round bout with Tommy Ryan of Buffalo. Graham received several warnings before the bout was finally stopped and the decision given to Ryan.

In the third ten rounder, Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo made a punching bag of Tommy Robson of Boston, but failed to put the veteran away.

The fastest bout was the six-rounder between Frankie Garcia of Utica and Dave Schwartz of Buffalo, bantams. Garcia won on points.

The disqualification of Graham was a real disappointment. In the first round the Utica bantam hit Ryan low and was warned. Although evidently hurt, Ryan fought back strongly. Graham piled up a lead in points, but continued to hit dangerously near the foul line. When Graham landed a fourth low blow after Referee Patsy Haley had warned him three times, he was disqualified in accordance with the rules of the State Athletic Commission.

TUNNEY BOUT PRIZE IN DELANEY BATTLE

Gene May Meet Bridgeport Man if Latter Does Well Against Risko on Friday.

The possibility of a match with Gene Tunney will be the incentive for Jack Delaney when the Bridgeport light-heavyweight steps into the ring at Madison Square Garden Friday night for his ten-round bout against Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight. It was announced yesterday that the match may be signed this week if Delaney's showing against Risko warrants it. Pete Reilly, manager of Delaney, is ready to sign just as soon as Tunney's signature is affixed to a contract.

"There is one fellow I always had in mind as an opponent for Jack," said Reilly yesterday at the Garden. "I did not think any too well of a bout between Jack and Tunney when Jack was fighting around 160 pounds, but Delaney is plenty big enough for Tunney right now."

An exciting battle is expected when Chick Suggs, New England bantamweight champion, tackles Abe Goldstein, Harlem lad, who formerly held the world's bantamweight title, in another ten-round bout. Suggs will be making his first appearance in the Garden, and much is expected of him. In his last sixty-one bouts he has won fifty-eight, lost two on fouls and earned a draw. Suggs has been matched to meet Babe Herman in Boston three days later.

Eddie Anderson, Wyoming featherweight title contender, and Steve Smith of Bridgeport are slated for the third ten-round bout. In a six-round semi-final Anatoli Ruby Goldstein, popular east side youngster, will tackle Johnny Cadolli of Scranton.

KID ROY DEFEATS KRAMER ON A FOUL

Philadelphian Disqualified on First Blow—Loayza Stops Siddons in Seventh.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 1 (AP).—Leo Kid Roy of Canada, won from Danny Kramer, Philadelphia, on a foul in the first round of a scheduled ten-round wind-up at the Arena tonight. The fight had just begun when the referee declared that Kramer had hit low, and awarded the bout to the Canadian. It was the first blow that the Philadelphian landed. Roy weighed 127 pounds and Kramer 126¾.

It was the South American's first appearance here and he made an impressive showing. Loayza weighed 134½ pounds; Siddon, 131.

Trinity School Fencers Win.

Trinity School fencers defeated the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church swordsmen by a 5 to 4 count on the losers' strips last night. All bouts were contested in the foils division. Nicholls won all three of his assignments for Trinity, while Marquardt and Mangemanin took two bouts each for the losers.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 1.—The Dartmouth five, after a hard-fought battle, defeated Princeton tonight, 23 to 18. This sent the Tigers into fifth place in the Intercollegiate League while the victors gained a clear title to second place. Langdell starred for the Green, scoring three field goals and two fouls. The rangy guard also broke up the Princeton offensive many times throughout the game. Picken with six points, Day with five, and Whittaker with four, accounted for the rest of the Dartmouth scoring.

Gartner, a substitute, contributed five of the loser's points. He replaced Whittaker near the end of the second half and quickly dropped two pretty baskets from the floor, and later one from the foul line. Loeb, the Tiger captain, played a fast, slashing game, scoring five points.

The line-up:

MANHATTAN QUINTET TRIUMPHS IN RALLY

In a court battle in which the lead changed hands several times, the Manhattan College quintet defeated the St. Bonaventure five 32 to 24 in the winners' gymnasium last night. A rally that netted four field goals in the closing minutes of play offset the brilliant shooting of McCloud, visiting captain, who had scored four baskets from mid-court.

In a preliminary game Manhattan Prep defeated the Clason Point Military Academy five, 19 to 10.

LEW HURLEY VICTOR, DEFEATS JOE SOUZA

Makes Good Showing After Layoff and Gets Decision in Ten-Round Bout at Lenox Club.

Making his first start in more than three months, Lew Hurley, Harlem featherweight, earned the decision over Joe Souza, brother of Babe Herman, in the ten-round feature at the Uptown Lenox Sporting Club last night. Hurley outboxed his rival and jarred him with stiff body punches all through the bout, but Souza put up a game fight. The winner weighed 125½ pounds, Souza 128¾.

The ten-round semi-final furnished a fast battle, with Al Tripoli, 126½ pounds, a former amateur star, earning the verdict over Nick Guagnelli, 128¾, in a last round toe-to-toe exchange that had the 2,000 fans wild with excitement. The opening ten-rounder went to Armand Lavigne of Vermont, who made his first encounter in New York an auspicious one by outboxing Eddie Zeigler. Lavigne weighed 115½ pounds, Zeigler 115¾.

Frankie Goldsmith, 120 pounds, west side, won from Louis Monkowitz, 118½, the Bronx, in a return six-round battle that developed into a real swashbuckler. In the opening four-rounder Johnny Stimeone, Harlem, weighing 118½ pounds, won the decision from Moe Gerson, 118½, of the east side.

PUBLICITY BLOCKS LENGLEN AND WILLS

U. S. STAR CAPTURES FINAL

Beats Mlle. Contoslavos by 6-3, 6-2 at Cannes—McCormick of Chicago Is Defeated.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CANNES, France, Feb. 1.—The following is stated to be the inside story of Miss Helen Wills's failure to meet Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the singles of the Nice tourney which began today. Suzanne's father, who, being secretary of the Nice club, is interested in the local gate receipts, desired the meeting to take place, but he was overruled by the Riviera publicity syndicate which, fearing a Lenglen walkover would affect the attendance for the remainder of the season, insisted that the meeting be postponed.

This was simply done by the Nice club announcing that grooved balls would be used. As Helen already was considerably handicapped by the slow sodden courts the further restriction of a grooved ball on her fast play caused her to withhold her name from the singles in the hope the Nice club would show a sporting spirit. It didn't, and so at the last moment Suzanne was able to enter the singles, certain of not meeting the American champion.

It is very doubtful now if the two will meet at all on the Riviera since the remaining big tourneys, one at Cannes next week and another at Monte Carlo, Suzanne is scheduled to play only once in the singles. It will be the easiest thing for her to dodge that, not from fear of her opponent, but conforming to the wheels within the wheels of Riviera tennis politics into which Helen should never have ventured without a hardened mentor.

Miss Moore tennis is being played off the courts than on. The fact is, Helen is being used more and more to boost the Riviera season.

She is collecting trophies at a fast clip. She won her second cup at Cannes today from Mlle. Contoslavos. The American's form in the final today showed she is nearing her normal excellence in all save the overhead smashes and the betting accordingly veered slightly in her favor in regards to her proposed meeting with Mlle. Lenglen.

Wins in Straight Sets.

CANNES, France, Feb. 1 (AP).—Miss Helen Wills, America's woman tennis champion, emerged victorious today from her second Riviera tournament by defeating Mlle. Contoslavos, one of France's ranking stars, in the final round of the Cailis tourney, 6—3, 6—2.

Thus the California girl has now defeated within the past two weeks the best women players on the Riveria with the single exception of the great Suzanne Lenglen. Miss Wills's victory over Mlle. Contoslavos today was her second. In the Metropole tournament last week she defeated her, 6—3, 6—4, in the course of her triumphant progress through the event, in the finals of which she won from Mlle. Didi Vlasto.

Miss Wills played just well enough this morning to win without being extended, but she did not display the spirit marking some of her earlier matches on the Riviera. The soft hitting game adopted by her opponent in the first set appeared to worry the American champion, while she was also bothered by Mlle. Contoslavos's insistence upon playing an overhead game, in which Miss Wills is not at her strongest.

Mlle. Didi Vlasto and Henri Cochet defeated Miss Emily Fetchell of England and Allister McCormick of Chicago, 6—2, 6—2, in the mixed doubles final of the tournamenttoday.

The point score and stroke analysis of Miss Wills's match follows:

Mlle. Lenglen Wins Twice.

NICE, France, Feb. 1 (AP).—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, French champion, went through the first round of the singles in the Nice tennis tournament today, defeating Miss Emily Hastfely of England, 6—0, 6—0. Then, paired with Baron Henri de Morpurgo, she defeated Mlle. Dhoros and Paul Jaurequiberry by a similar score.

ST. JOHN'S ROUTS ALUMNI.

Quintet Tramples Graduates' Team, 60-26—Prep Five Loses.

Alumni basketball stars of St. John's College proved no match for the varsity quintet last night, the latter winning, 60 to 26 on the Red and White's court in Brooklyn. Vinnie O'Brien, who played right forward, shot five field goals for the graduates. The winners tallied 24 baskets from the floor, Freeman and Paige registering nine apiece. In the preliminary engagement St. John's Prep lost to the St. Michael's High five by a 32-27 count. The line-up:

ST. JOHN'S (60).		ALUMNI (26)

Mayor Walker to Be Referee Of Wilco Games in Brooklyn

Mayor James J. Walker has accepted an invitation to officiate as honorary referee at the sixth annual indoor athletic meet of the Wilco A. A., to be held in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, on Feb. 13, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Hugh A. Hirshon of the Games Committee. President Murray Hulbert of the Amateur Athletic Union and a former President of the Board of Aldermen will be the active referee. Colonel Charles J. Diegos of the Timers' Club will serve as chief timer for the night.

MRS. MALLORY WINS IN INDOOR TENNIS

Beats Mrs. Raymond, 6-2, 6-1, as Heights Casino Invitation Tourney Starts.

MISS BROWNE ALSO VICTOR

But Has a Great Deal of Trouble in Eliminating Miss Ballin—Score Is 6-3, 6-4.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Mrs. Molla Mallory of New York and Miss Mary K. Browne, formerly of Santa Monica, both former national women's tennis champions, made their first tournament appearance of the year yesterday when play began in the invitation indoor fixture of the Heights Casino in Brooklyn. Mrs. Mallory, who has won the tournament half a dozen times or more, began in her customary manner. She allowed Mrs. Edward T. Raymond of Hartsdale, a player who has held a high position in local tennis circles in the past, only three games, winning at 6—2, 6—1.

Miss Browne did not have so easy a time in advancing. This was the first experience of the California woman in indoor tournament play, and she found that even after playing on the asphalt courts of the Pacific Coast it was not a simple matter to accustom herself to the canvas-covered courts of the Casino. Miss Florence Ballin of the West Side Tennis Club, who has ranked in the first ten, fought her off in long rallies and submitted only after she had taken seven games. The score was 6—3, 6—4.

Miss Ballin threatened to carry the match to three sets when she broke through Miss Browne's service and tied the score at 4—all in the second set. The California woman, who has found it difficult to keep her fast drives under control and had bettered her strokes, rose to her best flights at this stage and took the next two games. Miss Ballin weakened under the strain as she sought to reach the net in the prolonged rallies and fell into error making.

The victory of Mrs. Mallory put her in the third round, as she drew a bye in the first at the top of the draw. Miss Browne, who started play in the first round at the top of the lower division, is in the second round, bracketed with Miss Rosamond Newton of Boston, whom she will meet this morning at 11:30.

The summaries:

First Round—Mrs. W. M. Shedden defeated Mrs. F. L. St. John, 6—1, 6—4; Mrs. De Forest Candee defeated Miss Gertrude Dwyer, 6—3, 6—0; Miss Martha Bayard defeated Miss Edwina Cruikshank, 6—0, 6—4; Mrs. H. Stuart Green won from Mrs. Theodora Sohst by default; Mrs. Frederick M. Letson won from Mrs. Theodora Casebeer by default; Mrs. T. S. Sturgis defeated Miss Elizabeth Greenwood, 6—1, 6—1; Miss Mary K. Browne defeated Miss Florence Ballin, 6—3, 6—4; Miss Rosamond Newton defeated Mrs. Frederick Schmitz, 6—3, 6—4; Miss H. Baldwin defeated Miss Alice Bennett, 6—4, 6—3; Miss Adele Crasin defeated Miss Jessie Gott, 6—2, 6—0; Mrs. J. D. Corbiere defeated Mrs. T. Bailey, 6—3, 6—2.

Second Round—Mrs. Molla Mallory defeated Mrs. Edward T. Raymond, 6—2, 6—1.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 1.—Jerome Lang, captain of the Columbia University team of last season, paired with Chester Kaye of Pittsburgh, won the round-robin doubles tournament just completed here. Ten teams competed and each faced the others in six games.

At the end of the series Lang and Kaye were tied with John Temple Graves 2d and J. H. Barnes, each with 35 victories and 19 defeats. The former pair won the play-off by 6—2. The Lang team needed a 6—0 victory in the last match to gain a tie for first place. Five professionals competed.

The summaries:

Contract With Giants Signed by Travis Jackson

JACKSON ACCEPTS TERMS WITH GIANTS

Signs One-Year Contract and Plans to Leave Tomorrow for His Home in Arkansas.

MAY START THE SEASON

McGraw Believes Injured Knee Is Better and Will Not Impair Shortstop—Other News.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

Travis Jackson's knee was so well yesterday that he walked jauntily into the Giants' office, signed his contract for the coming season and announced that he would depart for his home, in Waldo, Ark., tomorrow. The Giants' officials professed no worry over the condition of young Mr. Jackson's loose limb and gave the appearance of being perfectly satisfied that the opening game will find him at his position of shortstop.

Manager McGraw said that Jackson was cured and was satisfied that he would report at the training camp on time. James J. Tierney chimed in with more optimistic words in regard to Travis's condition in general and knee in particular, so that made it unanimous. There are still some skeptics, however, who are not convinced that Jackson has been cured.

If Jackson is able to take his place in the Giant infield regularly it will lift a great care off John McGraw's master mind. With Kelly at first, Frisch at second, Jackson at short and Lindstrom at third the Giants' inner defense is one of the strongest in either league. With Jackson on the bench or on crutches, the infield is something else, with Frisch switched to short, Kelly to second and Terry on first.

The directors of the Brooklyn club held a meeting yesterday, but except for ratifying Uncle Robbie's new rule against giving out more than one-year contracts the board did nothing drastic. The members simply went over the plans of Fred Hanlon, Assistant Secretary of the club, for the Spring training trip, and found everything in good order.

The rule against giving players contracts for more than one year puts an end to Buck Wheat's appeal for a two-year contract at a salary of $15,000 a season. Previously the Robin outfielder made a request for a one-year contract calling for $16,000.

Manager Robinson had a long talk with Harry Courtney, southpaw pitcher who used to hurl for Washington, and although nothing official was announced it is probable that the lean lefthander will be taken South with the club. Courtney pitched many good games for the Senators, and later for the White Sox. After that he was sent to the Pacific Coast, and won many more. Lack of control has been his chief fault. Courtney is still a youngster.

Barney Dreyfuss, President of the Pirates, who is in town for the Golden Jubilee of the National League tonight, said yesterday that he would see Hazen Cuyler, his sensational young outfielder, some time today, and hoped to straighten out any difficulties over the player's contract. Manager McKechnie of the Pirates also is here.

SENATORS GET BUSH AND TOBIN IN TRADE

Send Zachary and Ballou to Browns in Deal for Former Yankee Pitcher and Outfielder.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—"Bullet Joe" Bush, former Yankee pitcher, and Outfielder Johnny Tobin were obtained by the Washington Senators from the Browns today in a deal that sent Tom Zachary, veteran left-hander, and Win Ballou, young right-hander, to the St. Louis club.

Manager Harris of the Senators said tonight that he has been trying to get Bush for some time, and that he feels the acquisition of the veteran will just about bring another pennant to the capital. Harris said he would use Bush regularly in the box.

"I am sorry to have to let Ballou get away," Manager Harris said, "but you can't get something for nothing."

Bush and Ballou are regarded as the most valuable players involved in the deal, as Tobin has not played regularly in the Browns' outfield for several seasons, and Zachary's performance last year indicated that he is losing his effectiveness.

Ballou came to the Senators from Chattanooga in the middle of the 1925 season and showed great promise. He is 26 years old.

Although 34 years old, Bush still ought to have two or three more good seasons. He has been a major league star for fourteen years, serving on the Philadelphia Athletics, Boston Red Sox and Yankees before the Browns obtained him in the deal that sent Shocker to the New York club. Bush has played in five world's series, performing for the Athletics in 1913 and 1914, the Red Sox in 1918 and the Yankees in 1922 and 1923.

BIERBAUER, EX-PIRATE, DIES

Was Responsible for Nickname of Pittsburgh Club in 1892.

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 1 (AP).—Louis Bierbauer, former member of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club and whose signing by the Pirates is said to have been the cause of the nickname being attached to the local team, is dead here.

Bierbauer was a member of the Brooklyn club in the last year of the Brotherhood, 1891. He was ordered to return to the Athletics, but that club forgot to list him on its reserve list. Ned Hanlon, then manager of the Pittsburgh club, signed Bierbauer and a court decision held the Pittsburgh club was justified in its action, as Bierbauer was a free agent. The name "Pirate" was hurled at the players the following season by the fans and has stuck ever since.

WESLEYAN SELECTS COACH.

Picks Dougherty, Former St. Louis Catcher, to Direct Nine.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Feb. 1.—Floyd C. Dougherty, former University of Illinois baseball star, has been selected to coach the baseball squad at Wesleyan. After his graduation, Dougherty caught for the St. Louis Americans and the Newark Internationals. The Wesleyan squad will begin work in the cage about the last of this month.

TILDEN WOULD PAY COLLEGE PLAYERS

Tennis Champion Asserts Football Is Professional Sport in Universities.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 1 (AP).—College football is a professional sport and the players might as well be paid for their efforts, in the opinion of William T. Tilden 2d, tennis champion, as published today in an interview in The Harvard Crimson. Tilden deplored what he termed the over-emphasis of technicalities in maintaining amateur standing. The average age of champions in all sports, he also said, is rising up into the 30s and 40s.

"The game has been commercialized to the point where all the faults of professionalism are extant in its present make-up, and many controversies result. Therefore, if we are to have this commercialism of all sports, why not pay the individual player?

"After all, he is the one who does the work. I am a staunch supporter of athletes such as Red Grange who turn professional and are widely criticised for their action. It would do no harm to pay the college football player."

Referring to tennis, Tilden declared that "the college tennis star of today cannot make the grade." The competition is too keen, he asserted, and said that in all sports there is a tendency toward the 30s and 40s in the ages of stars, excepting golf.

GRIFFITH ATTACKS CRITICS OF SPORTS

Big Ten Head says Those Who Decry 'Overemphasis' Are Merely Jealous.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Feb. 1 (AP).—The "destructive minded" critics who are "fearful" of the results of the tremendous growth of athletics in America since the World War were taken to task tonight by Major John L. Griffith, Big Ten Commissioner, in a speech at the dedication of Kemper Military Academy's new gymnasium.

"Many who decry athletic overemphasis are jealous," he said, "because there is not like overemphasis for certain other things dear to the hearts of those who lament.

"If we consider the question whether the American people have given too much time to training their bodies and conserving their health, a study of the draft statistics, which revealed one-half our young men as physically defective, should answer this negatively and conclusively."

The boys of today, said Major Griffith, devour the sports pages of newspapers, and aspire to become Red Granges or Bob Simpsons instead of Jesse Jameses or Diamond Dicks, as in his own boyhood days.

"So many of the stories in the papers today are accounts of failures in life, failure to observe the law that it is stimulating and refreshing to turn to the sport page and read about the men who won and were rewarded by the applause of sports followers," said Major Griffith.

ROSENTHAL TAKES RACE.

Wins 150-Yard Event, First of Bronx Y. M. H. A. Title Series.

J. B. Rosenthal came within four-fifths of a second of the 150-yard indoor track record of the Bronx Young Men's Hebrew Association when he covered the distance in 20 4-5 seconds yesterday afternoon in the first event of the all-around championship competition of the Bronx Y. M. H. A. Other events in the championship will be held at later dates.

In winning, Rosenthal distanced George Wolf and Harry Greitzer, who were second and third, respectively. Julius Lause, a student at Brooklyn Evening High School is the holder of the 150-yard record.

PENN STATE LOSES HAMAS.

Star Basketball Player Will Be Out All Year—Has Anemia.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Feb. 1.—Mike Hamas, Penn State basketball star, is lost to the Nittany quintet for the balance of the season. The former Passaic High School player collapsed at the college infirmary today and has been ordered to bed. According to Dr. J. F. Ritenour, college physician, he is suffering from anemia and will have to remain out of athletics for the balance of the year at least.

ST. JEAN LEADS WOODS.

After two blocks of play yesterday in their six-block pocket billiard match for 750 points at the Strand Billiard Academy, Andrew St. Jean is leading Arthur Woods by a score of 252 to 155. St. Jean won out after a hard tussle in the afternoon block, 126 to 122, in nine innings, making a high run of 70 to 64 as his opponent's longest streak.

In the evening St. Jean proved too much for his rival, winning the block in fifteen innings by a score of 114 to 32, with a high run of 45 to 14 for Woods.

OTHER BILLIARD RESULTS.

Final rounds in two amateur title tourneys were held at Doyle's Academy last night. In the national amateur English billiard championship Sandy Stuart won from R. J. Wilson, 250 to 151, in forty-nine innings, the winner running a high break of 36 and the loser 16. The national snooker crown went to Louis Basso, who defeated George Lantz by a count of 100 to 71 in two frames, Basso making a high break of 24, to 19 for Lantz.

In the preliminary round of the national pocket billiard championship tournament Paul Herbert took the measure of Charles Shongood Jr., 100 to 75, in forty-one innings. Herbert's high run was 14, while Shongood took 12 for his best streak. Two matches were played in Doyle's annual three-cushion handicap tournament, Walter Mentzer nosing out William Adams, 25 to 24, and William Horwitz earning a 25-21 win over Fred Reynolds.

Two matches were played last night at Lawlor's Brooklyn rooms in the national amateur Class C 18.2 balkline championship tourney. In one J. Hounch, the defending titleholder, bowed to C. J. Davis, 150 to 40, in twenty-five innings, Davis twice breaking his high run record of 41 for the tournament by running 55 and 42. Hounch's best effort resulted in an 11. In the other match J. Ward defeated C. Spear, 150 to 142, in fifty-seven innings, with a high run of 18 to the loser's 21.

In an exhibition 18.2 balkline match staged at Lawlor's Manhattan rooms Yoshi Sugasuma, Japanese star, defeated H. Sumida, a countryman, 200 to 54, in seven innings. Sugasuma's high run was 136, Sumida's 41.

In a metropolitan three-cushion billiard tournament match at the Strand Billiard Academy last night Joseph Fisher beat Hendrik Frantzen, 50 to 21, in forty-nine innings. Fisher contributed 4 as his high run, while Frantzen chalked up 2.

W. Stone won from J. Arkland, 25 to 20, in twenty-eight innings in a pocket billiard match at Yank Adams's Bronx Academy last night. Stone made a high run of 12, and Arkland one of 3.

Stewart Most Effective Hurler In The International League

Toronto Pitcher Finishes Two-Thousandths of a Run Ahead of Myles Thomas, Allowing 2.513 Earned Runs Per Game, Official Records for 1925 Show—Thomas Leader in Games Won and Lost.

Walter Stewart of Toronto captured the honors as the most effective hurler in the International League for the 1925 season, according to the official pitching records released today. Stewart allowed a low earned run average of 2.513 per nine-inning game, which placed him just two-thousandths of a run ahead of Myles Thomas, also of Toronto, who is placed second.

The nominal leader in games won and lost is Carl Yowell, Rochester, who won 11 games and lost 1, but the actual honors in this department belong to Myles Thomas, who captured 25 games and suffered 9 defeats. Alphonse Thomas of Baltimore pitched in the most games, 50; finished the greatest number of games, 18; pitched the greatest number of innings, 305; won the most games, 23; beat the most strikouts, 208, and finished in a tie with John Ogden, his teammate, for pitching the most complete games, 23 apiece.

The records of pitchers who pitched in ten or more complete games, based on lowest percentage of earned runs per nine-inning game, follow:

SKEETERS TOP LIST IN CLUB FIELDING

The Jersey City Skeeters led the International League in club fielding for the 1925 season, according to the official records announced yesterday. The Skeeters finished the year with an average of .9667, a fraction of a point ahead of the Baltimore Orioles, who show a mark of .9662.

Miami Track Record Is Equalled as Tiercel Wins

TIERCEL TRIUMPHS IN ROUSING DRIVE

EQUALS TRACK RECORD

Beats Lander by a Neck at Miami—Minimum Purses of $1,200 for Overnight Events Go Into Effect.

Special to The New York Times.

MIAMI, Feb. 1.—Tiercel, Mrs. C. Garrigan's four-year-old English-bred gelding, equaled the track record for a mile and seventy yards at Hialeah Park this afternoon when he won the Carrabelle Purse and beat six others in a blanket finish. He ran the distance in 1:43 2-5 under 114 pounds, and it was his second straight victory in the three starts he has made in this country. Johnny Callahan had the mount on the bay son of Cylgad and Pernie, which was third choice and paid $8.70 for a $2 ticket.

This was the first day that the increased purses went into effect, the minimum in the overnight being $1,200. There will be two $1,500 purses each day when there is no richer stake on the card. The Carrabelle Purse and the Tampa Purse were today's features. Despite the second downpour of Saturday the track dried out quickly and was fast for the first race.

J. R. Pryce saddled two winners for Walter J. Salmon, sending out Lemnos to win the first and Heir-at-Law to take the money in the last. Three favorites were first past the winning post.

Tiercel has improved with each race and apparently is better than he has been given credit for. The field got a good start and Callahan held his mount under wraps back of the pace until rounding the final turn. There he moved up gradually, raced down Walter Salmon's filly Chrysalis and moved into the lead. He hung somewhat, and Callahan had to ride a hard finish to bring the gelding home a winner by a neck over L. T. Cooper's Lancer. Mrs. A. Swenke's Picketer was between the two leaders and only a head back in a finish that brought the spectators to their feet.

Mr. Fepp at Odds-On.

The Tampa Purse was for three-year-olds and upward and the route was five and a half furlongs. Seven faced the barrier, with E. F. Whitney's Mr. Fepp the odds-on favorite. The Luke McLuke colt did not run up to the other two performances here. Although he took the lead at the head of the stretch, he tired suddenly and the best he could do was finish third.

The winner was the Greenbriar Stable's four-year-old colt Nor'wester, third choice, which paid $15.20. Nor'wester closed fast entering the stretch, raced down the leaders and won by a length from B. G. Lewis's three-year-old Bookbinder.

Lemnos was the one to graduate in the race restricted to maidens of his own age, beating ten others in a driving finish at five and a half furlongs. The gelding had not raced up to expectations, but his previous race showed an improvement and he was made the favorite, paying $4.90 in the mutuels.

Maiben was up on the Salmon entry, which was quickest at the barrier, and showed good speed under slight restraint. He came on well when challenged and outlasted G. A. Marshall's Agnate to win by a length. The Everglade Stable's Delegate was third.

Accomplish's Ned Wins.

Phil T. Chinn's speedy filly Accomplish didn't have to break another record to win the two-furlong dash out of the chute for the baby racers, but she had only the margin of her nose over C. H. Pierce's The Heathen at the wire. Accomplish won her last race the first time she had ever started, and set a track record of 0:22 4-5. She is the fastest juvenile at Hialeah and was made the 3-to-5 favorite in a field of twelve two-year-olds. She ran the distance this afternoon in 0:23 1-5, under 119 pounds.

The summaries:

Weather clear; track fast.

KIRK'S FROLIC WINS AGAIN.

Pointer Annexes Third Blue in Free-for-All at Pinehurst.

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 1.—In the free-for-all event which wound up the field trials here today, Kirk's Frolic, owned by Harry D. Kirkover of Buffalo, won its third blue ribbon in four starts, an unusual feature for such a young dog. Kirk's Frolic is a pointer, and was the winner of the Continental trials here last Fall.

Greycourt, pointer, owned by Dr. J. S. Brown of Montclair, was second, and Junedale Chummy, a setter owned by Dr. Frank Lahey of Boston, was third.

Coe's Pompey En Route Here; Will Train at Belmont Park

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 1.—Pompey, W. R. Coe's two-year-old champion of last year, left here today en route to Belmont Park to begin his training for his three-year-old season. Among a lot that were shipped to Louisville was Haste, J. E. Widener's crack colt, which was one of Pompey's dangerous rivals of last season. Haste will be trained at Churchill Downs and will be one of Mr. Widener's candidates for the Kentucky Derby.

GREAT FINISH WINS FOR SEVENTH SON

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 1.—There was no stake on the card at the Fair Grounds this afternoon, the place of honor being filled by the Advance Purse, a gallop of a mile and seventy yards, for three-year-olds. The winner was Frederick Johnson's home-bred gelding Seventh Son, which paid $22.60 in the mutuels. Hoagland was up on the winner, which carried 106 pounds and ran in 1:46 1-5 over a fast track.

Cartoon, the Dearborn Stable's Chicle colt, was the pacemaker during the early stages under a strong drive. The Johnson gelding moved up with a great rush at the three-sixteenths pole, opened a big lead and came home with five lengths to spare, eased up, in the most impressive finish of the meeting. Cogwheel held on well to take third money.

The summaries:

WALLACE MEDALIST AT MIAMI BEACH

FORD FINISHES WITH 78

New York Star Ties Cullom and Bert Jones for Second—Lee Chase in First Sixteen.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 1.—Joe Ford, three times winner of the Greater New York championship, faltered on the last four holes and finished in a tie for second place with Charles Cullom of Chicago and Bert Jones of New Orleans in the qualifying round today for the Miami Beach golf title. He had a card of 39, 39—78, two strokes behind the medal winner, William Wallace of Chicago.

Captain H. C. C. Tippett of Meadow Brook, survived in the first flight, as did Lee Chase of Buffalo, winner of the title title last two years, and C. A. Roberts of New York.

Wallace took only one putt on nine greens, and took three on only one hole. The course was in bad shape after Saturday's heavy rain.

CREAVY AND MAIDT WIN GOLF PLAY-OFF

Defeat Golden and Colton in Opening Event of South Central Tournament.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 1 (AP).—Bill Creavy, professional of the Oklahoma City, Okla., Country Club, and H. E. Maidt, member of the Oklahoma City Club, today captured the amateur-pro low ball match, opening event of the South Central Golf tournament.

The Oklahomans won in a one-hole play-off this afternoon with John Golden of Paterson, N. J., and June Colton, Pine Bluff, Ark., amateur, after tying in the eighteen-hole morning round with a medal score of 68.

The triple tie for third place between Smith and L. D. Cooper Jr. of Hot Springs, as one pair, Cruickshank and J. A. Dickinson of Little Rock as another and Turness and Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn hurler, will be settled tomorrow.

The 18-hole contest for professionals who were not able to secure amateur partners was won by Ed Gayer, Chicago, and Andy Wave, Toronto, with 68. The Espinosa brothers, Al and Abe, carried off honors in the long driving contest.

DELAY INDEFENSIBLE.

Treasury officials state that unless the new Tax bill is made law by March 1 it will be a physical impossibility to prepare the blanks for taxpayers in time for the first income-tax returns on March 15. But why should there be any doubt about getting the measure through all its stages before the date set by the Treasury as the last day possible? It is not an ordinary case which we have in hand. Nobody would wish to drive the Senate into unseemly speed in disposing of a measure where party lines were drawn, or where opinion was closely divided. But the Tax bill stands in a category by itself. It may be set down as noncontentious. It is certainly non-partisan. In that conception of it the House of Representatives passed it almost unanimously. In the Senate there is no real disagreement except upon minor details. It may be said with confidence that 90 per cent. of the Senators have made up their minds already to vote for 90 per cent. of the bill. This statement is alone sufficient to show that any long delay in passing the bill would be inexcusable.

We know that a few Senators are determined to express their views in opposition to a few sections of the bill, such as the estate tax, the publicity of income-tax payments and so on. This is their right. But in the circumstances they cannot hope to do much more than to place themselves on record. They know that they cannot possibly persuade the majority of the Senate to come over to their opinion. Such being the case, they ought to be content with making the briefest possible statement of their considered and sincere judgment, and letting the public business proceed. If they wish to make more profound studies and to set forth their conclusions at greater length, they can find ways of getting into print later. Perhaps, in the emergency, the Senate would agree to suspend its rule and allow speeches to be printed in the Congressional Record which were never actually delivered. At all events, the small minority of the Senate opposed to one part or another of the Tax bill ought to have a sufficient sense of propriety not to throw itself as a brute obstacle in the way of business men and taxpayers.

The plea to expedite the Tax bill is not made in the interest of large corporations or of rich men. They always know how to take care of themselves. It is the large body of small companies and taxpayers in the lower brackets who most need to get an early decision from Congress so that they may know where they stand. For example, several hundred thousand people in receipt of small incomes will be exempt entirely, if the new rates go through. But if there is a delay until after March 15, they will have to make their payments under the old law. It is said that in such an event they will be able to get a rebate from the Government. But everybody knows how long and complicated and vexatious a process that is. It is an old saying that the king's business requireth haste. In this instance it is the people's business that requires it. If the Senate does not do its best, in the exceptional situation with which it is confronted, to relieve the uncertainties and anxieties of millions of middle-class Americans during the next few days, it will show itself blind to a vital and pressing popular need.

It is not a case for abusing the Senate or for raising a clamor against it. Undoubtedly the greater number of the Senators are as anxious as anybody else to get this tax business of the country properly dispatched. But a very serious appeal can be made to them to fix their minds first of all upon the importance of avoiding the needless delay of a single day and then showing that they have both the will and the ability to act in this matter so as to respond to intelligent public sentiment. All over the nation the people are waiting for the Senate to vote. They earnestly hope that it will act promptly. They cannot understand how, when the facts are all so clear and are all on one side, the Senate is unable to decide on them without loitering. There can be no doubt that the Senate has a fine opportunity to establish itself in public favor. This it can do without changing its rules, without suppressing debate and without legislating in a way that might be called crude and hasty. All that is necessary is for the Senate to keep its eyes open as to what has to be done and then to do it without loss of time.

All are agreed that the Tax bill will eventually become law very much in the form in which the substance of it has been approved by both houses of Congress. With this as a basis of judgment, what possible defense can be made of unnecessary delay? Let the Senate take heed lest by dilatoriness it do a great injustice to those who are looking to it for speedy relief. It has been said that justice delayed is justice denied. Equally true is it, as the situation now shapes itself at Washington, that tax reduction delayed is a public benefit denied.

LOWER TAXES, LARGER YIELD.

The Treasury's tax figures show an increase of collections for the fiscal year ended last June. Again reduction of tax rates has been followed by larger revenue than the Treasury had estimated. This bears out the President's budget speech, in which he said that lower taxes stimulate business so as to produce larger revenues even under lower rates. The increase is not great, considering the totals in billions. Tax reductions have so far overtaken governmental economies that even increases in revenue proportioned to prosperity cannot pay the Treasury's bills and at the same time continue the debt reduction policy which reduced interest payments in 1925 by $59,000,000.

President COOLIDGE points out that the reduction of the debt has cut interest payments by $179,000,000 a year. Taxpayers will find as much comfort in this as the President takes pride. But there is need of persistence in the policy of reducing the interest payments, which are 22½ per cent. of the total costs of the Government. The reduction of debt by four billions has also benefited the Government's credit. Nevertheless, Congress should budget for a surplus for emergencies. Government is no more immune to unexpected debits than corporations. Last year the Treasury had to meet demands for $134,000,000, such as tax refunds, the Postoffice deficit and war compensation demands.

ISSUE-MAKERS AT DINNER.

Politicians often acquire a mysterious reputation for "sagacity" and "subtlety." In some respects they are among the simplest of souls. The Democratic statesmen who put their legs under Senator WALSH'S table Sunday night appear to have discussed gravely the policies by which the Democrats may win the next Congress elections. They might just as well have predicted on Jan. 31 the weather of the Tuesday after the first Monday in November. Issues are born, not made. If no unexpected ones leap up in the next few months, the general wisdom or folly of the Democrats in Congress, provided the Republicans and Mr. COOLIDGE make no gross blunders, is likely to be the chief Democratic hope or despair. The majority of Democratic Congressmen have shown a commendable tendency not to repeat the mistakes of 1924. They have behaved well in regard to the World Court and the Tax Reduction bill.

In the Senate, however, most of them showed a fatal readiness to unite again with the Lafollettians, their old dupers, in giving a seat to Mr. NYE of North Dakota. In more momentous matters they seem inclined to fall again upon the bosom of their deadly allies. We hear once more the poll-parrotry about "big business" and "the interests" and Mr. COOLIDGE'S subservience to them. It is proposed that the Democrats join the insurgent Republicans and Progressives in opposition to the settlement of the Italian debt. The elder LA FOLLETTE frightened a lot of Democrats into voting for Mr. COOLIDGE. Do foresighted Democratic "leaders" want to make sure that the deserters never come back and that new ones follow them?

The tariff is the one spontaneous issue pounced upon by the dining conspirators. Tariff reduction is an old Democratic policy. A perception of the need of it has arisen not only in the West but in New England, where the skyscraping tariff has long been a sort of religion. Here the Democrats have a strong case; and here they are on their own ground. Republicans and Lafollettians have to come to them. Threatened assaults on Mr. COOLIDGE and Mr. MELLON will be acceptable only to small-potato minds. The Democratic Party, now painfully on probation, needs most of all to recover character; to show sobriety of judgment; to have a sense of public opinion and the national interest; to prove by the words and votes of its Congressmen that it can be trusted.

Except about the tariff, thin is the stream of talk that trickles from that Senatorial feast. Most of it is partisanship; and much of that not even Democratic partisanship. Again the myth about the National Committee protrudes its absurd mug. Great expectations cling to the meeting of the Democratic National Committee in the Spring, and "the absence of an active National Committee as the exponent of Democratic Party policy" is deplored. What is a National Committee? As a rule, it consists of little men who talk big. From time to time it emits incandescent bulletins and statements that must make even their composers grin. It is as fitted to expone Democratic policy as a boiling geyser is to run an ammonia plant.

OUR UNBUSINESSLIKE FOREIGN SERVICE.

It is an old tale which Secretary KELLOGG tells o'er again. In his letter to Chairman PORTER of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs he recites anew the facts about our homeless embassies, the heavy personal expenses laid upon Ministers and Ambassadors representing their country abroad, and the virtual exclusion from our foreign service of all who have not private means upon which to draw. Mr. KELLOGG knows how this is from his own experience in London. When the President is casting about to fill diplomatic vacancies, he has to inquire, to be sure, concerning character, ability and special fitness, but the decisive test regarding a possible appointee is whether he is able out of his own fortune to support the dignity of his position, as Congress is unwilling to vote the money to do it. This procedure is manifestly unworthy of a rich country like the United States and is injurious to its foreign service. The theme has been discussed until it is threadbare, yet Congress always moves in connection with it slowly and grudgingly. Members of Congress rail at what they call diplomatic rewards bestowed upon rich men, but are not ready to take the steps necessary to open the career to a poor man of conspicuous merit.

The general treatment of our diplomatic and consular service by Congress is not only mortifying to American pride but is distinctly unbusinesslike. Secretary KELLOGG urges the need of concentrating our Government activities abroad, especially in such cities as Rome, Berlin, Paris and London. We maintain a large personnel in such work, but it is scattered in offices widely separated. This makes for waste and inefficiency, at the same time that it involves needless expense. By capitalizing the rents paid an amount could be had sufficient to build a convenient central building where all the business of the various foreign agencies of our Government could be housed together. This is in line with the movement in Washington itself, where it is proposed to spend on permanent buildings what is now laid out in renting office space. It is also obviously similar to the policy which Governor SMITH is successfully carrying out at Albany and in this city. If we cannot in our diplomatic service be as generous and dignified as we ought to be, we can at least insist upon being businesslike. Present methods are miles away from being that.

THE DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE.

Geneva announces that the meeting to make preliminary studies of disarmament is to be postponed. Because we as a people have what Dr. SHOTWELL in his recent article in THE TIMES has defined as "natural" security, with oceans for frontiers, we find it hard to understand the situation in those countries where armaments as substitutes for mountains and desert or ocean distances offer artificial security. It is to such artificial means—frontiers of guns and bayonets, of "regiments and grenadiers"—that nations have looked for protection in the past. It is coming to be universally felt, however, that there are other means of securing a nation's safety. Both the Locarno pact and the Covenant of the League of Nations are based upon the principle that "the member States accept a common interest in the maintenance of peace and must for their own sakes cooperate to secure it." In the Locarno Treaty there is, however, a vital provision which transcends mere "protestations of peace." There is a definition of aggression; there is a procedure agreed to by the signatories for identifying the peace-breaker. This is of prime importance in giving firm footing for the will to peace.

As Dr. SHOTWELL has pointed out, the problem of disarmament as a whole will not be solved by any single measures. The method of the Washington Conference may very well be employed at the beginning. Units of reduction may be agreed upon, though "there is no part of an army by which one can reckon its strength like the battleship strength of a navy." The intricate problem of land disarmament must be taken up in such a way as not to lessen security but rather to increase it through adequate substitutes for the war machine. To this end there should be a permanent bureau to keep pace with the changes—a "General Staff for Peace engaged upon the strategy of the prevention of war." The Disarmament Conference in making provision for such a continuing body and for its own periodic assembling would thus become "the starting point for an adequate mechanism for continuing international action."

Even though this mechanism functions within the structure of the League of Nations, as it should, and as the sections on health, transit and other subjects are functioning, such a bureau would still be quasi-autonomous and could be attended by non-member States as well as members. This proposal for a continuing study of disarmament and recurring conferences in the future was a part of the so-called "American Plan" which was submitted to the League in 1924, along with the method for defining aggression. If adopted, it might prove to carry with it more than a means for solving the disarmament problem. It might point the way for us in our dealings with the League of Nations in its effort to banish war. The United States could become a party to the disarmament machinery without entering the League so long as it would cooperate effectively with what the members of the League were trying to accomplish. We should in this case not be involved beyond our own specific commitments; but we should not at any rate be blocking the path of the League. Of course, there is a still better way, if only we were ready to take it.

BRITISH PROSPECTS.

Prime Minister BALDWIN faces Parliament today under fairer skies than were anticipated last Summer. The coal situation still lowers, but does not cover the horizon. The Government during the last six months has lost nothing in affirmative strength and has gained by troubles within the Liberal and Labor camps. By-elections have shown no popular drift against Mr. BALDWIN. This is all the more remarkable in view of his enormous majority in the Commons, usually described as an inflated and unstable majority. The Liberal Party is still in the wilderness searching for an issue, or rather is split into several detachments wandering each in its own particular wilderness. The Labor Party yet feels the effects of ZINOVIEFF'S intervention in British trade union politics. The Communist element is apparently on the decline. The proposal to affiliate the British trade unions with the Red International has been defeated. It is no secret that the great mass of British labor is more afraid of Moscow than it is of Mr. BALDWIN.

The army of British unemployed has not been materially reduced. Trade is far from flourishing. Nevertheless, there has been just enough of a lift in the industrial and business situation to justify Mr. BALDWIN as prophet when he consented to the coal subsidy last Summer because he would not permit a labor war to destroy the first faint promise of industrial recovery. Instead of the original £10,000,000, it is now certain that the subsidy will amount to twice that sum. But when additional credits were voted in the Commons last December it was not seriously questioned in any quarter that the subsidy had justified itself. One factor that has notably contributed to remove the fear of renewed class warfare has been the extension of the Government's program of social legislation. This weighs hard on the taxpayer, but deprives the Communist and trade union extremists of considerable ammunition. It has recently been said of Mr. BALDWIN that he has succeeded in deceiving his countrymen into regarding him as a plaint, blunt, well-meaning man, whereas in fact he is a genius. His straightforwardness and sincerity do seem to attain the point where simplicity becomes high talent.

Prime Minister BALDWIN will need all his courage and resourcefulness when the coal problem comes up for definite settlement next Spring. The Coal Commission is preparing its report. From the maximum proposals submitted by the mine owners and the workers it will derive little help. The owners have asked for a reduction in wages, an increase in working hours and a slash in freight rates. They have rejected the plan for grouping productive and unproductive mines. The mine workers ask for nationalization and grouping, though their representatives have admitted that nationalization in itself will not solve the problem of production costs higher than the coal traffic will bear. But if the rival plans suggest an impasse, the spirit of the country does not exclude the possibility of compromise. If trade continues to revive during the next three or four months, the solution will be made easier. Mr. BALDWIN'S plea not to endanger national recovery by inviting industrial chaos will then have more force than ever.

LEXINGTON'S GUARDED COURT HOUSE.

When the case of ED HARRIS, a negro charged with killing a white man and his two children and attempting to assault his wife, is called in Lexington, Ky., a force of 1,000 soldiers of the National Guard will keep the peace and protect the court. No pedestrians or vehicles will be allowed in the streets about the Court House. All the thirteen roads leading into Lexington will be closed to travel. Interurban, electric and bus lines will not be permitted to run into Lexington until the trial is over. Business in the local tobacco houses and stockyards will be suspended. The city will be practically under martial law. An extraordinary document is the proclamation of the County Judge, Sheriff and Mayor requesting law-abiding citizens of Fayette and adjoining counties to remain away from the judicial district as an example to the lawless element, and warning the latter that machine guns, automatic rifles and "deadly gas bombs" will be used by the soldiers if any attempt is made "to interrupt the legal court procedure necessary in the trial of ED HARRIS."

There has not been a lynching in Kentucky for three years, and Lexington prides itself on being a civilized community. But six years ago this month a mob tried to rush a company of soldiers guarding the Court House where WILLIAM LOCKETT, a negro, was to be tried for the "usual crime." The troops opened fire upon their assailants, killing several and wounding more than thirty. The community could not be trusted then to let the law take its course. It could not be trusted now, in the judgment of Governor FIELDS, the Mayor and the Sheriff, to let the trial of HARRIS, also charged with an infamous crime, proceed to the inevitable conclusion.

Law-respecting citizens of Lexington cannot take exception to the elaborate preparations to prevent a lynching of HARRIS when they remember that since 1888 no less than 168 lynchings have occurred in Kentucky. Governor FIELDS was justified in ordering so large a body of troops to the scene of the trial, that the lawless element would be made to keep its distance. The episode of 1920 was properly regarded as a disgrace to the community. Far better a state of martial law in the city, however it might restrict the everyday liberties of the people, than another conflict between the mob and troops, or another lynching. That hideous crime is becoming less frequent throughout the country. Between 1885 and 1924 the number of lynchings was 4,203. The total had fallen to sixteen in 1924 in the whole country. In that year The Columbia (S. C.) Advocate called lynching "the blackest of all crimes." It was condemned by the press everywhere in the South. The rapid decline in lynching during recent years has been attributed to negro migration, which the South can ill afford; to the constructive work of the Inter-racial Commission, and to agitation over the Dyer Anti-Lynching bill. But it would be unfair to the Southern States to regard negro migration as the major cause. As The Macon Telegraph has justly said, the improved moral sense of the people has made "mob violence distasteful." Southern Governors and members of Congress have denounced lynching as vehemently as public men in the North or West.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Question Without an Answer.

Whether capital punishment should be abolished is a question on which opinions differ widely. Nobody can give a conclusive answer. Many assertions are made, as that the infliction of the death sentence on murderers prevents other murders—and that it does not. Nobody knows, but the probability seems to be that fear of execution does make some would-be killers restrain their passions. That it does not stop all is only too evident.

As mere punishment, the death penalty is not much argued for nowadays, only its deterrent effect receiving attention from the more scientific penologists. The plea that the murderer who is hanged will never kill anybody else is not often made today, now that society has better means of protecting itself.

Some of the antagonism to capital punishment is due to a greater appreciation of what a terrible task it is to put a man to death. Sheriffs and prison wardens always delegate it to an agent, who is looked upon with a good deal of horror, though not more, perhaps, than was the case with the headsmen of the past. They never were considered desirable associates, though they were no more responsible for what they did than the jurors who condemned or the Judges who sentenced. Even now, however, there is no great difficulty in getting men to do this grim work for a petty fee.

Abolition Half Accomplished.

That the effort now making to get the Legislature to do away with capital punishment in this State will succeed seems improbable. The time is ill chosen. There are too many bandits at large with ready pistols, and the campaign will not be helped by the prominence in it of CLARENCE DARROW, for as a lawyer he more than once has defended criminals whose death at the hands of the law would have excited protest only from a few extremists denying the right to take life for any reason.

As a matter of fact, capital punishment already is not far from abolished in this country. Almost never is it inflicted on women who murder. Of the men who kill, only a small percentage ever go to the gallows or the chair, and then, usually, it is after many months or several years of delay.

This is a situation highly unsatisfactory, whatever may be one's opinion of the utility of the ultimate penalty. The murderer whose crime has not been particularly atrocious, who acted under any of the "unwritten laws," is apt to escape conviction in the first degree.

If there were no capital punishment for anybody, it is believed that more punishment in the shape of imprisonment would be inflicted; but again all is uncertain. Nobody really knows. The tendency of the times is against capital punishment. It ought either to be abolished or to be carried out with a far closer approach to consistency than our courts now show.

A Virtuous Revolt Against Jazz.

A Parisian audience at a variety theatre last week vehemently protested when a "mixed team" attempted to dance and sing to the music of the "Marseillaise" played as jazz. They rose in anger and, with shouts that had to be obeyed, forced the performance to stop. The management apologized and promised that the offense should not be repeated, and the guilty performers declared their sorrow—no doubt sincere—that they had displeased their dear public.

The episode was significant, and presumably it will be heeded in other capitals as well as in Paris. It indicated that however popular jazz may be with a large part of the public everywhere, it is felt to be a low form of music and that to put a national anthem in it is an insult to patriots.

But why are only national anthems to be protected from what is an admitted desecration? The great music of the past, the classics, the works of the great masters, also have a sort of sacredness for those who love them, yet frequently they are subjected to the same profanation. That, too, should be resented whenever people of taste rising above the jazz level hear it done.

They're Trying to Reform Their Elders!

Dr. CHARLES H. VOSBURGH, Principal of the Jamaica (L. I.) High School, has had his troubles in the past with what may be called the modernism of his pupils, but he announces that he has seen a marked change of late. They are not so wild as they were a year or two ago, and they really seem, he says, to have come to realize better what they are going to school for and that it is the part, not only of wisdom, but of common sense, to utilize their opportunities.

Dr. VOSBURGH even declares that the youth of these latest days, instead of shocking their virtuous elders by violations of the proprieties, themselves are beginning to look severely askance at the derelictions of those same elders, the looseness of their manners and their morals and their small regard for the prohibitions of law.

This is a tale wondrous indeed, and by many if not most observers of contemporaneous youth it will be suspected that at best Dr. VOSBURGH is arguing from the special to the general. Still he may be right, and certainly he is right in holding parents directly responsible for such mistaking of license for liberty as their young sons and daughters may do. As he puts it, "if mothers and fathers are willing to let a girl of 16 or 17 go to a late unchaperoned party with a boy they do not know, and anything happens, they have only themselves to blame."

It would be a neat revenge for the much-lectured youth of the day if they should start in as lecturers themselves and draw lines against their negligent guardians.

Borah for President.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Borah is the greatest man in the United States today, barring none." These were the words of Robert M. Washburn of Boston and Washington when he spoke at the national banquet of the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association, 900 strong, at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on Jan. 20. Incidentally, Mr. Washburn's speech was broadcast by radio.

Inasmuch as he was the founder of the Roosevelt Club of Boston and a former President and also served five years in the Massachusetts Legislature with President Coolidge and happens to be his first biographer, these words are of striking significance, particularly as Mr. Washburn is a correspondent of The Boston Transcript, an ultra-loyal Administration journal.

It is not unlikely that, should we adhere to the World Court, the campaign of 1928 will be fought out again on the issue of national isolation, on which issue Senator Borah would be pre-eminently the strongest candidate of this school at the National Republican Convention. This incident can reasonably stand upon its own eloquence without elaboration on the part of the writer.

Cardinal Mercier on Armenia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Cardinal Mercier was a great friend of Armenia. During his visit to the United States I requested him to send me for publication a message in behalf of Armenian independence. He wrote, on Sept. 24, 1919, from the Archbishop's house, 1,723 Race Street, Philadelphia, as follows:

"Knowing, as I do, the bitter and unheard-of sufferings of the Armenian people, the pitiless persecution they have undergone and the extermination which threatens them, I do not hesitate in uniting my voice with that of all who call for a definite settlement of the Armenian question which will guarantee your people against further injustice and cruelty." A SONG OF FOLLY.

Oh, it is a pity!
Once there was a small town
Wished to be a city.

Men with saws and hatchets,
Up and down the village,
On their wicked business—
Massacre and pillage.

Roots can worry concrete,
Trunks can swerve a stone.
Gallant trees lie stricken,
Lovely boughs are prone.

Do not cry for beauty,
In a thrifty day:
Green and gold and scarlet,
Sacrificed for gray.

Now no gracious shadows
Lean across a gate;
Oh, the tidy streets are Very bare and straight.

In the Spring no small leaves
Gleaming overhead,
Singing little green songs—
All the trees are dead.

Whistle not for blackbirds,
Call no robins now;
They would scorn a gable
Who have known a bough.

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAIN.

A Notable Tribute to the Beauty of Proposed Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interesting letter of Dr. BOHN in THE NEW YORK TIMES a few days ago, describing the attractions and beauty of the Great Smoky Mountains and the proposed national park there, recalls a description of that country made in a speech by Landon C. Haynes fifty years or more ago at a banquet at Memphis, Tenn., in honor of the beach and bar.

The famous Confederate General N. B. Forrest, in introducing Mr. Haynes, said: "Gentlemen, I propose the health of the eloquent gentleman from East Tennessee, a country sometimes called 'The Godforsaken.'" Mr. Haynes, in responding, spoke as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I plead guilty to the soft impeachment. I was born in East Tennessee, on the banks of the Watauga, which in the Indian vernacular means 'beautiful river,' and beautiful river it is. I have stood upon its banks in my childhood and looked down upon its glassy waters and there beheld a heaven below, and then looked up and beheld a heaven above, reflecting like two vast mirrors, each in the other, its moons, its planets and twinkling stars. Away from its rocky borders of cedar, pine and hemlock stretches a vale back to the distant mountains, more beautiful than the groves of Switzerland, more exquisite and grander than the placid vales of Italy.

"There stand the great Roan, the Black and the Smoky Mountains, upon whose summits I have seen the clouds gather of their own accord even on the brightest day. There I have seen the Great Spirit of the storm go take his evening nap in his pavilion of darkness and clouds. Then I have seen him aroused at midnight and come forth like a giant refreshed by slumber, and arouse the tempest and let loose the red lightnings that ran along the mountain tops for a thousand miles swifter than an eagle's flight in heaven. Then I have seen the lightnings stand up like angels of light and dance in the clouds to the music of that grand organ of nature whose keys seemed to have been touched by the fingers of divinity, which responded in notes of thunder that resounded throughout the universe.

"Then I have seen the darkness drift away and Morn get up from her saffron bed and come forth like a queen robed in her garments of light and stand tiptoe on the misty mountain tops, and Black Night fled away from her glorious face to his bedchamber at the Pole; and she lighted the green vale and beautiful river, where I was born and played in childhood, with a smile of sunshine. O beautiful land of the mountains, with thy sun-painted cliffs, how can I ever forget thee?"

J. R. GARDNER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My attention has been called to the fact that the proposed Great Smoky Mountain National Park, conforming to lines recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, will not include the lakes which I mentioned in my recent article in THE TIMES. However, the lakes as formed by the Great Cove Creek Dam will be, it is hoped, preserved for public enjoyment by the creation of a second park to be known as the Tennessee National Park. This park, located west of the Tennessee River, would have almost exactly the same area as the Great Smoky Mountain Park. The development of the second area is still problematical. Meanwhile, plans for the Great Smoky Mountain Park have been fully developed and are on the verge of success. As you observed in your editorial which accompanied the article, these plans cannot fail if our people are awakened to the facts.

Protection as Price-Fixing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is a question that I should like to ask President Coolidge:

Why is he adamant against price-fixing for the farmer and at the same time more than adamant in favor of price-fixing for the manufacturer through the tariff, perhaps the most perfect automatic price-fixing machine the world has ever seen?

Does any man say that the tariff is not a price-fixer? Let him see the struggles made to advance the percentages on the import price, whenever a tariff bill is being formed. When the Ways and Means Committee gets down to business, is there any other question before it than that of the amount it will add to the price?

It cannot be denied that the President may find comfort for his policy in the parable wherein we are told that "unto every man that hath shall be given; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

Still, we may see that the man with one talent digged in the earth to avoid work, while the American farmer digs to furnish abundant life to all. Question to President Coolidge: Are they worthy the same reward for their digging?

Let no one imagine this to be a plea for the price-fixing of farm products. My, no; it is simply a brief study in psychology.

Economic Side of War Debts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was much interested in reading on your editorial page this morning the letter of Mr. Frederick H. Allen, in which he discussed the "moral side of the war debts," and it might not be amiss to add a few words on the economic side of the question.

Money, to a nation, is like life-blood to an individual. As a medium of exchange it keeps alive the entire industrial system, and the healthiness of a nation's finances is a vital factor in determining that country's economic well-being.

By taking too much of this national life-blood from other nations, we not only make our neighbors in the community of nations anemic, but we may find ourselves suffering from high blood pressure due to the injection of too much "blood" into the commercial and industrial arteries of the national body politic.

Hawthorne Mementos.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. J. E. F. Hawthorne, in his article on the unveiling of the statue of his grandfather, states that original manuscripts, &c., are preserved in the Peabody Museum of Salem.

The Peabody Museum is devoted to science, marine and ethnological collections, and is obviously not the place for historical material. All such matter is in the Essex Institute, in which many Hawthorne mementos are to be found. HENRY W. BELKNAP,

BIDS CHURCHES WAR FOR CITY SCHOOLS

FEDERATION APPLAUDS HIM

Leader Demands Change in Laws If Courts Uphold Bar to Classrooms of State.

Strong opposition to the freethinkers who wish to bar all religious training from the schools of the city was voiced yesterday at the annual luncheon of the Greater New York Federation of Churches at the Hotel Pennsylvania. Dr. William E. Millar, General Secretary of the federation, in his annual report said there was urgent necessity for religious education for the young. He said that an abandonment of this teaching would jeopardize the future of both the Church and the State.

"If there is any of the red blood of Revolutionary days in our veins we will not let any small minority of freethinkers rob our children of their birthright," he declared. "They have thrown down the gauntlet and we stand ready to pick it up. It is not a question of religious teaching in the schools; its importance lies much deeper than that, involving the entire welfare of our youth. We are ready to fight, and if the courts decide that the freethinkers must be upheld under the present law, then by all that is right and holy we will have to change the law."

Fifty-nine Churches Represented.

Dr. Millar's announcement was enthusiastically received by the 750 members of the federation, who represent fifty-nine Protestant denominations.

The question of religious teaching in the schools was the subject of a heated controversy last week when a proposal to permit the daily reading of the Ten Commandments in the schools of the city was presented to the Board of Education. Thomas E. Molloy, the Catholic Bishop of Brooklyn, strongly endorsed the idea, and the Jewish Council of Greater New York was among the organizations opposing it.

Dr. Millar continued his address with the statement that the forefathers, when they separated the Church and State, never intended to deprive the young of religious influence and education. Speaking of the work of the organization, he said that federation was one of the greatest words of the Christian vocabulary and had made isolation almost obsolete. He asserted, however, that he did not believe in merging denominations, since such an organization would lose individual freedom of thought. Dr. Millar said that the brightest hopes of Protestantism in this city were in Queens, where much of the federation's work was being done.

Fred A. Duggan, assistant to E. M. Statler, who provided the luncheon to the delegates as his personal guests, conveyed Mr. Statler's good wishes to the organization. H. F. Laflamme of the federation's field staff read the minutes, and George L. Leonard, Assistant Treasurer, reported that the federation had handled $75,000 in 1925 and had a balance of $2,000.

Directors Elected.

The Board of Directors, newly elected, consists of the Rev. H. A. Atkinson, the Rev. J. F. Berg, Raymond B. Fosdick, Henry N. Furnald, the Rev. A. E. Kelgwin, the Rev. J. W. Langdale, the Rev. Andrew Magill and E. P. Maynard. The newly elected trustees of the federation are George Gordon Battle, S. B. Chapin, Raymond B. Fosdick, E. P. Maynard and C. R. Saul. Dr. John M. Moore, the new President of the federation, who is pastor of the Marcy Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, presided at the luncheon.

William K. Knox, President of the Bowery Savings Bank and a former President of the American Bankers' Association, made a plea for laymen to take up the task of spreading religious education among the young. He advocated the formation of a committee of 3,000 to carry out the work. Dr. Henry Howard of Australia, now supplying the pulpit of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, also stressed the value of religious education for the young.

It was announced at the close of the meeting that Charles H. Tuttle, Linn Williams and Charles Schurman would be the attorneys representing the federation in Albany on Feb. 13, when the Court of Appeals will hear its arguments against the injunction recently secured by the Freethinker Society of New York against State Commissioner of Education Frank P. Graves, stopping the practice of excusing school children early to allow them to receive religious instruction in their churches.

FARMING COURSE FOR BOYS.

New York Men Provide Scholarships in Doylestown School.

The advantages of the National Farm School at Doylestown, Pa., and the opportunities in scientific agriculture which it gives the city boy, were described last night to a group of New York boys who have applied for sixty free scholarships in the institution. About 250 boys and their parents attended the meeting at Greenwich House, 29 Barrow Street.

Money for the scholarships, which provide a three-year course in scientific farming, was contributed by New York business and professional men under the leadership of Adam L. Gimbel and Abraham Erlanger. Applications are open until Feb. 12 to New York City boys between the ages of 16 and 21, who have completed eight years of school. The National Farm School gives an academic course, together with its instruction in scientific agriculture and specialised farm work.

SCOPES'S SUCCESSOR QUITS

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 1 (AP).—Raleigh Reece, who succeeded John Thomas Scopes as science teacher in Rhea County High School when Mr. Scopes violated the State Anti-Evolution Teaching law, has resigned. Reports received here that he had a difference with the School Board over an entertainment at the school were denied by the board head.

Professor Reece formerly was a newspaper reporter and is a brother of Representative Carroll Reece of the First District.

RETIRED BY WALDO IN 1911

Had Served the City for 26 Years—Funeral Services to Be Held This Morning.

Former Police Inspector Richard (Smiling Dick) Walsh died on Sunday at his residence, 3 East 128th Street. His age was 66. He leaves his wife, two sons and a daughter. Services will be held this morning in All Saints Church, 129th Street and Madison Avenue.

During the period just following the shift of the centre of the city's night life from below to above Forty-second Street, Inspector Walsh was an important official of the Police Department. He had charge of that inspection district, the Fourth.

The twenty-six years of Inspector Walsh's service began in 1885. He reached the rank of Captain in 1896 and became an Inspector in 1903. In August, 1911, to his surprise and against his wishes, he was retired on the ground of physical disability by Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo. The only charges ever made against him that attained any publicity were concerned with alleged preferential treatment of Churchill's restaurant in providing a special police guard in front of it on New Year's Eve. After a trial the charges were dropped.

Those who came into personal relations with the Inspector agreed that his nickname of "Smiling Dick" was appropriate. There was something mysterious about his smile. Often it was disturbing to the person talking to him. Some gained the impression that the appearance of the smile meant the Inspector was thinking of other things than what were being told to him. Criminals feared it, suspecting the Inspector was enjoying his secret knowledge of evidence that would convict them.

YOUNG WOMAN SAVES TWO CHILDREN IN FIRE

Miss Jennie McLeod, 30 years old, of 352 Smith Street, Brooklyn, saved two small children from a burning tenement at 342-346 Smith Street yesterday.

Miss McLeod was visiting Mrs. Anna Dunleavy on the third floor of the brick building when fire broke out in the cellar, filling the halls and stairways with dense smoke. Two alarms were turned in. While Mrs. Dunleavy, who had tried to escape down the stairs, staggered back, partly overcome by smoke, Miss McLeod took in her arms Marie Dunleavy, 7 months old, opened a window and waited for the fire apparatus.

A ladder was swung to the window and the young woman and baby were carried to safety. Firemen rescued Mrs. Dunleavy. No sooner had Miss McLeod saved the baby than she larned that Florence Gould, 2 years old, was in the apartment on the second floor, occupied by Mrs. Southern, who was taken down a ladder. Without hesitating, Miss McLeod went back into the building and saved the little girl.

Mrs. Louise Coyle and Miss Christina Spencer, who were on the third flobr, also were rescued by firemen. About ten other persons got out in safety.

The fire was confined to the basement. The damage was estimated at $1,500.

MRS. SUTPHIN, 102, DIES.

6 Great-Great-Grandchildren Survive Jersey Shore's Oldest Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

Senator's Parent Had Been Congressman From the Sacramento District.

Special to The New York Times.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 1.—Grove L. Johnson, father of United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson, died here this afternoon from heart disease in his eighty-fifth year.

Mr. Johnson on June 30 resigned as receiver of the Federal Land Office here because of ill health. He had been counsel in many of Sacramento county's most famous criminal cases. He was President of the County Bar Association for twelve years; was Grand Master of the Independent Order of Oddfellows in California and held a similar position with the Red Men. He belonged to seven other organizations.

His first wife, whom he married in 1861, two years before he came to California, died in 1903. Five years later he married Miss Alice Hassett, daughter of W. J. Hassett, former Mayor of Sacramento. Besides his wife and Senator Johnson, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Josephine Fink and Mrs. Mabel Dray of this city.

Mr. Johnson was born March 27, 1841, in Syracuse, N. Y. He received a grammar school education, studied law and was admitted to the bar there in 1862.

He was a life-long Republican, but threatened to desert the party in 1912 when Roosevelt and Hiram Johnson were the Bull Moose candidates.

In 1894 he went to Congress from the Second California District. He refused to run for re-election.

In 1921, at the age of 80, he accepted the appointment as receiver of the United States Land Office at Sacramento from the late President Harding, who had beaten his son in the contest the year before for the Republican Presidential nomination.

RUDISCH—Dr. Julius, consulting physician to Mt. Sinai Hospital, suddenly at Doylestown, Pa. Funeral from Campbell's Funeral Church, Broadway at 66th St., Tuesday, 10 A. M.

RUDISCH—Dr. Julius. It is with deep regret that the Medical Board of the Mount Sinai Hospital learned of the death of Dr. Julius Rudisch. He was one of the hospital's earliest graduates and was an attending physician for nearly forty years. Dr. Rudisch was a physician of unusual attainments; wise, kind, humane and tolerant, an indefatigable worker, a constant student and a scholar. The impress of his character and labor is indelibly stamped upon the fortunes of our hospital.

E. BIERER, President.
I. FRIESNER, Secretary.

RUDISCH—Dr. Julius. The members of the Association of the Junior Medical Staff of the Mount Sinai Hospital have learned with profound sorrow of the death of their beloved teacher, Dr. Julius Rudisch. His forceful character and stimulating personality, his broad knowledge and experience have influenced the careers of many of its members and will be remembered by all.

SULZBERGER—On Sunday, Jan. 31, after a short illness, Leo, husband of Beatrice Joseph Sulzberger, in the forty-first year of his age. Funeral private.

SULZBERGER, LEO—

The Directors of Montefiore Hospital have been inexpressibly shocked and saddened to learn of the untimely passing of their colleague, Leo Sulzberger, and desire that this tribute of affection and esteem be placed upon its record and a copy be transmitted to his sorrow-stricken family.

Leo Sulzberger was one of the finest type of our younger communal workers, deeply sympathetic with the stress and suffering and the handicapped, and anxious as well to aid those who were struggling to improve their social status. He threw himself wholeheartedly and with enthusiasm into the difficult task of securing the large funds required to meet the necessities of the Societies of Federation, to which he was Montefiore's accredited representative. Possessed of imagination and of great ability, tireless in energy, he soon came to play a role second to none in the Federation's activities.

We cannot contemplate his passing after a brief illness in the very prime of his young manhood, but as an irreparable loss to the community. How much greater indeed is the blow that has fallen on his stricken family. We wish that we might assuage their grief, but can bring them only words of sympathy and consolation.

Leo Sulzberger has left his impress upon the great communal movements of his time, has attached to himself a host of devoted friends who took a pride in his noble concepts of public service and loved him for himself. All of us shall revere his memory. May his soul rest in peace.

S. G. ROSENBAUM, President.
ARTHUR D. WOLF, Honorary Secretary.

MITCHELL RENEWS FIRE ON AIR SERVICE

Asserts Bureaucracies Mislead Purposely and Consistently Congress and People.

DOMINATION IS ATTACKED

SAYS FAREWELL TO ARMY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Colonel William Mitchell began anew today his campaign for a change in the aviation policies of the army and navy when, in bidding farewell to the army, from which his resignation became effective today, he denounced the "military bureaucracy" in terms no less forceful than those he employed in the attack which led to his court-martial and suspension from the service. He reiterated his purpose to keep up the fight for a unified air service.

The statement was issued soon after Colonel Mitchell had received formal notice from the War Department that his resignation had been accepted by direction of President Coolidge.

"Unorganized for Modern Defense."

Colonel Mitchell received members of the press in the office of his counsel, Representative Frank R. Reid of Illinois, where he issued his statement. After reviewing his army service of nearly twenty-eight years, the Colonel's statement continued:

"The United States remains today unorganized for modern defense. In spite of the expenditure of nearly $500,000,000 for aviation since the war and the loss of scores of our airmen, we have no real military air force for the protection of our great country.

"We are left hopelessly behind in our civil and commercial aviation and we have no plan of system whatever for furthering and developing this most important agency.

"This condition is due to the blind opposition of the regular army and navy bureaucracies that have arrogated to themselves the policy of standing squarely in the way of any progress, and constantly advocate the theories of the bow and arrow men of a barbarous age.

"Calling to their aid the instrumentalities of propaganda and unionized control, they have consistently and purposely misled Congress and the people as to what this country needs to insure its security. They have entrenched themselves behind a bureaucratic system run by self-perpetuating oligarchies. They have manipulated the laws so that they can control the armed forces even against the action of the President himself.

"They have coerced, bulldozed and attempted to ruin patriotic officers who have disagreed with their views and who sought to better our national defense, which the officers and men of the armed services know is necessary.

Sees Bureaucratic Domination.

"Due to the military bureaucracies our land and sea forces, composed of splendid men, are shaken in their conception of duty, lacking in confidence in the army and navy as institutions, and dubious of their own future. The inexcusable losses to our air and sea forces are mute examples of inefficiency and negligence, in spite of the vigorous white washing attempted by the army, navy and executive boards.

"When the actions of the army and navy are brought into question they themselves are the sole judges of the shortcomings.

"The military bureaucracy, resisting all innovations, has become such that it is impossible to secure any needed changes in the system. The reasons they give are veiled in mystery and secrecy, so as to confuse the public, whereas actually the conditions to be met are simple and public.

"This is one of the greatest menaces to our free institutions that has ever occurred. The bureaucratic party, as it might be called, in its inner workings in Washington is more powerful than the Democrats and Republicans, more powerful than the influence of any creed or sect or religious order. Our Government has become one of bureaucratic domination.

"In our beloved America, the greatest of all countries, we must adopt a national defense policy founded on our particular needs, based on the abundance of our raw materials, the excellence of our industries and the remarkable intelligence of our people.

Refuses to Remain "Muzzled."

"I have the greatest respect and affection for my comrades in the army and navy, with whom I have participated in many campaigns and expeditions, and with my companions in the Air Services, who are the principal ones we must look to for our security. I shall keep in close touch with them in the future.

"However, the administration of our defense by the bureaucracies maintained by the army and navy oligarchies passes the limit of our national conscience and must be thoroughly overhauled at once. For years I worked to better conditions from within the service.

"The growing opposition to modernization exhibited by the army and navy bureaucracies and the inexcusable killing of my comrades in the air forces, sent on propaganda missions to county fairs by non-flying service politicians, made drastic and instant action a necessity.

"Every statement I have made has been supported by good and sufficient evidence. Good has already resulted and much more will follow.

"From now on I feel that I can better serve my country and the flag I love by bringing a realization of the true condition of our national defense straight to the people than by remaining muzzled in the army."

Colonel Mitchell will make his initial appearance on the lecture platform at Carnegie Hall in New York City on Feb. 10 and continue on the Chautauqua Circuit. James E. Pond, who will manage the tour, denied that Colonel Mitchell would receive $4,000 a week.

Chapman Hearing Date Set.

Argument on the appeal from the decision of Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut denying a writ of habeas corpus to Gerald Chapman, whose fight to prevent his hanging on a charge of murder has gone on since his conviction months ago, will be heard in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on Friday.

Four Heads of Big Firm Began Work as Office Boys

It has just been revealed by the four chief executives of the Graybar Electric Company, formerly the supply department of the Western Electric Company, that all of them were former office boys.

The company was recently organized by the Western Electric Company to have charge of all electrical supply sales, and it is credited with being the largest distributer of electrical supplies in the world. It was not until after the formation of the corporation and its chief executives had been selected, however, that these executives themselves discovered that each had at one time served as an office boy, and that each began his struggle for a livelihood with no better educational equipment than that supplied by a grammar school.

The four executives are Albert Lincoln Salt, President of the company; Leo M. Dunn, Vice President; Norman R. Frame, Secretary, and Elmer W. Shepard, Treasurer.

COAL MEN, DEADLOCKED, RESUME PARLEY TODAY

No New Proposals Now in Sight From Either Operators or Miners.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 1 (AP).—The miners and operators, deadlocked over a settlement plan to end the long hard coal strike, will resume their session here tomorrow afternoon after a week-end recess.

When the two sub-committees, made up of six miners and six operators, quit on Saturday, they had disposed of the latest plans submitted by each side, and the table was clear, for the moment at least, of any new proposals.

Major W. W. Inglis, Chairman of the Operators' Committee, urged each side to try to figure out a plan before the joint conference again met that would be acceptable to both parties.

Neither the miners nor the operators have held separate meetings since Saturday, and, so far as has been learned, no new plan is in sight for consideration tomorrow.

Arbitration continues to be the principal issue. The operators want a provision for arbitration in the new contract if an agreement cannot be reached during the contract period on the question of readjusting wages in keeping with economic conditions.

The miners want a contract at the old wage rates and are standing out against arbitration in case a readjustment is suggested by either side. They urge that the miners and operators should settle their own disputes without arbitration.

Anthracite mining measures before the Pennsylvania General Assembly are due for an airing this week, but with little prospect of either the House or Senate reaching a vote within the next ten days.

The Wilkes-Barre has developed a group of "operator-miners," who are working a mine near Devil's Elbow abandoned by the Red Ash Coal Company. More than 100 striking miners are engaged in the work. Tunnels are being timbered and driven by modern mining methods, and from 80 to 125 tons of coal are being brought to the surface daily and carried by trucks to consumers.

A year ago the Red Ash Company surrendered its charter and dissolved, owing to a fire in the lower veins of its workings which could not be brought under control.

COMPLAINTS OF SMOKE TAX HARRIS'S STAFF

Spurred to increased activity by a "flood of complaints" concerning the soft coal smoke nuisance, Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris ordered twenty-three inspectors yesterday to investigate complaints in Manhattan.

During the past week Health Department nurses visited 2,861 tenement houses, occupied by 82,797 persons. The nurses found 2,014 cases of severe bronchitis and other lung troubles, and 767 cases of other diseases. Dr. Harris was unable to say what proportion of the illness was caused by the coal shortage.

FRENCH SECT IS MOBBED.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Bordeaux is worked up to a fever heat by the continued press and pamphlet campaigns waged for and against the mystical sect known as "Our Lady of Tears," which a few weeks ago sent several of its votaries to flagellate a priest at Bombon.

A large crowd assembled at Bordeaux today near "Mother Mary" Mesmin's chapel and then broke in its doors, threatening a score of worshipers belonging to the sect.

The first raid was stopped when a gardener working on the chapel grounds fired two shots in the air with his revolver, but the crowd later recovered courage and began a second charge, which was thwarted by police reinforcements.

As darkness came on, the hostile throng dispersed, after expressing their anger against Mary Mesmin, who, it is reported, fled from the town three days ago.

PATROLMAN IS FREED.

Court Finds Evidence Does Not Sustain Assault Charge.

Patrolman Francis Carey of the Liberty Avenue (Brooklyn) Station was discharged yesterday after a hearing before Magistrate McAndrews in the Jefferson Market Court on charges of intoxication and felonious assault lodged against him ten days ago after his arrest in St. Vincent's Hospital, where he was treated for a pistol wound in the right leg. The Magistrate said that insufficient evidence had been presented that Carey struck Charles Carroll, 18 years old, of 117 Ninth Avenue with a can of tomatoes, after Carey was alleged to have accidentally shot himself at Eighth Avenue and Fifteenth Street.

Carroll testified that he had had some drinks and had only a hazy recollection of what had happened. Carey testified that he became suspicious of Carroll in a delicatessen store in Eighth Avenue near Fifteenth Street. He entered the store because he thought a hold-up was in progress, he added.

MORE RAIL UNIONS DEMAND HIGHER PAY

$500,000,000 INCREASE SEEN

Engineers Expected to Present Demands Soon—Refusal Is Expected.

General managers of all the principal railroads of the country were served yesterday with wage demands by representatives of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors.

Demands are pending with most of the roads in behalf of the shopmen and the railway clerks and are expected within a few weeks from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Total increases demanded are calculated to aggregate $500,000,000 for all the roads. This amount, it was said yesterday by a spokesman for the railroads, would "cut off all of the surplus earned by the carriers since their recovery from Federal control."

Proposed Wage Scale.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

	Rate Per Mile.	Day.	Month.
Conductors	.05166	$7.75	$232.50
Assistant conductors	.0450	6.84	205.20
Baggagemen handling express mail	.04788	7.18	215.40
Baggagemen handling dynamo and express	.0456	6.84	205.20
Baggagemen handling either express, dynamo or mail	.0456	6.84	205.20
Baggagemen	.041	6.16	184.80
Flagmen and brakemen	.04	6.00	180.00

THROUGH FREIGHT RATES.

	Rate Per Mile.	Per Day.
Conductors	.0734	$7.34
Brakemen	.0584	5.84

YARD SERVICE.

	Per Day.
Car retarder operator	$6.44
Foremen	7.64
Helpers	7.16
Switchtenders	5.72

Regarding other service, it was said yesterday:

"The same increases shall apply to milk, mixed work, miscellaneous or any service not enumerated, as are applied to the service in which they are now classified. Where there is a separate rate for milk, mixed work, miscellaneous or other service, it shall be increased in the same amount of money compared with rates in effect this date, as the freight or passenger rate, according to the overtime basis on which it is calculated."

Refusal Is Expected.

The railroads have until March 2 to reply, and in most cases, it was said, the reply would be a refusal such as the New York Central recently returned in answer to wage demands of its shopmen.

In most classes of labor the increases asked for represent an advance of $1 a day over the present rate. There is little agreement among railroad men, however, as to the exact amount they would add to the expenses of the carriers. This is due to the fact that the rate per mile paid the trainmen causes wide variations in individual compensations.

L. E. Sheppard, in behalf of the conductors, contends that the wage scale asked for would not result in a restoration of wartime pay, while spokesmen for the carriers say it would increase by from 4 to 5 per cent. the wartime outlay for labor.

Interest in railroad circles centres chiefly on what railroad the trainmen will concentrate their demands after they receive formal refusals.

Smith Granted Increase.

In the Fall of 1923, when the then current wage contract expired and the one now in force was written, the employes selected the New York Central, of which the late Alfred H. Smith was then President. Mr. Smith made known, contrary to the advice of his subordinates, that he believed the men deserved an increase and that he would grant it.

The New York Central's action in granting the demands came as a distinct surprise to the other railroads, which were forced to follow suit.

In the present instance it is not believed the employes will select the New York Central, as President Crowley is said to look with disfavor upon an advance and has indicated his stand in the reply of the road to the shopcrafts. The Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania are regarded as more likely to be chosen.

One railroad man suggested yesterday that the Chesapeake & Ohio was in a particularly vulnerable position as its minority stockholders have presented detailed figures to the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Nickel Plate case to show the property's large earning power in 1924 and 1925.

URGES A DECREASE IN GERMAN PAYMENTS

Dernberg Voices Official Opinion That Billion Marks Is the Annual Limit.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 1.—One billion marks yearly is the utmost Germany will be able to pay in the coming years, according to Dr. Dernburg, former envoy to the United States and ex-Minister of Imperial Germany. This amount represents the interest on railroad bonds held by the reparations authorities. Dr. Dernburg bases his estimate on figures from allied and German financiers, taking into account the per capita wealth of population in the different nations.

Using the figures of the Italian specialist in financial statistics, Signor Albertini, he shows Germany's poverty, compared with the United States, which he used as an argument that Germany is unable to liquidate her debts according to the Dawes schedule. Signor Albertini rated American individual wealth in 1918 at $3,600, while the average German's property is placed at $962. After the first and second reparations payments the individual wealth of Germans dropped to $458.

Though the speech of Dr. Dernburg, which was made before the American Chamber of Commerce, was unofficial, it is believed to reflect the ideas of German financiers as well as officialdom. It is known that the figure for yearly payments set by Dr. Dernburg is the same as that mentioned when the discussions were brought up as to what revisions under the Dawes plan could be made which would, at the same time, enable Germany to uphold her industry.

Governor Smith Proclaims 'Patriots Week,' From Lincoln's to Washington's Birthdays

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 1.—Pointing out that 1926 marks the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Republic and this State, Governor Smith, in a proclamation issued tonight, proclaimed the period between Feb. 12 and Feb. 22 as "Patriots' Week."

The Governor suggested that programs in honor of the great men of the State and nation be arranged by the Legislature, cities, villages, schools, churches, clubs and societies. He said that for years Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12, and Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, had been observed in New York State as legal holidays, "because, although sons of other States, they belong to us, as they do to all Americans and to the world."

"Let attention be given," the Governor wrote, "to the worthy deeds of the founding fathers of this State and this Republic so that our citizens may have a more intelligent understanding of the origin of our institutions, a deeper appreciation of their civic responsibilities in a democracy and a greater willingness to meet their political obligations under it.

"We need to cherish the stabilizing influences associated with our historical origins and the inspiring help of the creators of our freedom to aid us in solving the problems of today."

The Governor said that several days before the Continental Congress issued the Declaration of Independence the Provincial Congress of New York had taken the first step toward liberty by proclaiming that the old form of government was dissolved. He referred to Robert R. Livingston, a son of New York and a member of the committee to draft the Declaration of Independence, which was written by Thomas Jefferson.

"It should be remembered," the Governor wrote, "that the heroic struggles on Long Island, Harlem Heights and at White Plains occurred in 1776 and that George Washington spent the greater part of that year in New York State. At the same time George Clinton, New York's first Governor; John Jay, Alexander Hamilton, James Duane, Philip Schuyler and other sons of New York were emerging as leaders of the patriotic cause."

The Governor declared that in the 150 years since the Declaration of Independence the people of the United States and of New York State have been blessed with educational opportunities, religious freedom and material prosperity such as few nations on earth have enjoyed.

FOSTER TO REMAIN AS DRY HEAD HERE

SEVEN MORE AGENTS OUT

Brooklyn Office Force Is Reduced—Buckner Wins Appeal on Seized Warehouse Liquor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—There will be no change in the office of Prohibition Administrator at New York, General Lincoln G. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, said tonight by way of comment on reports that John A. Foster, in charge there, would be transferred to Philadelphia and the vacancy filled by the promotion of Palmer Canfield, former chief, or John Cashin, Mr. Foster's legal adviser.

General Andrews suggested that the reports that Mr. Foster would be relieved were inspired by the order issued on Saturday giving Mr. Foster the additional work of organizing and directing a special squad to look after the diversion of industrial alcohol from legitimate to bootleg channels. General Andrews said Mr. Foster's work as head of the new squad, which will be active in a number of districts, would be supplemental to his duties as Administrator at New York.

BUCKNER APPEAL UPHELD.

Court Decides Former Owner Can't Regain Seized Liquor.

Seized liquor in excess of the amount specified in a search warrant cannot be recovered from the Government by its former owner, according to a decision handed down yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of the United States against the Old Dominion Warehouse, Inc. The decision, written by Judge Learned Hand, and a concurring opinion written by Judge Charles M. Hough, upheld United States Attorney Buckner's appeal on a writ of error from a ruling made last July by Judge Goddard.

An affidavit was made by Saul Grill, a prohibition agent, in April, 1923, that he had seen ten or twelve barrels of liquor delivered to the Old Dominion Warehouse, Inc., 83 West Houston Street, that he had smelled the barrels and recognized the contents to be intoxicating liquor. With the search warrant issued by Judge Goddard prohibition agents raided the warehouse on April 7, 1923, and seized 4,667½ cases of assorted liquors.

Judge Goddard on July 22, 1925, granted a motion to vacate the search warrant and for the return of the seized liquors on the ground that the contraband could not reasonably be supposed to be the same liquor "seen and smelled" by Grill. Assistant United States Attorney John M. Harlan obtained a stay pending the higher court's decision.

Prohibition Administrator Foster refused yesterday to give out the names of the thirty agents who were dismissed on Saturday because they are seeking new employment. The local prohibition enforcement force now is said to include 115 men.

Seven prohibition agents were discharged from the Brooklyn prohibition headquarters yesterday, according to John A. Wilbur, in charge of that office. There are now ten prohibition agents left for the Eastern District of New York. Two men were released last Saturday. Mr. Wilbur expects that some vacancies will be filled.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin, General Andrews and United States Attorney Buckner will attend a luncheon at the Lawyers' Club, 115 Broadway, on Saturday at which they will talk on prohibition enforcement work.

TO GREET CARDINAL HAYES.

Churchmen to Meet Him at Pier on Return From Rome Thursday.

Officials of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, pastors of a number of the churches and prominent Catholic laymen will go to the pier at the foot of West Fifty-fifth Street on Thursday to meet Cardinal Hayes, who is returning aboard the Lloyd Sabaudo liner Conte Rosso from Rome, where he went to take part in the ceremonies in connection with the closing of the Holy Door.

At the request of the Cardinal his reception will be informal and quiet. Among those who it is expected will be at the pier will be Bishop John J. Dunn, Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and Mgr. Thomas G. Carroll, chancellor of the archdiocese.

The priests who accompanied Cardinal Hayes to Rome are Mgr. Thomas J. Donahue, his private secretary; the Rev. J. Francis A. McIntyre, assistant chancellor of the archdiocese, and the Rev. Vincent Arcese of Stamford, N. Y., who acts as Italian secretary to the Cardinal.

Judgments Against Mrs. Carter.

Two judgments by default were filed in the City Court yesterday against Mrs. Leslie Carter in favor of John Colton, an actor. In one suit, in which a judgment for $1,494 was entered, Colton alleged that he was employed to appear in "Alias or Tartary" at $40 a week and that he was not paid for fifteen weeks. In the second suit Colton alleged that he lent $2,000 to Mrs. Carter in October last and that only $200 was repaid.

14 BROOKLYN LINES ASK BUS FRANCHISES

THREE SYSTEMS PROPOSED

Walker to Consider Bus Operation in His Conferences on the General Transit Problem.

Applications of fourteen companies for franchises to operate bus lines in Brooklyn were submitted yesterday to the Board of Estimate by its division of franchises and considered by the board in Committee of the Whole. Action was deferred until the committee meeting on Feb. 15 to give the members time for consideration. The question of bus operation is closely allied with the general transit problem and will be considered by Mayor Walker in his conferences with the members of the Transit Commission and the Board of Transportation.

The fourteen applications presented to the board for action were from the Central Brooklyn Omnibus Corporation, C. I. and G. Bus Corporation, Community Transportation Company, Inc., Crescent Bus Line, Inc., Eastern Parkway, Brownsville and East New York Transit Relief Association, Inc., Equitable Coach Company, Inc., Kings Coach Company, Inc., Kings County Bus Corporation, Leonard Bus Company, Inc., Municipal Transit and Motor Haulage Service Company, Queens Bus Lines, Inc., Royal Bus Company, Inc., Sheepshead Bay Bus Company, Inc. and Unique Bus Service.

The report to the board failed to favor the applications of eight of the companies. The Equitable Coach Company was said to have expressed preference for no particular routes. The Kings County Bus Corporation was declared not to be in a position to undertake borough-wide operation. The Unique Bus Service was reported to offer the city 10 per cent. of the net receipts as a basis for the franchise. The Municipal Transit and Motor Haulage Company was reported to have failed to offer to operate a system as a whole. The C. I. & G. Bus Corporation, while offering a five-cent fare, was said to have failed to offer free transfers to lines with which it is affiliated. The proposal of the Royal Bus Company was said to be incomplete, and the Leonard Bus Company to have sought franchises for lines already granted to the Queens Bus Lines. No address was furnished by the Community Transportation Corporation, the report stated.

The report added that there were three bus systems proposed for Brooklyn, and that the Queens Bus Lines had applied to operate all of them. Two companies, the Sheepshead Bay Bus Company and the Kings Coach Company, which are willing to combine, have offered to operate system A only.

The Central Brooklyn Omnibus Corporation has offered to operate all the lines in System B and the Eastern Parkway, Brownsville and East New York Transit Relief Association to operate all the lines in System C. The Crescent Bus Line has offered to operate one line in System C.

SUBWAY SERVICE HEARING.

Transit Commission Aims to Complete Testimony on Feb. 15.

Plans for the final hearing by the Transit Commission on the proposed extension of the Interborough express service on subway lines in Manhattan and the Bronx were made yesterday at a hearing at the commission's offices, 270 Madison Avenue. The next hearing, at which it is expected that the taking of testimony will be completed, will be held on Feb. 15.

Major Philip Mathews, the commission's chief executive officer, and James M. Waldron, signal engineer for the Interborough, gave testimony yesterday, checking up on previous testimony. James L. Quackenbush, counsel of the Interborough, which opposes the extension of the express service as impracticable, examined the witnesses.

BRISK BUYING OF OLD GLASS

Allen Collection of American Ware Brings $13,000 at Sale.

A small collection of old American glass gathered by W. G. Russell Allen, an authority on glass, brought $13,000 last evening at the Walpole Galleries. Many buyers came from Philadelphia, Boston and other New England and Pennsylvania cities and the bidding was brisk.

The Stiegel glass brought the highest prices. A pair of white Stiegel sugar bowls with dome covers were sold for $1,150 to A. B. Manners, who also paid $310 for a sapphire-blue open bowl, used in old times in the South for serving minted drinks.

A white flint glass sugar bowl was sold for $1,000 to Mrs. S. Fisher, who also paid $360 for an emerald-green New Jersey glass pitcher with ball stopper.

Miss A. E. Nichols bought for $800 a sapphire-blue Stiegel sugar bowl with white rims, from the F. W. Hunter collection and used by him for a frontispiece to his book on antique glass. Mrs. A. K. Hostler bought an amethyst diamond pattern toilet bottle for $360 and a violet glass cream pitcher for $200.

KLVANA TRIAL OPENS IN AN ARMED COURT

State and County Police Wear Pistols and Question All Who Seek to Enter.

SIX OF JURY SELECTED

Panel Nearly Exhausted—Talesmen Voice Bias Against Statement of Ross on Bellmore Slaying.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Feb. 1.—With State and county police guarding every approach and questioning every one who wished to enter the Nassau County Court House, the third trial of Stanley Klvana, charged with the killing of Ernest L. Whitman during the Bellmore National Bank robbery in April, 1924, began here this morning.

County Judge Louis J. Smith presided, and the opening of the trial was delayed a few minutes while the Judge charged the new February Grand Jury. Former Judge Edgar F. Haselton, assisted by Dana Wallace, former District Attorney of Queens, was at the defense table, while District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards was assisted by Charles I. Wood. The first trial of Klvana resulted in a disagreement. He was convicted upon his second trial, but a retrial was granted by the Court of Appeals.

About 100 spectators were in the court room when the trial opened. The entire day was taken up with selecting the jury, and when the court adjourned at 5 o'clock there were still six empty chairs in the jury enclosure.

Armed Men on Guard.

Chief of Police Abram W. Skidmore of Nassau County had charge of the police arrangements. Surrounding the Court House was a cordon of men with automatic pistols strapped on outside their uniforms. Every person who attempted to enter the Court House was requested by a Sergeant at the door to explain his business. Before he finally entered the court room he had been questioned by at least five policemen.

The State police were present, and they too had their pistols in evidence, with extra bandoliers of cartridges about their waists. Inside the trial room half a dozen county policemen were stationed about the room, and they watched every move of the prisoner and of the spectators.

The reason for the unusual watchfulness is the coming appearance of Ambrose Ross, now in the death house in Sing Sing Prison and a witness for the State in the trial. It is to prevent Ross's former friends from wreaking their vengeance upon him according to the code of the underworld, which deals death to the "squealer," that the strict watch is kept. Ross is said to have made a complete confession to District Attorney Edwards in his death cell in Sing Sing a few hours before he was scheduled to die, thereby gaining a stay of execution.

Klvana came into the court room shackled to a keeper of the Nassau County jail. He did not seem nervous at any time. He frequently leaned forward in his chair to confer with his attorneys, asking questions and making suggestions. The final decision on several of the prospective jurymen seemed to rest with him. Following a brief conference, the prisoner would nod or shake his head and the veniremen would be either accepted or rejected.

All Know of Crime.

Two jurymen were selected during the morning term and the remaining four following the luncheon recess. The venire of forty was practically exhausted when court adjourned. All the jurymen seemed to have some knowledge of the crime, though only one said that he had an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused.

Mr. Haselton of defense counsel was admonished by Judge Smith when, in questioning a venireman, he referred to the guarding of the Court House. Several talesmen were challenged when they said they would be prejudiced because Ross had made his statement while under sentence of death. Two who said they would be biased if Klvana did not testify were excused. Many who declared they opposed capital punishment were doubtful of what their attitudes would be if their wives were murder victims.

Judge Edwards told every juror that trial of the case did not permit a compromise verdict. "It is either guilty of murder in the first degree or acquittal," he said.

DENIES 'BLACKLIST' IN POULTRY TRADE

An investigation by the State Attorney General of alleged inflation of live poultry prices and other discriminatory acts against retailers and dealers by a so-called poultry trust, said to have operated throughout the city within recent months, developed only two supporting witnesses of the charges at the first hearing yesterday at the Brooklyn Bar Association, 123 Remsen Street. Before the session ended testimony had been offered by George G. Brown, a wholesale commission merchant of West Washington Market, Manhattan, to the effect that there had never been a "blacklist" or price-fixing" arrangement in the trade against the two complaining witnesses or against any other dealers or group.

The complaining witnesses were Samuel Feldman, 92 Leonard Street, and Barnet Hecht, 5 Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn.

The two dealers said they found that none of the wholesalers and commission merchants would sell to them as independent retailers. Hecht testified that he finally got a supply, but he was forced to pay from five to ten cents more a pound for his poultry than was being paid by others favored by the combination.

Southern Pipe Line Profits.

The Southern Pipe Line Company reports net operating profit of $181,269 for 1925, equal to $1.90 a share on the 100,000 shares of capital stock outstanding. This compares with net profit of $280,095 or $2.80 a share in 1924. The company last year paid out $400,000 in cash dividends, leaving a deficit of $308,733 for the year, against a deficit of $519,907 after payment of $700,000 for dividends in 1924.

Robert Burns's 'Scrawl,' Written in Hurry, Brings $540

An autograph letter of introduction written by Robert Burns was sold for $540 yesterday at the Anderson Galleries at the sale of part two of the autograph collection formed by the late Colonel James H. Manning of Albany, N. Y.

The brief letter was written by Burns to Robert A. Cleghorn to introduce "one of the most respectable farmers" in Ayrshire. The poet ended with the terse prose, "I am in a hurry, a d'mn'd hurry; so take this scrawl. The letter was bought by Barnet J. Beyer, Inc.

A letter of thanks written by Lord Byron to Lady Blessington brought $430, and a collection of autograph letters and autographs of Cabinet members from the Washington Administration to Woodrow Wilson's brought $350.

SOLDIERS MAKE FORT OF LEXINGTON COURT

STATE OFFICERS VIGILANT

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 1.—One thousand trained National Guard soldiers took charge of this city at midnight to repel any attempt by a mob to interfere with the orderly trial of Ed Harris, negro, confessed triple murderer and assailant of a white woman, who will be put on trial Tuesday.

The military have placed machine guns at points of vantage around the court house and are using tanks on the highways leading into Lexington to oppose any organized assault by a mob from the surrounding country.

Governor W. J. Fields today issued a statement that no half way measures would be adopted should there be an attempt to lynch Harris. The soldiers are under orders to use gas bombs at first, but in case the situation grows desperate to resort to gunfire.

Will Not Repeat Former Experience.

From a sick bed Governor Fields said:

"I regard the situation as serious, and I believe that it should be well handled or ignored entirely. No halfway measures will do in a case of this kind. This was proved by the trouble caused in Lexington six years ago, when a mob attempted to take Will Lockett. At the start of that riot there was only a handful of men on duty. That mistake will not occur this time."

The Lexington cavalry company late today placed bags of sand all about the walls and windows of the county court house to provide breastworks in case a mob should be able to break through the outer cordons of the military forces. Soldiers will be stationed within the court house throughout the trial. Every man entering the court house will be searched. A policewoman will search all women.

Lexington police will be subject to the military authorities tomorrow, according to Chief of Police J. J. Reagan.

Circuit Judge Stoll this morning issued military passes to the thirty-one talesmen composing the panel from which the jury to try Harris will be selected.

Court officials expressed the belief the entire trial will not last an hour.

Disperse Crowd With Tear Gas.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 1 (AP).—Tear gas was used by National Guardsmen tonight to disperse a large crowd of curiosity seekers loitering around the State Reformatory, where Edward Harris, the negro to be tried at Lexington tomorrow, is confined.

Local troops will escort Harris to Lexington. Trucks were lined up along the west wall of the reformatory. In the middle of the line was a small whippet tank, and the guardsmen said that the prisoner would be carried to trial in the tank.

MEANS BROUGHT HERE FOR FRAUD INQUIRY

The Federal Grand Jury will resume its inquiry today into the payment of $7,000,000 to a Swiss concern for the assets of the American Metal Corporation, with Gaston B. Means, who has been brought here from the Atlanta penitentiary, as a witness. Means, once the close friend of Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General of the United States, arrived about noon and for several hours was closeted with Kenneth F. Simpson, an assistant of United States Attorney Buckner, who is in charge of the investigation.

APPROVES HYLAN'S PENSION

Estimate Board Committee Acts Without Discussion.

The Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate approved former Mayor Hylan's pension of $4,350 a year yesterday. Mayor Walker was present at the committee meeting, which acted without discussion. The pension will be finally acted upon by the full Board of Estimate on Friday.

If Mrs. Hylan survives her husband the pension will go to her for the rest of her life.

John F. Hylan, William A. De Ford, John T. Sturdevant and Thomas E. McEntegart issued formal announcements yesterday that they had formed a law partnership under the name of Hylan, De Ford, Sturdevant & McEntegart, with offices at 9 East Fortieth Street.

POLICE RAIDS BARRED DESPITE M'LAUGHLIN

QUOTES BILL OF RIGHTS

M'LAUGHLIN PLEA PRAISED

But It Was Not Justified, Justice Adds—We'll Submit, Is Commissioner's Comment.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin's personal plea to the Brooklyn Supreme Court on Jan. 26 to give support to his contention of the right of the police to invade and search suspected places without a warrant was rejected yesterday. Supreme Court Justice S. R. Strong issued a temporary injunction to the Kalwin Business Men's Association to restrain the Police Department from stationing uniformed men or detectives within its clubhouse at 592 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

At the hearing last week on the application for this injunction an attorney for the association said that thirty-five or more members had been arrested, all of whom had been subsequently discharged in a City Magistrate's Court. Since the incident, the attorney went on, policemen had been stationed in the clubhouse on eight-hour "shifts."

Commissioner McLaughlin then told the Court that the clubhouse of the association was, "in plain terms, a gambling house operated by men interested in other gambling houses." He asked that the courts aid him in his fight on gambling and criminals and the curbing of violent crimes.

Justice Strong, referring to the Commissioner's plea, said in his decision:

"The plea was both honest and earnest. But was it justified? It is an old saying that two wrongs do not make a right. The police must find authority to invade without a warrant or to continue a trespass. The common law gave no such authority and both the Bill of Rights and the Federal Constitution expressly forbid such action.

"Neither an action at law nor a criminal prosecution can afford a citizen adequate relief against the indignity of unlawful arrest and prosecution," Justice Strong said. "It is futile to argue that in the ends of justice the police should be given extraordinary rights or privileges not permitted by law. To let down the bars and permit such a condition would constitute a dangerous precedent.

"The wholesale arrest of all occupants of a club or place of amusement, without warrant or real cause and merely upon suspicion, where they are later discharged, after the expense of procuring bondsmen and the inconvenience and disgrace attending such an arrest, cannot meet with the approval of this court."

Commissioner McLaughlin made the following comment:

"Whatever the law is on the subject we will obey it. It is no victory for the police. We will not violate any rule of the court, but as for uniformed patrolmen being around the premises at 592 Atlantic Avenue, as complained, it is not true. As far as I know there never was a policeman in the premises."

Presence of Pipers and Buglers at Public Ceremony Is Criticized in London.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—London is half laughing, half indignant over the appearance of pipers and buglers of the Scots Guards at a public ceremonial which if it has any meaning at all is flagrantly treasonable.

Each year a little band of eccentrics meet on Jan. 31, the anniversary of the execution of King Charles I, at his statue a couple of hundred yards from the site of his scaffold and hold a service. They give themselves the picturesque titles of the White Rose League, the Legitimist League and Royal Martyr Church Union and are of good social standing. Thus Miss Phillimore, sister of the eminent Judge Lord Phillimore, is one of the leaders.

They have done no harm, except temporarily blocking traffic at a busy spot, and have beautified the statue with fine flowers. But this year they reverted to a practice of getting Guardsmen to attend the service to give it an appearance of official sanction by blowing bugles. Two years ago Stephen Walsh, Minister of War in the Labor Government, said the Guardsmen were only there by mistake and that it would not happen again, but this year not only buglers but pipers turned up.

There is much newspaper comment on this and The Evening Standard's political correspondent thinks Lord Feversham, General commanding the London district, will have to explain matters to the Army Council. The officer commanding the Scots Guards declares he never gave assent to the presence of his men and the President of the Royal Martyr Church Union admits that he made application for the men unofficially to the Guards.

The absurdity of the situation is that according to Legitimist principles the King of England should not be George of Windsor but Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria.

EVEREADY HOUR at 9 P. M. (Eastern Standard Time)

Tonight

THIS program pictures what happens in an average radio family in the course of an evening of "listening-in"—grandparents hopeful that they may control dials long enough to hear the music that appeals to them—father insistent on hearing a prominent lecturer—mother hungry for symphony—daughter demanding the Charleston—and program directors growing white hairs trying to construct entertainment that will please them all.

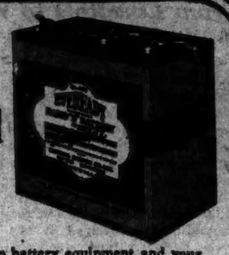
Your "B" batteries will last longer



Add a "C" battery to your radio battery equipment and your "B" batteries will last much longer. To make it easy for radio owners to know just which Eveready "B" Batteries they should use, we have established the following simple rules:

On 1 to 3 tubes—Use Eveready No. 772.
On 4 or more tubes—Use the Heavy Duty "B" Batteries, either No. 770, or the even longer-lived Eveready Layerbilt No. 486.
On all but single tube sets—Use a "C" battery.

When these rules are followed, the No. 772 will last for a year or more, and the Heavy Duties for eight months or longer, when listening at the year-round average of two hours a day.

NOTE: In addition to the increased life which an Eveready "C" Battery gives to your "B" batteries, it will add a quality of reception unobtainable without it.

BRIDGE by RADIO

To-Night!

Do you know the acid test of what constitutes a sound informatory double? Do you know how to use the strategic play known as the Double Grand Coup? Examples of these and other ingenious fundamentals of Bridge will be given in this week's game broadcast from

WEAF-10 to 10.30 P.M.

Tune in and play the hand with the four New York experts, Work, Whitehead, Leibenderfer and Scott. You will find it fascinating pastime and very helpful in improving your own Bridge game.

FREE! Advance announcements of hands in future games and complete detailed reports of games already broadcast. Play the hands your own way, then as the experts play them. Address WEAF

NICHOLSON FILES—A FILE FOR EVERY PURPOSE

Look for the NICHOLSON Trade Mark

When you see a man who has made his mark as a professional tool user, you will find—nine times out of ten—that the files he uses bear the NICHOLSON TRADE-MARK.

This is more than an interesting fact. It is a very good reason why you should look for the NICHOLSON TRADE-MARK on the tang of every file you buy. Most hardware dealers carry NICHOLSON Files.

ASIA IN FIRST PLACE AS IMPORT FACTOR

Eastern Shipments to America Jump From $930,708,486 to Over a Billion in Year.

RUBBER THE BIG REASON

Japan's Raw Silk Trade Also Helped to Swell the Total—Britain Biggest Buyer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1 (AP).—Asia has sprung to the front as a contributor to the import trade of the United States, it was shown today in the Commerce Department final accounting for 1925.

The explanation is the effective working of the rubber monopoly, although a contributing factor is the raw silk trade originating in Japan.

In the past normal trade figures have disclosed Europe as the greatest single source of imports to the United States, but last year's return gave Asia's figures as $1,319,771,147 out of a total of imports into the United States from all the world of $4,227,995,001.

Comparative Trade Figures.

IMPORTS.

Grand Divisions—	1925.	1924.
North America	981,449 207	993,155,751
South America	518,901,017	466,073,844
Asia	1,319,771,147	930,708,486
Africa	92,143,967	72,902,231
Oceania	77,807,810	48,944,804
Total	$4,227,995,001	$3,609,962,579

North America	1,140,346,907	1,000,041,346
South America	402,603,132	314,251,551
Asia	485,420,960	514,561,556
Oceania	189,489,205	156,504,996
Africa	89,043,626	70,294,414
Total	$4,909,390,342	$4,590,983,845

Britain Our Best Customer.

Great Britain held its usual place as the leading customer of the United States, taking $1,031,876,748 in exports, while Canada was in second place with $650,762,506.

Russia showed a sharp advance in its proportionate consumption of exports from the United States, the value being $68,195,686 against $41,314,355 in 1924.

Among the individual countries furnishing imports to the United States Canada ranked first with a 1925 total of $454,762,560 and Great Britain second with $412,315,859. Fourth place went to the Straits Settlements, the great rubber exporting point, where the figures were $313,940,948 against $147,633,725 in 1924.

Imports from Argentina for 1925 totaled $260,109,993, compared with $75,297,795 for 1924; Chile $85,978,286, compared with $98,284,328 in 1924, and Peru $17,278,278, against $22,892,195 in 1924.

Exports to Argentina for 1925 totaled $148,758,606, compared with $117,093,386 for 1924; those to Chile $39,273,692, and $31,367,932, Peru $23,029,779 and $33,836,904.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The New York Cotton Exchange membership of Allen B. Kendrick has been sold to W. L. Harris for $27,000. This is $3,000 below the last previous sale.

H. Cassel & Co. announce that Waldo I. Shuman and Mortimer S. Altmayer have been admitted to general partnership. Max Strauss has retired.

The Seaboard National Bank has been appointed registrar of the certificates participating Class A stock and the Class B common stock of the Brownie Corporation.

BUSINESS FAILURES IN JANUARY 2,296

$43,661,444 IN LIABILITIES

Reflecting the strain incident to the annual settlements, the number of commercial failures in the United States invariably increases during the first month of the year, and the total reported to R. G. Dun & Co. for January is 2,296. These defaults, which compare with 1,878 for December, involve liabilities of $43,661,444, against $36,528,180 in the preceding month.

The number of failures is, however, moderately below the 2,137 of January, 1925, while this year's indebtedness is materially under the $54,354,032 of a year ago. Contrasted with the high point of January, 1922, when the amount was $73,800,000, the present liabilities show a reduction of more than 40 per cent. and last month's defaults in point of number disclose a decrease of nearly 20 per cent. from the maximum of 2,848 failures reported for January, 1915. Monthly and quarterly reports of business failures, showing number and liabilities, are contrasted as follows:

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Hog prices were generally steady early, but the finish was easy with light weights off as much as 10 cents at the last. Bulk of the 250 to 310 pound butchers sold at $12.45 to $12.80; with 200 to 225 pound averages, $12.90 to $13.35, and packing sows at $11.25 to $11.40. Practical top was $13.70, and the day's average $12.75, the latter being 5 cents better than on Saturday. Packers bought 36,900, and shippers 13,000, with 13,000 left over. Receipts 62,000, with 30,000 estimated for tomorrow. Lamb prices dropped 25 to 50 cents on receipts of 21,000, including 7,500 direct to packers. The top of $15 equalled the lowest since Sept. 24. Bulk of all sales were at $14 to $14.75. Yearlings declined in sympathy with lambs, with majority of sales at $13 to $13.25. Sheep scarce, but easy, with bulk of sales at $8.90. Choice steers scarce and steady, while other kinds were weak to 25 cents lower. Best heavy steers sold up to $11.25, and yearlings at $10.75, while bulk of sales were at $8.75 to $10.60. Quality was regarded as the poorest of the season for Monday. Receipts 27,000.

OUTDOOR ADVERTISING HAS $1,884,099 PROFIT

General Company Has Repaid Bank Loans of $3,684,362, Report Shows.

The General Outdoor Advertising Company announced yesterday that its net profit from March 2, 1925, the date of its organization, to Dec. 31 was $1,884,099. During this period bank loans of $3,684,362 were paid, leaving the company free of all indebtedness to banks.

Kerwin H. Fulton, President of the company, said that cash in banks and on hand at the end of the year amounted to $3,336,091. The ratio of current and working assets to current liabilities increased from about one and one-half on March 2, 1925, to more than two and three-fourths on Dec. 31. After providing for dividends on preferred and Class A stock, the report showed a surplus of $1,260,839, indicating earnings of about $3.03 a share on the common for the ten months, or at the annual rate of about $3.42.

The company acquired practically all of the outstanding stocks of the constituent companies, including that of the Thomas Cusack Company, which was merged with General Outdoor Advertising on Jan 4, and the assets and business of the Chicago Poster Advertising Company, which has been consolidated with the Chicago branch, making the latter the largest of the company's fifty-one branches.

Regular dividends were paid since incorporation on the 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, and three quarterly dividends of $1 each were paid on the Class A stock.

ROCK ISLAND PROFITS.

Chairman Says Earnings Fall Short of Return Allowed by Law.

"In connection with the publication of the December earnings, these statements indicate $4.54 a share earned on the stock of the Rock Island for the calendar and fiscal year 1925, compared with $4.36 for 1924.

"In connection with the present railway law, in which a return of 5½ per cent. is allowed, it is interesting to know that these earnings are only equivalent to 4.18 per cent. on the investment of the corporation as shown by its books.

"There was approximately $950,000 more spent in maintenance of way than in 1924 and $600,000 more on account of equipment. The decrease in transportation expense was $1,613,333."

MAIL ORDER EARNINGS.

Montgomery-Ward and Sears-Roebuck January Sales Increased.

Montgomery Ward & Co. report gross sales of $15,906,946 for January, against $12,963,768 in January, 1924, the increase of $2,603,178 being equal to 20.58 per cent. This is the forty-eighth consecutive month in which the company's sales have increased.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Last month's sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co., largest of the mail order houses, totaled $23,389,905, an increase of 2.2 per cent. over January, 1925.

Announcement To the Public

We thank you for the cordial and enthusiastic reception given to the Miami Biltmore Hotel and Miami Biltmore Country Club at the formal opening and inspection and formal opening dinner dances of these two magnificent institutions.

The wonderful attendance at these opening events was most gratifying, justifying as it did the confidence placed in the people of Miami, their great throng of winter visitors and regular patrons of the Bowman Biltmore Hotels adequately to support this beautiful and newest unit in the Biltmore chain.

ALL RATES PER DAY—EUROPEAN PLAN

SINGLE ROOM WITH BATH, for One Person—$8.00 per day and up.

DOUBLE ROOM WITH BATH, for Two Persons—$16.00 per day and up.

AVERAGE PER PERSON, $8.00 per day.

TWO CONNECTING ROOMS WITH BATH, occupied by Two Persons—$30.00 per day and up.

AVERAGE PER PERSON, $15.00 per day.

TWO CONNECTING ROOMS WITH BATH, occupied by Three Persons—$35.00 per day and up.

AVERAGE PER PERSON, $11.66 per day.

TWO CONNECTING ROOMS WITH BATH, occupied by Four Persons—$40.00 per day and up.

AVERAGE PER PERSON, $10.00 per day.

SITTING ROOM, BEDROOM and BATH, occupied by One, Two or Three Persons—$40.00 per day and up.

AVERAGE FOR EACH OF THREE PERSONS, $13.33 per day.

SITTING ROOM, TWO BEDROOMS AND TWO BATHS, occupied by Four Persons, $60.00 per day and up.

AVERAGE PER PERSON, $15.00 per day.

The Biltmore Program for this season includes the following permanent features:

TEA DANCE every afternoon from four until six is held either on the South Terrace or in the Patio. The South Terrace commands a superlative view of the beautiful rolling expanse of the two Biltmore golf courses, the silvery thread of the Coral Gables waterway with its fleet of the picturesque Venetian gondolas, canoes and fast sea sleds. Dance music by John Hamp and his famous Westchester Biltmore Country Club Orchestra. COVER CHARGE $1.00.

DINNER DANCE every evening in the Main Dining Room. Biltmore service and Biltmore cuisine at its best. Music by the famous Westchester Biltmore Orchestra. THERE IS NO COVER CHARGE, but guests arriving after 9:30 o'clock will be charged $2.00. Guests arriving early for dinner and remaining after 9:30 o'clock will be charged $1.00.

GONDOLA TRIPS. Twenty-five gondolas and an equal number of Venetian gondoliers have been imported from Venice and are now adding the quaint charm of the City of the Doges to the Miami Biltmore waterway and hotel grounds. The waterway winds through the silken greenery of the Biltmore golf links, under picturesque Venetian bridges, and in the shadow of the great Hotel.

GOLFING. Two magnificent 18-hole golf courses are now in use. Alex Smith, Biltmore pro in charge, and a famous golfer, declares that these two courses of the Miami Biltmore are the sportiest in the country.

SEA BATHING. Tahiti Beach, with its quaint South Sea huts and its natively-costumed attendants, will be in operation in conjunction with the Hotel in a few days. All the sport and pleasure of ocean bathing await the salt water enthusiast. There is also a beautiful pool whose limpid waters are separated from the bay by an atoll shaped reef which joins the white sandy beach. Transportation arranged at the Hotel.

SWIMMING POOL. Between the Hotel and the Country Club building is the pool. It is irregular in form and flanked on one side by a colonnaded shelter. There is a diving pavillion, and a children's pool separated by a low wall. The pool surpasses in size anything of similar nature in ancient or modern history.

MUSIC. One of the special features at the Biltmore is the Music. John Hamp, who made the "Kentucky Serenaders" world famous, is in charge of the three Westchester Biltmore Orchestras which play daily and nightly at the Hotel.

FOX HUNTING. The only tropical hunt in America is now being organized. There are plenty of foxes in the countryside and there will be Drag Hunts as well. The hunts will be established bordering the Everglades and kennels for the hounds are now nearing completion.

FISHING. With headquarters at the Biltmore, fishing is at least a half hour nearer than it is from Miami. Arrangements for deep sea fishing can be made at the Hotel.

TRAP SHOOTING. A bus will run from the Hotel to the shooting grounds, where four Black Diamond Auto Angle Traps have been erected. Registered shoots at these traps arouse general interest. "Buffalo" Smith and Captain Harold Money, both nationally known professionals, will be in charge throughout the season.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Very Irregular Movement of Stocks—Call Money 5½%. Sterling Higher.

Most markets moving with entire indecision and irregularity yesterday, financial interest was directed largely to the sharp rise of Stock Exchange money rates and the continued advance of sterling. Call money commanded 5½ per cent. toward the close of business, the highest reached thus far in 1926, except for the first business day of January. That the rate would have held firm while the "month-end settlements" were being effected had been anticipated, especially when the Associated Banks, through reducing reserve credits at the Federal Bank $22,000,000, cut down their surplus reserve last week from $36,100,000 to $5,208,000. Something like that occurred at this time a year ago, when the present week ended with a $18,000,000 deficit; though the call-money rate, even so, rose only to 4¾.

Yesterday's high rate is not of very large significance; it will come down again as the banks build up their reserve at the Federal Bank. But it indicates, as many other signs of the time have indicated since the first week of November, that the money market is distinctly on a firmer footing of rates than that of a year ago. Time-money rates, relatively speaking, are not at all high; but even they are a full 1 per cent. above those which prevailed at the beginning of last February. One plain inference from the money market's action is that, if Wall Street and the public should elect to indulge again in an excited speculation for the rise, it will have to do so on the basis of dear money.

Sterling's further fractional rise yesterday occurred notwithstanding a fractional easing-off in London's money rates; which still, however, remain on a parity with New York's. Reaching $4.86⅝, sterling has at length passed last May's highest rate of $4.85¾ and, so far as the New York market is concerned, it may now be said to stand at the highest rate since Dec. 22, 1924. One important instant followed this further rise in sterling; the Bank of England yesterday took in $427,000 in gold, presumably Transvaal product. Until now, the weekly arrivals of £800,000 to £900,000 from South Africa at London have been mostly taken by foreign buyers, for re-export to countries where the exchange rate was running heavily against England. Yesterday's intake by the Bank was the largest of any week but one since the opening of last August, when the foreign exchanges began to turn adversely. In July and June of last year, it was not unusual for the Bank to receive £1,000,000 gold weekly from the open market.

Probably the day's stock market (which, as usual of late, was purely a professional traders' affair) was chiefly governed by the money rate. Some effort was made at the opening to put prices higher, and a dozen or so of the active industrial shares were able to show net advances at the close. But the general trend was downward; most even of the "specialties" declined 1 to 4 points, and practically all of the railway shares lost ground. This receding movement had, however, no larger significance than the alternating backward swing after the advance which last week followed the declines of the week preceding.

It is a market which at present gets nowhere, even if its innocent variations serve to amuse the somewhat wearied groups of commission-house customers before the blackboards. There is, however, nothing unusual or abnormal about these meaningless fluctuations; the surface of the pool would be level and unruffled, if it were not stirred up by somebody on the edge. It will be more possible to draw conclusions when some real event makes part of the day's financial news—the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision on the Van Sweringen merger plan, for instance.

Odd Lots

By purchasing 10 shares of stock of the leading companies in 10 diversified industries, greater margin of safety is obtained than by purchasing 100 shares of any one issue.

Adverse conditions may arise in which any industry might be affected, but it is unlikely that the ten industries would be affected simultaneously.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Although numerous specialties in which pool interests are credited with carrying on speculative operations again scored gains in yesterday's stock market, the general tendency of prices was downward. During the morning a steady tone prevailed, due to accumulation of buying orders over the week-end; but when this demand had spent its force prices again became irregular and lost ground steadily in the closing hour of business. Much of the reaction in the last hour was due to the rise in the local call money rate to 5½ per cent., following the calling of loans by banking institutions; but some traders pointed out that profit-taking was a natural development after the sharp advances of last week.

Many Banks Call Loans.

It was reported in the financial district yesterday that the advance in the call money rate to 5½ per cent., the highest level in four weeks, was accompanied by the calling of about $25,000,000 in loans. Firmer money had been expected, however, and was regarded as a more or less temporary development. The influences held to be responsible factors included a decrease in the excess reserves shown by Saturday's statement of the associated banks and the fact that Feb. 1 disbursements of interest and dividends had not yet begun to return to the regular banking channels. The latter development was expected to get under way in a day or two. In yesterday's market the calling of loans was reported to be very general. Individual amounts called were not large, but as action was taken by almost all institutions that had loans out, the aggregate mounted up.

Big Deals Under Way.

One of Wall Street's bankers, who likes to revert to the homely phrases of his boyhood to drive home a point, declared yesterday with great emphasis that there were enough big deals brewing in the financial district at the present time to "blow your hat off into the creek." "These include," he said, "not only the mergers which have already been rumored in the financial district, but several which are under active negotiation and about which there have been no rumors at all because all of the negotiators have been sworn to absolute secrecy until announcement is ready. Most of them are not being handled in the downtown district at, all but in one or another of the uptown clubs, where secrecy and privacy may be maintained.

Expect to See Sterling at Par.

Many a good red apple has been wagered in the financial district by international bankers, who are watching the upswing in sterling with great interest, that the rate will go to par during this week. For all practical purposes, sterling is virtually at par now. The interest in seeing it actually reach that point is very largely sentimental; nevertheless, there is going to be a great deal of rejoicing in the financial district when it can be announced that the full measure of recovery has been attained.

Starting the Pump.

The progress now being made by several foreign countries and institutions toward financing their own requirements, following American loans floated in the last year or so, prompted a prominent international banker to remark yesterday that the part played by American capital in these cases somewhat resembled the old-fashioned farm practice of "starting the pump." He recalled that the farm pump often failed to work until a bucket of water from the outside was poured down. After that the well yielded all the water desired. The banker said that some of the American loans advanced to Europe last year started the financial machinery working smoothly, and that it would not be necessary for those countries to resort to America again. Two cases cited were Czechoslovakia and the large German Bank for Agriculture, which raised all the money they needed from domestic sources since obtaining American accommodation last year.

Action of Oils Disappointing.

The long-awaited announcement of an advance in the price of mid-continent crude oil materialized yesterday when the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company advanced all grades 25 cents a barrel, followed by an advance of a half cent a gallon in tank car lots of gasoline along the Atlantic seaboard. Most of the larger purchasing companies in the Middle West immediately advanced prices to conform with Sinclair's new schedule. Reports that mid-continent crude would be advanced and followed by higher prices in Pennsylvania and other fields were circulated in the financial district toward the close of last week and were followed by renewed demand for oil stocks, which advanced several points. Yesterday, however, after the official announcement of higher crude prices, the speculation in shares fell flat, and most issues sold off with the general list. This action on the part of the oils, which was expected to bring about revival of speculative activity in the stock market generally, caused considerable disappointment in professional trading circles.

Acquisition of the Ann Arbor.

Complaint is heard among some of the minority stockholders of the Ann Arbor on the ground that they were not apprised of the intention of the Wabash to acquire the minority shares at $70 for the preferred and $45 for the common. Not knowing that this price would be paid, they say, their holdings were disposed of in the open market at considerably less, many shares of the preferred selling for $65. The deal between the two railroads was completed yesterday with the election of six members of the Ann Arbor to represent the Wabash interest.

Competition for New York City Bonds.

Keen competition, according to investment bankers, is certain to result from the announcement that New York City soon will advertise for bids on a new offering of $75,000,000 bonds. Municipal bond dealers have been unanimous in declaring for the last few weeks that supplies of new securities were inadequate to meet the demand caused by the rapid accumulation of funds for investment. The last bond issue floated by New York City amounted to $60,000,000 and was placed on the market last May. It carried a 4¼ per cent. coupon and was awarded to a syndicate headed by the National City Company on a bid of 102.3197. A block of $8,500,000 of these bonds was reoffered by another banking group recently on a price basis to yield 4.15 per cent. In view of the generally higher bond prices now in effect, it is expected that the new issue will bring a higher price to the city than the one of last year.

Labor and the Labor Bill.

The railroad labor situation assumed a position of importance yesterday in the minds of the carrier executives with the filing of wage demands by the representatives of the trainmen. L. F. Loree and the group of railroad men he represents regarded them as indication that the new Railway Labor act has been inspired by union leaders. On the other hand, the executives favoring both the bill and the machinery it establishes for the settlement of disputes feel that if negotiations now come to an impasse, the railroads will be in a much better position than they are now. The demands by the trainmen complete a series of three, which include requests by the shopmen and the railway clerks. Engineers are expected to present demands soon.

MONEY.

MONDAY, FEB. 1, 1926.

Calling of loans, not so much in specific amount but moderately heavy in the aggregate since most every institution with loans out called for their settlement, accounted for a stiff Stock Exchange demand loan market, rate rising to 5½ per cent. in the early afternoon, from interval of 4½ and 5. Maximum is highest since Jan. 4, when 6 per cent., year's highest, was established. Time money was also a little firmer in tone, though quotations remained much the same, 4½ per cent. bid, offered at 4¾ per cent. Business was moderate. Call loans against acceptances advanced ½ to 4 per cent.

Straus Financing in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH—city where crude wealth from the heart of the earth is refined and fashioned into steel tendons of transportation, engines of industry and towering skeletons for our modern buildings!

Originally chosen by George Washington as an outpost on the westward push of civilization, Pittsburgh has perpetuated her heritage by making herself the modern advance guard of progress—the greatest center of the iron and steel industry in the world. The three river valleys which echoed the sharp reports of rifles in Indian warfare days now resound to the roar of blast furnaces and rolling mills, and the log houses once distinguishing the "upper" and "lower" towns have been replaced with sky-pointing structures of steel and stone.

Here is the center of the great aluminum industry; from here pour out electrical products of every kind for home and shop, and from here likewise come vast quantities of railroad equipment and machinery of every description. Yet, with all its teeming industry, Pittsburgh has not lost sight of equally great things in education, as her colleges and universities, world-known, testify.

In Pittsburgh's climb to a definite place among the cities of progress, S. W. STRAUS & CO. has had its own part. Reflecting the judgment and experience born of long years of specialized effort, this House has selected as security for its bond offerings the "wealth spots" of Pittsburgh—those strategic locations where sound values and established capacity for earnings assure successful building operations. The Kaufman Department Store, Schenley Apartments, Professional Office Building, Terrace Court, the Ruskin and its twin apartment structure, all pictured above, are some of the undertakings which have at the same time pushed Pittsburgh forward and afforded safe security for investment funds mobilized by S. W. STRAUS & CO. from every section of the United States, Canada and from foreign lands.

The book which tells the Straus story of safety and success in investment has been read by half a million people. You, too, can have a copy. Write for it today, asking for

A Sales Executive Wanted

A WELL-KNOWN investment firm, syndicate participants as well as underwriters and dealers in high grade bonds, needs a sales manager to take charge of its bond selling department. If you are a sales manager of proven ability or a salesman with executive ability, selling approximately a hundred bonds a month, but haven't the capital necessary to go into business for yourself, the opportunity is presented here to get a participation in the profits of the firm, and if you are successful—a firm membership within a year. For particulars write or phone Mr. Howard.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Sterling Strong and Within Easy Reach of Par—Lire Weak, Then Firm.

Sterling exchange yesterday climbed another peg in its march toward par. London drafts selling up to $4.86¼, a gain of ⅛ cent over Saturday's final, and a figure which coincides with the high for all of 1925, which in itself had been unequaled since 1914.

Brokers said that the new high price was not accompanied by any extraordinary activity in the business, in fact it was said that the demand, which was slight, came solely from commercial sources. An item of news which no doubt stimulated interest in sterling was the report that the Bank of England had purchased £437,000 of gold bullion, the largest single purchase in many months.

Italian lire were heavy due to the continued absence of official support, the rate dropping to a new low for the year at 3.99¾ cents. Buying near the close, however, turned the lire back to 4.01½ cents. French francs were also lower, easing 1½ points to 3.75¾ cents. Scandinavians, Holland, Spanish, Swiss and Belgian documents were quiet and steady. Japanese yen were strong at 44.88 cents, but other Easterns and South Americans were dull and virtually unchanged.

226 CORPORATIONS PAY DIVIDEND IN DAY

BANKS' RESERVE DECLINES

Condition to Right Itself Soon, Bankers Say—Numerous Extra Dividends Paid.

Dividends were paid yesterday on the shares of 226 corporations whose stocks are quoted on the New York Stock Exchange or traded in over the counter, and the result was a minor stringency in the call-money market, which advanced the rate to 5½ per cent, the highest figure touched since Jan. 4. The Saturday statement of the Associated Banks, showing a decrease in actual reserve of approximately $20,800,000, leaving a balance of reserve of about $5,000,000, also was a considerable factor in stiffening the call-money rate.

It was estimated that at least $25,000,000 was taken out of the call-money market yesterday by lending institutions and diverted to other channels. Not all of this remained in New York, however. A large part went to interior institutions which have been heavy lenders here. Bankers expressed the opinion that the stringency which raised call money was only a temporary one, and would be corrected naturally by the flow-back of funds, attracted once more to this centre by the high call-money rate.

Among the corporations which mailed checks to their stockholders for extra dividends yesterday were the following: Atlanta & West Point Railway, extra of 20 per cent.; Horn & Hardart, extra of 12½ cents; Nash Motors common, extra of $10; Railway and Light Security common, extra of $6; Salt Creek Products, extra of $1.42½.

Among the large regular dividends paid yesterday were $2.50 on Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe preferred, $4 on Continental Bank of New York, $3 on Great Lake Transit common, $12.50 on Mahoning Coal and Railroad common and 6 per cent. on J. G. White common.

GAINS IN EARNINGS FOR THREE ULILITIES

Baltimore Gas, American Light and the Philadelphia Company Report Increases.

Net earnings of the American Light and Traction Company in 1925 after expenses, taxes, depreciation and interest were $7,323,730, equal after preferred dividends to $18.59 a share earned on the $34,797,600 common stock outstanding. This compares with $5,493,948, or $14.54 on $31,893,700 capital stock in 1924. Total surplus for 1925 was $17,181,913, against $13,103,142. Assets totaled $80,135,003, against $64,675,555.

Net income of the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore in 1925 was $5,444,763, or $5.45 a share on the common, compared with $4,089,580, or $4.87 in 1924. Gross for 1925 was $22,746,142, against $21,459,698. Total surplus was $5,095,863, against $2,004,236.

The 1925 gross of the Philadelphia Company was $62,000,591, against $59,386,719 in 1924. Balance after taxes and depreciation but before interest and other deductions was $18,679,412, against $16,457,810.

DENY DOHENY IS IN MERGER

Oil Man's Bankers Say He Intends to Work on Own Properties.

Published reports that Edward L. Doheny, head of the Mid-Western Petroleum Company, is engaged in uniting several corporations under one management in a merger which might afford competition to the Standard Oil of California, which recently took over the Pacific Oil Company, were emphatically denied yesterday by Mr. Doheny's bankers and by his close friends in the industry.

Mr. Doheny spent last week in New York on one of his periodical visits. He was at the Plaza and was ill two of the four days he was here. He saw, therefore, only a few of his friends and talked only necessary business with them. Blair & Co., Inc., who act as bankers for Mr. Doheny and his company, said yesterday that he was not engaged in any merger operations and that his ambition at the present time was merely to build his own properties up into strong factors in the Far Western field.

SURPLUS KEROSENE DROPS.

299,190,000 Gallons Were Held by Refineries on Jan. 1.

Due to the anthracite strike, the surplus stocks of kerosene held by refineries in the United States on Jan. 1 were the lowest in two years, the Bureau of Mines reported yesterday. The Government also reported a large reduction in the surplus stocks of gas and fuel oil, the demands for which also have increased sharply.

Surplus stocks of gasoline amounted to 299,190,000 gallons on Jan. 1, a reduction of 15,000,000 gallons compared with Dec. 1. This reduction was in the face of an increased production. The surplus stocks of gas and fuel oil, east of California, were drawn on more than 100,000,000 gallons during December.

$1,200,000 FOR EMPLOYES.

Total payments to employes under a profit-sharing plan by the Western Union Telegraph Company for 1925 are expected to exceed $1,200,000. Last August employes received about $800,000, based on returns for the first half of the year. Since the last half of the year was more profitable than the first, it is assumed that payments will exceed those for the first half.

Distribution will be made Feb. 15. It is based on length of service, so that the exact amount to be distributed is not known officially until shortly before payment dates. The number of employes have increased by about 5,000 to about 63,000 in the last year.

Nunnally Co. Earnings Gain.

The Nunnally Company, for 1925, yesterday reported net profits of $236,121, after charges and taxes, equal to $1.47 a share earned on the 160,000 shares no par value capital stock outstanding. In 1924 the net profit was $190,491, equal to $1.19 a share.

POSTUM CEREAL BUYS IGLEHEART FLOUR CO.

Pays $11,500,000 in Stock and Will Retain Old Management —Another Deal Pending.

The Postum Cereal Company has acquired Igleheart Brothers of Evansville, Ind. The deal, which involves approximately $11,500,000, will be carried out through an exchange of 95,000 shares of the new par value capital stock of the Postum Cereal Company for the assets and property of the Igleheart organization. Postum Cereal was quoted at $121 a share on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, giving the 95,000 shares of stock a value of $11,495,000 at current levels.

The Igleheart company, according to the announcement yesterday, is one of the oldest organizations in the country, having been in business for more than seventy years. The company specializes in the manufacture of a cake flour, and it is reported that there will be no change in its management.

Although little information covering the transaction was available at the offices of the Postum Cereal Company, due to the absence of E. F. Hutton, Chairman of the Board of Directors, who is now in Florida, it is understood that the acquisition is in line with the policy of building up a large combination of food companies which do not compete with one another.

The first important step in the formation of the larger organization was completed last December, when the Postum Cereal Company acquired the Jell-O Company. This deal also was completed through an exchange of stock, which brought Postum's outstanding capital stock to 1,375,000 shares. This total will be increased to 1,470,000 shares by the acquisition of the Igleheart property.

The Postum Cereal Company is also understood to be negotiating for the properties of the California Packing Company.

IMPERIAL OIL OPERATIONS.

Company Erroneously Credited With Earnings of Another Concern.

C. O. Stillman, President of the Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., the Canadian subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, addressing stockholders at the annual meeting held recently, said that a very large part of the earnings of the company were derived not from Canada, but from operations in South America.

"Certain factors militate against large profits of an industry of this character in Canada," he said. "These are the absence of a domestic source of raw material, the necessity of maintaining throughout the entire year a plant sufficient to meet the peak load of business during a period of only a few weeks and the seasonal and spasmodic nature of the market. A company such as Imperial Oil, Ltd., operating in the United States, where the demand for petroleum products is relatively constant throughout the year, is not under the same necessity of maintaining idle and unremunerative plant and equipment during the greater part of that period."

The Imperial Oil Company does not issue an earnings statement covering its operation. In these columns on Sunday figures were published and erroneously credited to the Imperial Oil Company, Ltd. The figures referred to another corporation.

BETHLEHEM EXCHANGE PLAN

Holder of a Share of 8% Preferred to Receive $110 in 7% Stock.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation has modified the terms, effective March 4, 1926, under which holders may exchange the company's 8 per cent. preferred stock for the company's 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, according to announcement yesterday. Under the present terms, holders of the present $100 par value 8 per cent. preferred stock receive $115 in new 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, but after March 4 the exchange will be made on the basis of $110 of the cumulative 7 per cent. preferred for each $100 of the 8 per cent. stock.

This exchange is part of a plan adopted some time ago to simplify the capital structure of the company and reduce the outstanding stock to only two issues, one preferred and common. On Dec. 31, 1925, a total of $11,229,700 of the original issue of $30,000,000 8 per cent. preferred stock was still outstanding in the hands of the public, the balance having already been exchanged for the 7 per cent. preferred.

WOODIN HEADS BRILL BOARD

Elected Chairman by Corporation—Other Directors.

W. H. Woodin, head of the American Car and Foundry Company and the American Locomotive Company, has been elected Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Brill Corporation. The other directors include Samuel L. Curwen, Francis A. Lewis, E. Clarke Mason, E. P. Rawle, C. S. Sale and G. R. Scanland. The Executive Committee consists of W. M. Hager, Chairman; S. L. Curwen and W. H. Woodin.

The Board of Directors elected the following officers of the new corporation which was organized recently to acquire the J. G. Brill Company, the Hall-Scott Motors Corporation and the Fageol Motors Company: Samuel L. Curwen, President; G. R. Scanland, Vice President; H. C. Wick, Secretary, and S. A. Mallette, Treasurer.

TAKES OVER TWO CONCERNS

Standard Gas Announcement to Be Followed by Debenture Offer.

Acquisition of the California Oregon Power Company and the Wisconsin Public Service Corporation, and the sale of $7,500,000 of twenty-year, 6 per cent. debentures, were announced yesterday by the Standard Gas and Electric Company. A group composed of H. M. Byllesby & Co., Janney & Co., Hambleton & Co. and the Federal Securities Corporation has bought the debenture issue and probably will offer it to the public this week.

Proceeds from the issue will be used in payment of indebtedness incurred in the acquisition of the two new companies. A preliminary statement of Standard Gas for 1925 shows gross revenue of $7,270,117, and net revenue after expenses and taxes of $7,125,670.

Says North Put Millions in Florida.

J. B. Morrow, Executive Vice President of the Pensacola (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce, who is in New York, estimated yesterday that between $700,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 of Northern capital had gone into Florida in the last year. Mr. Morrow, who was formerly managing director of the Mississippi Valley Association, is to talk at the Hotel McAlpin Thursday evening on "The New South and Its Relationship to Florida."

NO INVESTOR EVER LOST A DOLLAR IN MILLER BONDS

SYMBOL OF SAFETY — MILLER BONDS

The uncertainty of the sailing ship, dependent upon wind and weather, is traditional in the phrase, "When my ship comes in." No wonder that steamships, capable of maintaining a schedule, have replaced the windjammers of yesterday. But in the financial world, sailing ships still stagger across the seas. In consequence, many a person who thought of himself as an "investor" has been waiting upon the dock on interest-payment day vainly scanning an empty horizon.

These safe, liberal-yield bonds offer you payment of principal and interest on the minute

ARE your financial ventures sailing on schedule, delivering interest promptly on the days specified? Or are you waiting for interest long overdue—deprived of its use in your daily living, losing more money because you cannot reinvest it?

If so, you, of all people, need Miller Bonds, with their interest rates up to 7 per cent and their unexcelled record of safety. In all the years of Miller history, no investor has waited for payment of interest due on any Miller Bond. No investor has lost one single penny of principal.

Maximum interest rates in each locality

Miller Bonds offer you today the pick of the nation's real estate bond issues. They are secured by income-earning properties—hotels, office buildings or apartment houses—that meet the actual needs of growing, thriving communities. And they pass on to the investor the full interest rate current in each section of the country—6 per cent, 6½ per cent, 7 per cent. They make it possible for you to diversify your investments for profit—to participate in the prosperity of the whole nation rather than one small community.

Do your investments meet these requirements?

Consider the following features which make Miller Bonds a satisfactory investment for thousands of men and women, large investors and small: Each bond issue secured by a first mortgage on an independently appraised property. Interest up to 7 per cent. Normal Federal Income Tax refunded. Various state taxes refunded or paid. Genuineness of each bond certified by a bank. Denominations of convenient size—$100, $500, $1000. Bonds available legal for trust funds in various states.

Guaranteed, if you desire

The holder of any Miller Bond can obtain an unconditional and bona fide guarantee of payment of principal and interest on his bond upon payment of ½ of 1 per cent annual premium. This guarantee, issued by a separate but allied company, the G. L. Miller Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Corporation, incorporated under and subject to the Insurance Law of the State of New York, is one of the strongest ever offered.

GERMAN STEEL LOAN OF $15,000,000 NEAR

SILESIAN POWER LOAN, TOO

$4,000,000 to Be Floated by Harris, Forbes & Co.—Latvia Seeking $10,000,000 Here.

Further financing for the German steel industry, one branch of which recently obtained a $25,000,000 American loan, is being negotiated in Wall Street, it was learned yesterday. The new issue is expected to consist of $15,000,000 bonds of the Phoenix Steel Company, and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are mentioned as the underwriting house.

Phoenix is one of the major factors in the industry in Germany, where the Big Four are Phoenix, the Rheinelbe, Krupp and Thyssen. A merger of some of the larger factors in the industry was announced recently, which will result in increased efficiency, and it was declared then that the German steel trade was going after export business which prior to the war was one of its main supports.

The first financing of the year for the German steel industry was completed last week. It was a $25,000,000 bond issue of the Rheinelbe Union, sold by Dillon, Read & Co. and the J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation. These bonds, bearing 7 per cent. interest, were sold to yield 7.60 per cent.

Several other foreign industrial and governmental loans will be offered by Wall Street bankers soon. One is a $4,000,000 issue of 6½ per cent. bonds of the Silesia Electric Corporation to be offered by Harris, Forbes & Co. The money will be used partly to increase the generating capacity of the company, which serves a large industrial population.

Reports from abroad yesterday said that Latvia was about to obtain a $10,000,000 loan from a banking syndicate to be headed by the Guaranty Company. The bonds will bear 7½ per cent. interest and will be priced around 95. Officials of the Guaranty Company said the loan might be arranged, but that negotiations were yet in the preliminary stages.

SILK MERGER APPROVED.

Heminway and Belding Combination Voted by Stockholders.

At a meeting of stockholders of Belding Brothers & Co. and the Heminway Silk Company yesterday the acquisition by Belding Brothers of the Heminway Company was approved. The name will be changed to the Belding, Heminway Company. As a step in welding the business of the two companies new officers and executives have been named.

General E. C. Young, formerly Vice President, has been elected President, and H. Morton Merriman, President of the Heminway Company, becomes Chairman of the Board of the Belding, Heminway Company. Other officers elected are F. M. Belding, Vice President; E. J. DeBold, Treasurer, and George C. Cutler Jr., Secretary.

M. N. Belding, the retiring President of Belding Brothers, continues as a director and as a member of the Executive Committee. The other members designated are John W. Cutler of Edward B. Smith & Co., Chairman B. A. Tompkins of the Bankers Trust Company, General Young and H. M. Merriman.

TO VOTE ON STOCK INCREASE

Consolidated Distributors Seek to Offer 150,000 More Shares.

At the annual meeting of Consolidated Distributors, Inc., on Feb. 8 stockholders will vote on the plan to increase the authorized capital from 300,000 shares now outstanding to 450,000 shares of no par value. The additional 150,000 shares are to be offered to present holders in the ratio of one new share for each two shares now held, at a price to be determined by the directors.

The report of the corporation for the year, the figures including those of the Times Square Auto Supply Company, Inc., shows net profit of $293,507 after all charges, equivalent to $1.09 a share earned on the outstanding 267,622 shares of no par value stock. The company now has twenty-eight stores in operation.

Get $1,367,400 in Extra Pay.

The General Electric Company paid $1,367,400 yesterday in supplemental compensation to 30,613 employes who have been with the company five years or more. The sum represents 5 per cent. of the earnings of these employes for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1925. Payment was made in General Electric Employes Securities Corporation bonds or cash. The bonds bear 6 per cent. interest so long as the original holder remains in the employ of the General Electric Company.

Sterling Goes to $4.86¼, Highest Point Since 1914

Sterling exchange yesterday reached its highest level since 1914. The demand rate went to $4.86¼ and closed at $4.86 3-16, which was a gain of one-sixteenth of a cent over the close on Saturday, when a high record also had been established. The present quotations are fractionally higher than those established last May, when the market was supported by the influence of the return, a month previous, to the gold standard by Great Britain.

Trading in foreign exchange yesterday was light, and the buying seemed to come mostly from commercial interests. This confirmed reports that importers, believing that a return to parity by the pound sterling is very probable in the next few months, are buying now to take care of future requirements. The improved gold position of the Bank of England also is a factor in the advance in sterling. It was reported that the Bank had bought £427,000 of bullion, one of the largest of such purchases in months.

UTILITY TO REDUCE PAR OF ALL SHARES

Southern California Edison Co. Also Plans to Reclassify Capital Stock.

Reduction in par value of all classes of stock from $100 to $25 and reclassification of authorized capital stock is proposed for the Southern California Edison Company, according to an announcement by E. H. Rollins & Sons yesterday. Under the plan shareholders would receive four shares of new stock for every one of old. They are to meet March 19 to approve the change.

The total of authorized capital stock would remain at $280,000,000 after the proposed changes. The $125,000,000 of common and $4,000,000 of original preferred also would remain unchanged, but the 7 per cent. Series A preferred stock would be reduced from $60,000,000 to $30,000,000, the 6 per cent. Series B preferred increased from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 and the 5 per cent. Series C preferred remain at $21,000,000, but be known as Series D. A new issue of $20,000,000 of 5½ per cent. preferred is planned to be known as Series C.

Outstanding stock totals $109,944,700, made up of $4,000,000 original preferred, $25,708,800 7 per cent. preferred, $21,235,900 6 per cent. preferred and $58,527,000 common. No 5 per cent. preferred has been issued.

In explaining the reasons for the proposed change, John B. Miller, President, said in part:

"The purpose in changing the classification of stock is to procure cheaper money with which to finance our continually expanding development program. New money required for this year's construction will amount to $32,556,000."

COOPERAGE STOCK OFFERED

John Burnham & Co., Inc., and Paine, Webber & Co. offer for public subscription today 64,000 shares of the Greif Brothers Cooperage Corporation Class A common stock of no par value at $40 a share, to yield 8 per cent. The stock is non-callable and is entitled to cumulative dividends at the annual rate of $3.20 a share before dividends are declared or payable on the Class B common stock. The first quarterly dividend is payable April 1.

The corporation, organized under the laws of Delaware, was established in 1877 in Cleveland, where its main plant is. It manufactures wooden staves and headings, kegs and barrels. The current assets are placed at $3,100,586, against current liabilities of $566,493.

APPROVE CAPITAL INCREASE

Detroit Edison Stockholders Act on Plan to Make It $120,000,000.

Stockholders at the annual meeting of the Detroit Edison Company in the North American Company building here yesterday approved a proposal to increase the authorized capital stock from $85,000,000 to $120,000,000 par value. The increase was recommended by the directors because the amount of stock outstanding, stock being paid for in instalments and issuable when paid in full, and stock which must be held to provide for conversion of convertible debentures, totaled $82,387,200, which is close to the present authorized issue of $85,000,000.

The company, it was said, would not offer any of the new stock for some time. Directors were re-elected.

CRUDE OIL RAISED, GASOLINE FOLLOWS

Mid-Continent Fields Advance Prices 25 to 89 Cents a Barrel —Rises Were Expected.

OTHER INCREASES SEEN

Pennsylvania and Wyoming Rates May Be Higher—Gasoline ½ Cent More in the East.

The various grades of crude oil produced in the mid-continent fields were advanced from 25 to 89 cents a barrel, under the new schedule of prices put into effect yesterday by the leading crude oil purchasing companies in the Middle West. The advance in crude oil prices was immediately followed by an advance of ½ cent a gallon in the price of gasoline in tank car lots along the Atlantic seaboard.

This advance in crude oil prices has been expected for several weeks past, and is due primarily to the sharp decline in the production of crude oil during the last few months. The current rate of production is slightly more than 1,900,000 barrels daily. This is a drop of nearly 150,000 barrels from the average reported at the close of last November and approximately 446,000 barrels less than the peak production of 2,346,900 barrels reported in the week of May 31, 1925, when the Smackover pool was producing more than 300,000 barrels daily. This decline in production, accompanied by increased consumption has resulted in fairly heavy withdrawals from surplus stocks during the last few months, and a further reduction in surplus supplies is expected during the next few months as the oil companies begin to prepare for the Spring demand for gasoline and other products.

Rises Expected Elsewhere.

The advance in crude oil prices in the mid-continent fields is expected to be followed immediately by an advance in crude prices in the Pennsylvania fields, Wyoming and other sections of the country. In view of the rise in wholesale gasoline prices, it is also expected that the retail price of this product will be advanced along the Atlantic seaboard and interior sections soon.

The first advance in mid-continent crude prices was announced yesterday by the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company amounting to 25 cents a barrel for all grades ranging from 35 degrees gravity, which is quoted at $1.40 a barrel under the new schedule, to 44 degrees gravity, which is now quoted at $2.68 a barrel. Sinclair's advance in price was immediately met by the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, but the latter in addition established an 8-cent differential for each grade from 44 degrees gravity to 52 degrees and above, making the highest grade $3.32 a barrel, or an advance of 89 cents, compared with the old prices of $2.43 previously paid for all grades above 44 gravity.

The action of the Prairie Oil and Gas Company in establishing new prices for all grades above 44 gravity, which prices were in turn met by Sinclair, according to opinion in oil trade circles indicates the strong position of the light grade crude oil market, because of the large gasoline content of the higher grades. Consumption of gasoline broke all records in the United States and foreign markets last year, because of the larger number of automobiles in operation, and provided there is no change in the general business situation a new high record for gasoline consumption is expected to be established this year. This situation accounts for the higher prices for the lighter grades of crude oil.

Middle West Meets Advances.

The advance in crude oil prices announced by both the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company and Prairie Oil and Gas Company were immediately met by the Texas Company and other larger purchasers operating in the Middle West. In addition the Sinclair Refining Company announced an advance of ½ cent a gallon in gasoline prices in tank car lots at New York, Philadelphia and other Atlantic Coast ports, making the new price 12 cents a gallon in tank car lots.

According to advices received here yesterday the production of crude oil dropped another 2,700 barrels in California last week, making the daily average production 616,800 barrels, against 619,500 barrels reported in the previous week. Most of the reduction was reported in the Southern fields. Private advices are to the effect that that there also has been a drop in production in Smackover crude oil, and in view of this the figures of the American Petroleum Institute on last week's output are expected to show another drop.

Wabash Men on Ann Arbor Board.

William H. Williams, George W. Davison, Alvin W. Krech, J. Horace Harding, Winslow S. Pierce and J. E. Tausig have been elected directors of the Ann Arbor, it was announced yesterday, to represent the controlling interest in the road held by the Wabash.

Mergers in the Food Industry

There has recently been evidenced a marked trend towards consolidation in this, the largest and most essential of all our industries. Every few days brings forth the news of another merger of food companies, with consequent appreciation in the market value of the securities of the merged companies.

Are these mergers the solution of our food distributing problems, or is another, more fundamental development about to take place?

OFFER STOCK TO PUBLIC

Control of the Amerada Oil Company, a property formerly dominated by Lord Cowdray and other British capitalists, has been transferred to America as a result of the purchase by Dillon, Read & Co. of Lord Cowdray's interest. Completing this transfer is the public offering today by the banking house of 355,727 shares of Amerada Corporation common stock at $26 a share. It is planned to institute a dividend on the stock at the annual rate of $1.60 a share. The proceeds of the issue will be used to extend the company's activities in Texas.

Of this offering 125,000 shares involve new financing, the remainder being purchased from existing stockholders. The Cowdray group in England retains a substantial stock interest in the company, but not control. E. L. De Golyer, the operating head of the business since incorporation, has been elected President of the company.

The Amerada Corporation, a holding company, was organized in 1920 by Lord Cowdray for production in the mid-continent oil field. From an initial investment of $1,500,000 the company has grown to a net worth of around $20,000,000, almost entirely from reinvestment of earnings. It has no funded debt or preferred stock.

For 1923, 1924 and 1925 net earnings after charges were $1,700,000, $1,286,000 and $3,680,000, respectively, equivalent to $3.85, $2.20 and $4.54 per share per annum. The company's balance sheet discloses total assets of $12,679,000, of which current assets aggregate more than $4,115,000, against current liabilities of about $685,000.

The Amerada transaction is the second in which foreign ownership of important American oil properties has been transferred to America and in which Dillon, Read & Co. have figured. In 1924 the firm bought from the Royal Dutch interests $36,000,000 common stock of the Union Oil Company of California, terminating a bitter struggle between British and American capital for control of that $200,000,000 company.

The title "Amerada" was selected by Lord Cowdray as a fitting name for the company, it being a combination of the words America and Canada.

STOCK PLAN FOR EMPLOYES.

Standard Oil of Indiana to Contribute Toward Payment for Shares.

The Standard Oil Company of Indiana has adopted a second plan under which employes will be permitted to subscribe for the capital stock of the company. The plan will become effective April 1, 1926, and operate for three years. Under it not exceeding 10 per cent. of the employe's annual wage will be deducted and placed with trustees to the credit of the employe. The company will contribute an amount equal to 50 per cent. of the employe's deposit.

The funds so deposited by the company and the employe will be used to acquire the company's stock. This stock will be held by the trustees until fully paid for and then turned over to the employes. The price at which stock will be sold to employes will be fixed by the directors on March 31.

ADAMS EXPRESS NET $996,866 FOR 1925

Income Compares With $961,140 in 1924—$9.97 Earned on Each Share of Capital Stock.

ARMORED CAR SERVICE SOLD

American Railway Express for the First Ten Months of 1925 Earned $1,835,262, a Drop From 1924.

Net income of the Adams Express Company and its subsidiary, the Southern Express Company, for 1925 was $996,866 after interest and taxes, equal to $9.97 per share on the $10,000,000 outstanding capital stock against $961,140, or $9.61 per share in 1924. In contrast, net earnings of the American Railway Express Company for the first ten months of 1925 showed a decrease, although October net showed an increase.

Gross income of the Adams Express and Southern Express in 1925 was $1,582,019, against $1,572,727 in 1924. Surplus after $600,000 dividends was $396,866 in 1925 and $361,140 in 1924. Total surplus was $6,008,804, against $5,368,628. Total assets were $30,749,609, against $29,986,511. In his remarks to shareholders, W. M. Barrett, President, says:

"After an experience of three and one-half years' operation of the Adams Express Armored Car Company, it was concluded to dispose of the business. The property and good-will were therefore sold as of Sept. 30, 1925, and the company dissolved."

Net earnings of the American Railway Express for the first ten months of 1925 were $1,835,262, against $2,033,357 in the same period a year previous. Gross for the period was $240,600,545, an increase of $743,320. Gross for October was $27,880,624, an increase of $1,344,923 and net was $210,812, an increase of $10,819.

WRIGLEY NET $9,146,930.

The William Wrigley Jr. Company for 1925 reports net profits of $9,146,930, an increase of $607,616 compared with the total for 1924. These profits were reported after allowing for "ample reserves and deducting Federal and other taxes." The profit and loss surplus on Dec. 31, 1925, amounted to $17,497,635, against $14,624,700 on Dec. 31, 1924. Net current assets were valued at $20,796,516, against current liabilities totaling $2,865,387. Current assets included $7,148,056 cash, and Government and other marketable securities valued at $3,625,009. Inventory was valued at $7,062,503, and accounts receivable totaled $2,491,489.

Philip K. Wrigley, President, in a statement to stockholders, said: "Sales for 1925 also show an increase as compared with 1924, the foreign sales in particular having shown a very marked improvement. We have purchased and equipped a modern factory at Frankfort, Germany, and although this plant has only been in operation since November, 1925, the results to date are very satisfactory. We have also purchased land in London on which we intend to erect a factory during the year. Business so far this year has been very good, and the outlook for 1926 is most favorable."

To Pay on American Sumatra Notes.

Receivers for the American Sumatra Tobacco Company have announced that they will pay a further 10 per cent. of the principal amount of 7½ per cent. gold notes, making a total of 75 per cent. of outstanding notes paid off since the company went into receivership last May.

Insure your own Investments through Diversification

ALL insurance is based on the averaging of risk. The great insurance companies employ that principle not only in insuring lives but also in making investments. They diversify. That makes security doubly sure.

Still, many individual investors do not diversify. They put all their money into real estate bonds, or into industrials, or into foreign issues. Sometimes they put it all into one issue, or into bonds secured by one kind of property. That is inadvisable.

Protecting against the unforeseen

Every business and every property is subject to the risks which are inherent in all human affairs. Good bonds are the safest form of investment, and still they, too, may be affected by changing conditions. The risk is slight but it should be spread, to secure that "extra safety" which the conservative investor wants.

During a period of farm deflation, farm mortgages may suffer. When industry is slack, corporation securities feel it. When real estate values and rentals are off, real estate bonds have less equity to support them. High-grade bonds are designed to survive such adverse conditions; that is what makes them high-grade. But any one business may suffer unforeseen and unusual mishap; that risk should be diversified.

A scientific job

Proper diversification is investment insurance. It requires a thorough, first-hand knowledge of issues and also of the investor's requirements. There are many factors involved, such as locality, maturity of issues, relationship of industries covered, which an experienced bond house is well equipped to deal with.

We originate many issues in many fields of investment. That influences an impartial point of view and affords the variety of bonds required to effect a broad diversification needed by banks and large investors. We are glad to be of service also to the small investor.

To enable investors to analyze the structure of their bond holdings we have prepared a simple Bond Analysis Chart which gives a clear picture of how well the holdings are suited to the investor's requirements. May we send you a copy?

$2 EXTRA DIVIDEND FOR UNITED FRUIT CO.

Board Also Declares Regular $2.50 Payment and Plans for Stock Split-Up.

NO PACIFIC MILLS PAYMENT

Franklin Simon & Co. and Nickel Plate Declare—Other Boards Act on Dividends.

Directors of the United Fruit Company yesterday recommended a split-up in the capital stock of the company, and declared an extra dividend of $2 a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50. Both dividends are payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 5.

The board will submit to the stockholders a plan to change the capital structure of the company by issuing two and one-half shares of new no par value stock for each $100 par value share outstanding. A stockholders' meeting will be called soon to vote on the proposal. According to reports in the financial district yesterday, it is the intention of the directors to pay dividends at the rate of $4 on the new stock, which would be equivalent to the $10 a share paid on the present stock.

The company has 1,000,000 shares of $100 par value capital stock outstanding. The current total was increased from 850,000,000 in 1920 through the distribution of a 100 per cent. stock dividend. The company recently reported net profits for 1925 equal to $22.45 a share on the present capital stock, against $17.29 in 1924.

Nickel Plate Board Acts.

Directors of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, the Nickel Plate, declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on both the common and preferred, payable April 1 to stockholders of record Feb. 15.

Franklin Simon & Co. announced the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred, payable March 1 to stockholders of record Feb. 18.

The Southern Pipe Line Company, a former Standard Oil subsidiary, declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share on the capital stock, payable March 1 to stockholders of record Feb. 15.

Directors of the Tide Water Oil Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the preferred stock, payable Feb. 15 to stockholders of record Feb. 8.

The Detroit Edison Company announced the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on the capital stock, payable April 20 to stockholders of record March 15.

Directors of the Jefferson & Clearfield Coal and Iron Company declared the regular semiannual dividend of $2.50 a share on the preferred stock, payable Feb. 15 to stockholders of record Feb. 9.

Pacific Mills Pass Dividend.

Directors of the Pacific Mills yesterday suspended the payment of dividends for the first time since 1883. The action was due to the unfavorable earnings. A quarterly payment of 75 cents was due to have been declared on the company's capital stock at this time, the rate having been reduced from $6 to $3 a share annually last June.

In connection with the announcement the company also issued its earnings statement for 1925, which, although more favorable than that of 1924, again showed a loss from operations. Net sales were placed at $52,740,933 for the year ended Dec. 31, against $39,683,113 in 1924, but, after all expenses and reserves for depreciation of inventory and other accounts, there was reported a net loss of $520,820, against a loss of $2,266,870 reported for 1924.

The company's balance sheet on Dec. 31 showed a profit and loss surplus of $4,846,390, against $6,940,356 in 1924. Current assets were valued at $32,168,092 and current liabilities, $17,845,810, leaving net working capital of $14,322,189, against $15,746,000 in 1924.

Executives of the company said most of the loss was incurred during the summer months and that at the close of the year operations were on a fairly profitable basis.

MARKET BREAKS RECORDS.

Montreal Exchange on Great Bull Movement Is Making History.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Feb. 1.—On the crest of a bull movement based on a feeling of optimism and the conviction that Canada has good business ahead of her, the Montreal market is breaking records these days. More than 30,000 shares changing hands daily is the average, with Thursday last providing the market's biggest day in history, when a total of 56,000 shares were recorded.

International stocks are to the fore. Brazilian has moved up smartly. Consolidated Mining and Smelting has jumped 50 points in two months. Forty-six per cent. of this stock is held by the Canadian Pacific Railway, whose holdings are now worth about $35,000,000.

Noteworthy, in the opinion of observers, is the market's strength, maintained in the face of generous profit taking, which developed over the entire range about a week ago. The movement, predicted six months ago by many in the street here, does not seem to be based on any tangible development, but people generally—despite the precarious situation of the Dominion Government—believe that the country is on the threshold of big business developments which no political party can wreck or hamper.

GRAIN EXPORTS LARGER.

Last Week's Total 839,000 Bushels Above Preceding Week.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1 (AP).—Grain exports last week from the United States were 2,236,000 bushels, against 2,697,000 bushels the previous week. Commerce Department figures today gave the following comparisons between last week's exports and those of the week before: Wheat, 815,000 bushels, against 781,000; rye, 26,000 bushels, against none; oats, 148,000 bushels, against 83,000; corn, 908,000 bushels, against 749,000; barley, 917,000 bushels, against 84,000.

Canadian grains exported last week from United States ports were 2,202,000 bushels, against 2,960,000 bushels the previous week, and North American exports of wheat flour last week were 207,000 barrels, against 144,000 the week before.

SHARES EXCHANGED IN RUBBER COMPANIES

Intercontinental Puts Reorganization Plan Into Effect, Dissolving the Holding Concern.

Under its reorganization plan shareholders of the old holding company known as the Intercontinental Rubber Company of New Jersey started yesterday to exchange their shares for shares of the Intercontinental Rubber Company of Delaware, the operating company. This change eliminates the old holding company, which has been dissolved. Coincident with the corporate changes the Delaware corporation has called its outstanding collateral gold notes. As the present price of the stock makes it profitable for noteholders to exercise conversion rights, the company expects through such exercise to eliminate all indebtedness and have ample funds for development.

A holder of the New Jersey company stock has the option to exchange each share of such stock for one share of the Delaware company stock and $1.50 in cash, or else take one and eight one-hundredth of a share of Delaware company stock and 70 cents in cash for each share.

The directors of the reorganized company are George F. Carnahan, President; John R. Morron, Elton Parks, William C. Potter, Felix T. Rosen, Charles H. Sabin and H. H. Vreeland. The company has been in active operation since 1906.

According to officials of the company the task of solidifying and consolidating the Intercontinental enterprise, where each company had a different basis of capitalization, was accomplished because the financial interests concerned in both companies and those holding the company's notes worked together in the common cause of establishing an all-American marketing and producing rubber company and founding within the United States a new industry for producing rubber from the guayule shrub.

Application has been made for listing on the New York Stock Exchange temporary certificates of 313,534 shares of an authorized issue of 604,000 shares of capital stock of no par value.

EXPLAINS SERVICE BUREAU.

Metropolitan Life, in Display, Shows How It Aids Policyholders.

An exhibit of the service to policyholders under its group plan was opened by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company yesterday at its home office, 1 Madison Avenue, after a private showing last week to agents who attended the annual convention.

The Service Bureau, it was explained, was organized to aid in the stabilizing of industry, by offering the resources of a trained staff and laboratory equipment in meeting problems of publicity, administration, cooperation of employes, organization, management and safety improvement which policyholders encounter. Last year the bureau distributed 1,500,000 pamphlets dealing with problems that had been submitted.

The exhibit includes samples of trade letters, sales talks, industrial surveys and advertising programs. Most of the service was for firms employing fewer than 100 persons, but instances are shown where large corporations were helped.

BUY RAILWAY CERTIFICATES.

Three Concerns Purchase $7,800,000 St. Louis-San Francisco Notes.

Speyer & Co., J. & W. Seligman and the Guaranty Company of New York announced yesterday that they had purchased, subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, $7,800,000 St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company 4½ per cent. equipment trust certificates, Series BB, dated Feb. 15 and maturing $520,000 annually from Feb. 15, 1927, to 1941.

The new equipment pledged will cost not less than $10,400,000 and the certificates will represent only 75 per cent. of the cost. The certificates are offered at prices to yield from 4½ to 4.75 per cent., according to maturity.

Boston & Maine to Cancel Shares.

Stockholders of the Boston & Maine Railroad Company have approved a plan for canceling 120,000 shares of first preferred Class F capital stock, for issuing 130,000 shares of prior preference stock and $43,522,000 refunding mortgage bonds.

Amerada Corporation

Common Stock

CAPITALIZATION

(Upon completion of this financing)

	Authorized	Issued
Common Stock (without par value)	1,000,000 shares	713,300 shares

Of the 355,727 shares offered for sale 125,000 shares involve new financing by the company and the remaining 230,727 shares are being purchased from existing stockholders, largely from British interests. Of shares authorized but not to be presently issued 200,000 shares are to be placed under option at $25 per share and are to be reserved accordingly. Registrars: Central Union Trust Company of New York, The First National Bank of Boston. Transfer Agents: Bankers Trust Company, New York, Old Colony Trust Company, Boston.

The company has no funded debt or preferred stock, authorized or issued.

Application has been made to list this stock on the Boston Stock Exchange and it is expected that in due course application will be made to list on the New York Stock Exchange.

BUSINESS AND PROPERTIES

Amerada Corporation, a holding company, incorporated in Delaware in February, 1920, owns the entire outstanding stocks of Amerada Petroleum Corporation, Amerada Refining Corporation and Alabama Exploration Company. None of these companies has any funded debt. The company, through its subsidiaries, is engaged primarily in the production of crude oil in the mid-continent field, and in the manufacture of gasoline from casinghead gas. Crude oil production at the present time averages more than 9,000 net barrels daily, approximately 6,000 barrels of which is high-gravity Oklahoma and Kansas crude oil and practically all of the balance is Smackover heavy oil. This production is obtained from nearly 300 wells, distributed over nineteen different fields, and is for the most part settled or semi-settled. The crude oil production of the subsidiaries of Amerada Corporation has shown a consistent increase in every year since the incorporation of that company in 1920. Production in 1925 was 3,919,158 barrels of crude oil, and the companies manufactured, in addition, more than 6,000,000 gallons of casinghead gasoline. Net sales in 1925 (December estimated) were $8,600,000. For maintenance of production, the company's subsidiaries own over 250,000 acres of inactive leaseholds, more than 200,000 acres of which is desirable territory in the states of Oklahoma and Kansas, selected on the basis of geologic investigation. Of 86 wells now being drilled, 20 are located in or adjacent to proven fields.

EARNINGS

Following are the consolidated results of operations of Amerada Corporation and subsidiaries, during the period from incorporation to November 30, 1925 as certified by Messrs. Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths & Co., Public Accountants, and including with certified figures the estimate of the company for December, 1925:

Year	Net Earnings Before Depreciation and Depletion	Depreciation and Depletion (based on cost)	Net Earnings After Depreciation and Depletion
1920	$396,975	$147,869	$249,146
1921	1,066,575	987,261	679,314
1922	2,265,161	1,691,872	573,289
1923	3,518,894	1,849,054	1,669,840
1924	3,295,099	2,095,560	1,199,539
1925*	4,600,000	2,100,000	2,500,000

Net earnings, after all charges including depreciation and depletion, amount to $3.11, $2.04 and $4.24 per share, respectively, in the years 1923, 1924 and 1925 on the basis of shares actually outstanding at the end of each year. No adjustment has been made in this computation for the additional 125,000 shares now being sold by the company, nor for profits which may be derived from the proceeds of these additional shares.

MANAGEMENT AND CONTROL

Mr. E. L. DeGolyer, the operating head of the business since incorporation, has been elected President of Amerada Corporation, and is in active charge of the company's affairs. This financing brings control of the company to the United States—the stock included in this offering, with other stock already outstanding in this country, will together represent substantially more than a majority of the total stock to be presently issued. The Cowdray group in England retains a substantial stock interest.

We offer this stock for delivery if, when and as received and accepted by us, subject to stockholders' action, and to approval of legal proceedings by our counsel. It is expected that delivery will be made on or about February 9, 1926, in the form of temporary stock certificates, or interim receipts of Dillon, Read & Co.

TWO NEW BOOKLETS

about 7% Smith Bonds and our Investment Savings Plan

"Fifty-Three Years of Proven Safety." This booklet tells about the time-tested safety features that have made Smith Bonds the choice of investors in 48 states and 30 foreign lands, and that have resulted in our record of no loss to any investor in 53 years. It explains how 7% Smith Bonds combine the lasting security of the old-fashioned real estate first mortgage with the modern first mortgage coupon bond.

"How to Build an Independent Income." This booklet describes our Investment Savings Plan, under which you may buy 7% Smith Bonds by payments extended over 10 months, and get the full rate of bond interest on every payment—$10, $20, $50 or more. It also shows the results you can accomplish by investing systematically over a longer period, and thus receiving compound bond interest.

Do your bonds pay a penalty for popularity?

THIS Compton client managed his own personal fortune with the same skill that made him a successful banker. He bought safe bonds. He invested in every sound popular issue—and paid the penalty in low yield.

A Compton representative suggested a more profitable policy. His holdings were too popular. They had the marketability a bank needs, but not the yield that a long-time investor wants. His holdings were issued by nationally known and advertised organizations—securities that everybody knows and wants.

A Compton representative showed this banker how to increase his net yield, and even add to his margin of safety, by investments in securities less well known, but equally sound.

When you invest through this thirty-eight-year-old investment house, you get the real, personal investment service that has created for William R. Compton Company a national reputation for sound securities.

TAKING OF PROFITS SENDS WHEAT DOWN

Market Advances Under Early Buying, but Prices Fail to Hold Up.

EXPORT BUSINESS LIGHT

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Buying by houses with Eastern connections advanced May wheat to $1.78⅛ today, or 9⅝ cents over the low of a week ago, but outside and local buying failed to follow the upturn and later the market eased 1⅞ to 2¼ cents, on heavy local profit taking, and the finish was easy, with net losses of ⅛ to ⅝ cent, and sentiment toward the last was decidedly bearish in the face of strength shown in Winnipeg. The latter closed ⅛ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher for the day, while Buenos Aires surprised the trade by finishing at a gain of 1½ to 2⅝ cents. Liverpool was ⅝ to 1 pence higher.

The trade anticipated a decrease of around 2,000,000 bushels, but the high figure was the result of an error in Buffalo stocks, a private report showing a decrease of 1,900,000 bushels, but this included bonded grain, which is not counted, and after the statement showing a decrease of only 844,000 bushels at all points had been posted there was general selling. Total stocks are 45,235,000 bushels, against 46,079,000 bushels the previous week and 77,504,000 bushels last year. No export business was reported at the seaboard.

Demand for cash wheat is much less active and Minneapolis May went to around 8½ cents under Chicago, better than a full shipping difference, but the spread narrowed up toward the close with the finish at 7¾ cents discount. With cash premiums slipping in the Southwest, it would not be surprising if the futures were more or less affected, especially as the foreign demand at the seaboard continues to be reported as light and the long-expected European buying in volume has failed to develop. Strength in Winnipeg today was regarded as partly due to selling here by a local operator who was credited with replacing in the Canadian market because of the recent Government regulations. As none of the trade leaders see it the wheat market is not yet ready to show a decided trend one way or the other, and some change in the general run of the news is necessary to get the market out of the rut.

Primary arrivals of wheat today, 1,070,000 bushels; week ago, 1,076,000; last year, 1,725,000. Shipments, 421,000 bushels; week ago, 667,000; last year, 971,000.

Cash grains sustained sharp reaction yesterday, following heaviness in the contract options. Spot cotton and crude rubber also sagged, as did lead, but others in the metals group, such as copper, zinc and tin, recovered from their recent weakness. Groceries, dairy products and provisions were steady.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

To the Holders of 7% First Mortgage and Refunding Mortgage Gold Bonds of WHALEN PULP & PAPER MILLS, LIMITED issued under Deed of Trust and Mortgage dated May 1st, 1917, from said Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills Limited to the undersigned, Montreal Trust Company, as Trustee.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Plan approved by Extraordinary Resolution of the Bondholders at a Meeting duly convened and held on the 20th August, 1925, has been carried into effect, and the entire undertaking, property and assets of the Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, purchased by the undersigned Trustee on behalf of the said First Mortgage Bondholders of said Company at the judicial sale held on the 20th October, 1925, pursuant to an Order of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, have been duly transferred and conveyed to British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, for the consideration and upon the terms and conditions mentioned in said Plan, and that the holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, upon presentation and surrender to the undersigned for cancellation of such First Mortgage Bonds held by each of them respectively with all interest coupons maturing on and after 1st November, 1925, thereto attached, are entitled to receive 6% Twenty-five-Year First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds and Preferred Stock of the said British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, issued pursuant to the provisions of said Plan, upon the following basis:

For each $1,000 principal amount of First Mortgage Bonds of Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, $1,080 principal amount of 6% Twenty-five-Year First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, bearing interest from the 1st day of November, 1925, and for the two and one-half years' interest accrued up to the 1st day of November, 1925, amounting to the sum of $150.00 in respect of each $1,000 Bond, one and one-half fully paid and non-assessable 7% Cumulative Preferred Shares of the British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, the dividends thereon accruing as and from 1st November, 1925. If any interest coupons matured on and after the 1st November, 1925, shall have been detached and shall not be presented with the Bond or Bonds, the amount of the preferred stock deliverable to the holder of the Bond or Bonds so presented shall be reduced by an amount equal to the amount of the matured interest coupons so detached, and preferred shares for an amount equal to the amount of such interest coupons so detached shall be delivered to the holder presenting such detached coupons on presentation and surrender thereof for cancellation.

The undersigned will issue its Fractional Certificates in respect of fractions of preferred shares of British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, to which holders of Bonds or coupons may be entitled.

Bondholders who have deposited their bonds with the undersigned as Depositary under the Deposit Agreement dated 26th November, 1925, must, in order to receive the securities of the British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, to which they are entitled, present and surrender their respective Deposit Receipts representing the Bonds and interest coupons so deposited by them.

The holders of registered bonds of Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, will receive bonds of the British Columbia Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, registered in the same names unless such registered bonds of Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, shall previously upon such presentation and surrender have been transferred to bearer.

The Trust Deed securing the First Mortgage Bonds provides that, pending the delivery of definitive Coupon or engraved bonds to the Trustee, interim bond certificates may be issued, and NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that such interim bond certificates and the preferred stock to which the First Mortgage Bondholders of Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, are entitled are now ready for delivery and will be delivered upon presentation and surrender for cancellation of the First Mortgage Bonds of the Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, and/or coupons appertaining thereto, or Deposit Receipts representing the same at the office of the undersigned, at 11 Place d'Armes, Montreal, as above set forth.

Pursuant to said Plan and extraordinary resolution which are binding upon all holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of Whalen Pulp & Paper Mills, Limited, such holders are hereby required forthwith to surrender their respective bonds and coupons or their Deposit Receipts, as the case may be, to the undersigned in the manner and for the purposes hereinabove set forth.

Dated at Montreal, this 29th day of January, 1926.

TRADING IN COTTON DULLEST OF SEASON

Prices Close 1 Point Lower to 3 Higher After Narrow Fluctuations.

Yesterday's cotton market proved to be the most quiet of the entire season and fluctuating within a range of less than ten points ended at a decline of 1 to an advance of 3 points. Concentrated buying orders in the March position, which absorbed about 20,000 bales the last three days of the week were not repeated, but the absence of selling pressure maintained the general price level under a light volume of business. Initial trading in the January position occurred on the opening call when that month sold from 17.70 to 17.75 or 18 points under December and nearly half a cent under October. This placed the various months on a descending scale from March, which sold around 20¾ cents to 17¾ cents for January, 1927, the most distant position on the list. A similar relation between the old and new crops exists in New Orleans, where March sold about 19½ cents and December at 17¾ cents.

Owing to end of the month shipments exports aggregated 100,000 bales, but failed to reach figures of a year ago. Exports for the first two days of the week amounted to 140,000, making the total for the season 5,453,000, or 76,000 bales behind last year.

The certificated stock in New Orleans now amounts to 22,000 bales. Reports from there place the amount certificated last week at 7,000 bales, of which 3,400 graded below middling. This would indicate about the same quantity grading middling or better as the amount of lower grades. Out of some 45,000 bales inspected in New York during December the proportions were 27,000 bales below middling as compared with 18,000 middling or above. Reports from the South generally indicate holders of better grades are asking high premiums for good staple cotton and the quantity offered in various markets continued limited.

Taffetas Continue in Favor.

The demand for taffetas in the broad silk trade remains quite active. Cutters-up and finding a ready sale for bouffant dresses for evening wear of this yarn-dyed silk, while it is also being extensively used in combination with a sheer silk, such as georgette, for Spring dresses for day wear. The brighter shades lead in the colors that are wanted. Taffeta stocks in the local market are rather limited, which, according to some wholesalers, has made the demand appear larger than it actually is. Despite this, there is much confidence on the part of many in the trade that taffetas will be very important silks for next Fall.

Plan Show for Consumers.

So successful was the recent Spring fashion show of the Retail Millinery Association of America that preparations are now being made for a consumers' Easter show. It is planned to hold this show, which will be the first of its kind ever staged with millinery as the featured merchandise, in one of the city's larger auditoriums some time in early March. Details of the project will come up for discussion at a meeting of the directors of the association that will be held tonight. The purpose of the project is to give the women of the metropolitan district a definite idea as to what's what in Spring millinery in plenty of time for them to do their Easter buying.

***

Buying of Boys' Clothing.

A fair amount of buying activity is reported in boys' clothing for Spring. Retailers have been rounding out their stocks, and further purchasing of needs for the pre-Easter season is counted on. Suits with long trousers continue to be prominent in the merchandise being bought, but both manufacturers and retailers have more or less hedged on the question of their popularity by having the suits include both knickerbockers and long trousers. Suits with vests and the English type of jacket are in greatest demand, with cassimeres the fabrics being most used by the manufacturing trade. In suits for little boys the Oliver Twist models in wash clothing continue to dominate.

***

No Early Openings Expected.

Showings of women's wear fabrics for Fall are not likely to be held before the last week in this month or early in March, according to statements made by selling agents yesterday. The American Woolen Company, as heretofore, is expected to be one of the first concerns to open, but the present indications are that its showing is at least three weeks or more away. Other concerns such as Forstmann & Huffmann and the Botany Worsted Mills are not likely to make their showings until well into March. There is no reason for an early opening of any of the Fall lines, it was pointed out, as there yet remains much Spring business to be placed and the cutters-up have no desire to place early advance orders of any great size.

***

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

Trading in gray goods was quiet here yesterday, with most of the sales calling for spot delivery. Spot printcloth orders were for small quantities of 39-inch 68-72s at 10¾ cents and similar lots of 38½-inch 64-60s at 8¾ cents. Lightweight sheetings did best in that branch of the trade, with 7⅞ cents paid for spot 36-inch 5.50s and 6¼ cents paid for 6.15s of the same width and for the same delivery. In the specialties not much was done, although a better call was told of for low-count shadow-stripe sateens. Limited spot business was reported in 37-inch 36-48 goods of that character at 10⅝ cents.

Jobbers Still Buying Dry Goods.

Orders from the jobbing trade continued to come into the local dry goods market yesterday, but they lacked quite a little of the volume of those placed during the last couple of weeks. There was not much change in the character of the demand, however, nor in the parts of the country from which it came. With the approach of Spring the retailers are showing more interest in dress cottons, both printed and woven, with the result that these goods are showing up more strongly from week to week in jobbers' demands. There is still some call for the heavier colored cottons, but the indications are that the bulk of the buying of these goods for the time being has been done.

Toy Exhibits Not All Ready.

The 1926 toy-buying season got away to a rather slow start yesterday. Despite the fact that Feb. 1 had been set some time ago for the opening of the special exhibitions of out-of-town manufacturers, several of those in the centres where the trade congregates had not been put into working order late in the afternoon. It was said, however, that the next day or two would see everything in order and business coming in as per expectations. A number of buyers came here for the opening, but spent most of their time looking around. As a result, reports of the receipt of substantial orders were lacking. Indications were, however, that previous predictions about the scope of the exhibitions and the business they would bring would be fulfilled.

***

Actively Working on Worsteds.

In speaking of the situation in men's wear worsteds yesterday the sales executive of one of the largest producers of these cloths said that there was no question about worsteds coming back. "They are back," he said. "It is a fact that, to the best of my knowledge, the worsted mills of our company have never within the last fifteen years been so actively engaged as they are at present. It took several months for them to get geared up to this high rate of production, but all indications point to their continuing it during the coming Fall production period."

***

Lower Prices on Wide Sheetings.

Effective yesterday, new and lower prices were quoted on bleached and brown Pequot wide sheetings, sheets and pillow and bolster cases by Parker, Wilder & Co. Prices on the bleached wide sheetings are based on 60 cents for the 10-4 size, against a pervious base price of 63 cents. The basic price of the bleached sheets is $17.50 a dozen for the 81 by 90 inch size, compared with a previous quotation of $18.25. Prices on the bleached pillow cases are established on the basis of $4.61 a dozen for the 45 by 36 inch size, against the last previous base of $4.44. Bleached bolster cases were priced at $8.32 a dozen for the 45 by 72 inch size. Naumkeag bleached and brown twills were also priced, quotations on the bleached ones being based on 65 cents for 10-4s. All of the prices quoted on the sheets, as well as on the pillow and bolster cases, are for plain hemmed goods.

SILVER FOX ALONE SOLD IN FUR AUCTION

4,622 Pelts Disposed Of in Day, Said to Be Largest Public Sale Offering.

HIGHEST PRICE PAID IS $520

Entire Collection Not Put on Block, but Total Yield is $398,000—All-Black Skins Go Today.

Silver fox was the only article sold at the resumption of the annual Winter raw fur auction in the Masonic Hall yesterday. The offering of these pelts totaled 4,622 and it was said by executives of the New York Auction Company to be the largest ever put up at a public sale. Due to lack of time, the entire collection was not disposed of, but enough was sold to bring the day's sales to $398,000. This brought the sales total for the first six days to $3,745,500.

Not only was yesterday's offering of "silvers" the largest on record, but it was also unique in that all of the skins in it were taken from animals raised in this country. The prices paid for the general collection were good measured by present-day standards, but even the choicest pelts sold relatively low in comparison with what skins of similar quality would have brought ten or fifteen years ago.

The finest skin sold yesterday fetched $520, which was said to be an extremely good price for a farm-bred fox, but a dozen years ago a pelt of that quality would have brought $1,000 or better. With the expansion of farm breeding, silver fox prices are gradually dropping, and it is generally conceded in the trade that the day of this fur as an exclusive article is passing. While the finest "silvers" are still too high for the purse of the average woman, it is now possible to turn out neckpieces from the skins of lesser quality to sell within the means of many who could not have bought a silver fox scarf a decade ago.

Bidding was fairly active throughout the day, but it was most active when the very best and the cheaper skins were on the block. The middle grades were not bought so freely. Large pelts did not sell as well as the medium and smaller sizes. The qualities known as the trade as all-silver were neglected to considerable extent in favor of the three-quarter silver and half-silver varieties. Retailers, dealers in skins and manufacturers were among the bidders, but the first two seemed to be buying more than the manufacturers. Some buying for French account was reported. There was some bidding in by shippers, but an executive of the New York Auction Company said last night that practically 70 per cent. of the pelts put up during the day had actually changed hands.

Bidding started somewhat slowly, but when buyers realized that the unusual size of the collection was not going to depress prices materially they became more interested. The best pelt that came up yesterday, a prime three-quarter-silver, was sold for $520. The second highest price, which was $330, was brought by a choice half-silver skin. The best all-silver pelt reached $310. For the best quarter-silver $215 was paid, while top for the slightly silver variety was $105.

The all-black pelts will come up today, when selling will begin with Lot 6,296 of the silver fox. Also to be sold today, which will conclude the sale, will be a miscellaneous collection of furs, including the so-called sundries, house cat, sundry cat, black, brown and grizzly bear, pony, kid skins and crosses, lamb, shiras, conies, hare and Australian and New Zealand rabbit. About sixty-two tons of the rabbit, which is the only article in the sale disposed of by weight, will be sold.

GAIN IN SURPLUS GASOLINE.

Stocks in the Nation on Jan. 1 Were 1,648,328,000 Gallons.

Surplus stocks of gasoline held by refineries in the United States on Jan. 1 amounted to 1,648,328,000 gallons, against 1,589,880,000 reported on Dec. 1 and 1,074,899,650 reported on Jan. 1, 1925, according to figures made public by the Bureau of Mines at Washington. Consumption of gasoline in December amounted to 758,822,000 gallons, against 758,111,000 gallons in November. December production aggregated 834,349,000 gallons, against 922,056,000 gallons in November.

Based upon the December rate of consumption on for gasoline, the surplus stocks held on Jan. 1, 1926, were equal to sixty-three days' supply, against fifty-nine days' supply reported on Dec. 1, 1925.

Production of crude oil aggregated 60,943,000 barrels in December, against 61,668,000 barrels for November, the daily average output being 1,965,903 and 2,055,267 barrels, respectively.

Stocks of lubricating oils again increased in December and are reported to have been the highest on record as of Jan. 1, 1926.

Sell Manhattan and Brooklyn Apartment Houses to Clients.

I. L. Lovin, in conjunction with George Steinman, sold to a client for Rosen & Klein the six-story elevator apartment house, on a plot 100 by 95 feet, at the southwest corner of Audubon Avenue and 178th Street. The property has an annual rent roll of about $33,000 and was sold for $235,000.

The same brokers sold in Brooklyn to a client for Ida Nadler the four-story apartment house, on a plot 61 by 135 feet, forming the corner of Eighteenth Street and Caton Avenue. The property brings in an annual rental of about $30,000 and was sold for $130,000.

EIGHTH AVENUE DEAL.

Client of Leo Wolfson Assembles Chelsea District Plot.

An investing client of Leo Wolfson has assembled a plot on the southeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Seventeenth Street fronting 88 feet on the Avenue by 60 feet on Seventeenth Street and improved with five four-story buildings.

The three buildings at 138, 140 and 142 Eighth Avenue were acquired from Fioretti Brothers and the two buildings at 134 and 136 Eighth Avenue from Charles H. Dreyfus, M. & L. Hess, Inc., acted as brokers in both transactions.

Deal in the South Bronx.

The Julius Trattner Company has sold for Mrs. Rosina Thomas to an investor the five-story brick apartment with stores at 304 St. Ann's Avenue, built on a plot 27 by 104 feet. The property was held at $40,000. This is its first sale in twenty-three years.

LAST OCCUPANTS MOVE FROM OLD ASTOR HOUSE

Wreckers Will Begin Today to Clear Broadway Site for $10,000,000 Skyscraper.

The last occupants of the old Astor House at Broadway and Barclay Street have moved and preparations were started yesterday to clear the site for improvement with the forty-two-story Broadway-Barclay Building, to be the third highest office structure in the world, costing $10,000,000.

The plot, 100 by 165 feet, was sold last December by Major John Jacob Astor of the British Army to Abraham Bricken, President of the Bricken Construction Company, for $2,500,000. The work of tearing down all that remains of the massive granite walls and hand-carved columns of the famous old Astor House will require about six weeks, the builders said yesterday. Only two stores on the Broadway side of a one-story annex are now occupied. These tenants have made arrangements to remain until March 1.

INVESTOR PURCHASES BOSSERT ESTATE TRACT

Activity in suburban real estate centred on the eastern tip of Long Island yesterday, when sales of an acreage tract and residential plots to an investor and homeseekers were recorded. Brightwaters proved to be the hub of the market, with three transactions reported in that vicinity.

The Louis Bossert estate property of eighty-seven acres, lying north of the Montauk division of the Long Island Railroad and adjoining the Brightwaters development on the west, was sold by T. B. & H. W. Ackerson to a client for investment. The property is across the tracks from the new Southward Ho golf course and has a railroad frontage of 950 feet, with a road frontage of 9,000 feet.

The same brokers also sold to Gustave A. Girard, an operator, a number of large residential plots on the Yacht Harbor and Spring Lakes in Brightwaters.

T. B. & H. W. Ackerson also sold to Stanley G. Fowler the Ambrose O'Shea property at the corner of Concourse East and Linwood Court, Brightwaters. The property has a frontage of 200 feet on the Venetian Yacht Harbor, half way between the Great South Bay Club bathing beach and the South Country Road.

DAVIDSON AV. FLAT IN $260,000 DEAL

The fifty-six-family apartments at 1,801 to 1,805 Davidson Avenue have been sold by the Nouskajian Realty Company, brokers, to a client of Vincent Yardum. The sellers were 908 Simpson, Inc., Nathan Mondschein President. The apartment has a gross rental of $42,500 and was held for $260,000.

William L. Rosan represened the Intercounty Development Company in the purchase of the southeast corner of 162d Street and Brook Avenue, where the latter intersects Washington Avenue, known as 922 Brook Avenue, and 922 Washington Avenue. The purchaser has prepared plans for the alteration of the buildings into modern stores and offices. Samuel Singer was the broker in the transaction.

The Intercounty Development Company also purchased property on the south side of Waterbury Avenue, 183 feet west of Zerega Avenue, consisting of five buildings known as 2,350, 2,352, 2,354, 2,356 and 2,358 Waterbury Avenue. The purchaser has arranged to raise the buildings to the street level and remodel them with the latest improvements. William L. Rosan represented the Intercounty Development Company.

The Brasnide Realty Corporation, a client of William L. Rosan, purchased through Armstrong Brothers, brokers, the property at 2,423, 2,425 and 2,427 Jerome Avenue, having a frontage of about 60 feet on Jerome Avenue.

John J. Reynolds sold for Annie L. Fitzpatrick and Mary P. Fitzpatrick, as trustees of Joseph H. Fitzpatrick, the plot 100 by 100 feet on Taylor Avenue, 12 feet north of 127th Street, to the adjoining owner, Charles W. Smith. The property was held at $20,000.

The same broker sold for Patrick J. Enriy a plot 50 by 100 feet on the south side of Gleason Avenue, 100 feet west of Theriot Avenue, to Isadore Adelson. The same broker also sold the adjoining plot, 50 by 100 feet, to the same purchaser for Joseph F. Clofesedi.

Real Estate Notes.

Sidney L. Warsawer, who has been active for several years in property on and adjacent to Eighth Avenue, will sail for Europe today with his family on the steamer Rotterdam for the Mediterranean tour. He and Mrs. Warsawer will be away about four months.

Long Island Society Leader Sells Park Avenue Property

Miss Mary Hoyt Wiborg, a Long Island society leader, residing at East Hampton, has sold to Samuel J. Flash the southwest corner of Park Avenue and Seventy-second Street, known as 766, 768 and 770 Park Avenue, having a frontage on the avenue of 67 feet and a depth of 24 feet.

The property was held at $375,000 and was sold subject to a mortgage of $150,000. The broker in the transaction was Raber-King & Co. Herman C. Ehrlich represented the purchaser.

LONG ISLAND CITY PROJECT.

Plot Assembled for Factory Building.

Roman-Caliman Company has assembled for the K. P. K. Realty Corporation a plot of 45,000 square feet, being the northerly half of the block bounded by Sunswick Street, Beebe Avenue, Ely Avenue and Payntar Avenue, Long Island City. This plot was assembled from the Richardson estate, Freeman estate and other owners who have held Long Island City property since the days when it was used for farming purposes. The new owner is improving the property just acquired with one and two-story manufacturing buildings.

King James Hotel in Deal.

Joseph O'Gara sold for the 147 East Fiftieth Street Corporation, to Charles Hammer, the King James Hotel, 137-9 West Forty-fifth Street, size 34.7 by 100 feet. The property was held at $250,000. The purchaser owns 129 and 138 West Forty-fifth Street, which he purchased through the same broker.

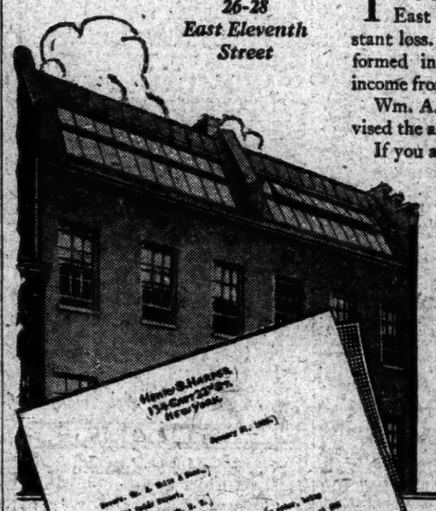
The Queensboro Corporation sold the single family English garden home at 178 Thirtieth Street, Jackson Heights, to John Ward, who formerly resided in Hawthorne Court.

Successful Management, Plus Service

26-28 East Eleventh Street



TWO old dwellings formerly occupied the site of 26-28 East Eleventh Street—a poor investment and constant loss. The basic dwellings are still there, but transformed into charming modern apartments, the rental income from which is many times its former figure.

Wm. A. White & Sons suggested, planned and supervised the alterations and have since managed the property.

If you are interested in better management of your real estate enterprises, our Management Department will gladly discuss the matter at your convenience, without obligating you in any way.

"Your management of this and other properties belonging to me has always been very satisfactory, in fact, for the past twenty-five years I have received from your hands service of the same high quality and efficiency."

Maintaining Standards

YOUR social and living standards can be maintained more certainly in a cooperative apartment, where the permanency of your neighbors and neighborhood are assured.

The Jackson Heights Plan of 100% Cooperative Apartment Ownership embodies every better and sound aspect of apartment ownership. It is not applied only to an individual building, but to a substantial part of the residential section that has been called "the finest in New York City."

The buildings at Jackson Heights are splendidly designed and constructed; and each individual group overlooks a parked street, with a central landscaped garden separating the buildings and replacing the rear courts and blank walls of the usual city apartment.

These Garden Apartments at Jackson Heights can be purchased on a basis that makes ownership not only a sound investment, but an economical proposition.

If you are now paying from $150 to $300 a month in rent, you can purchase a new Garden Apartment of 5, 6 or 7 rooms, with 1 to 3 baths. A most moderate initial payment, adjusted to personal considerations, gives you immediate possession; and you pay the balance on the same basis as monthly rent.

"The finest residential section of New York City" is accessible and convenient to all the activities and attractions of Manhattan; yet it is as far removed in its atmosphere and environment as the finest of suburbs.

Unusual recreational opportunities add to its desirability as a place to live—with the Tennis Club, Community Club, Playgrounds, Private and Public Schools, and Churches forming the background for substantial living.

A post card request will bring you a copy of an interesting article, written by an executive of The Queensboro Corporation, and which discusses cooperative apartments informatively from the viewpoint of the rent-payer.

Take a Fifth Ave. Bus on Fifth Avenue, marked Jackson Heights; or go by motor, 59th Street, via Queensboro Bridge and Jackson Avenue (Northern Boulevard). Or by the B. M. T. or Interboro Subway direct from Grand Central. Jackson Heights office, 25th St. and Polk Ave.

A Special Exhibit of Plans, Models, Photos, etc., of Jackson Heights and its buildings and gardens and other features is being held at the New York office of the Queensboro Corporation at 50 East 42nd St., New York City.

More Advertising in The New York Times Than in Eleven London Newspapers

A WRITER in the London Evening Standard is quoted in a wireless despatch as follows:

The advertising appearing in single Sunday editions of The New York Times during the months of October, November and December, 1925, and January, 1926, ranged from 733 columns (216,968 agate lines) to 965 columns (285,640 agate lines).

The New York Times holds the record for total volume of advertising among all New York newspapers, despite the fact that thousands of lines are excluded as not conforming to the censorship rules of The Times.

Pilot Reinsurance Company of New York
PENNSYLVANIA BUILDING
225 WEST 34TH STREET
NEW YORK

Messrs. Julius Tishman & Sons, Inc.,
280 Madison Avenue,
New York City

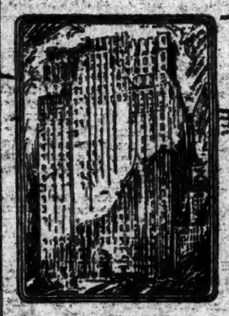
Gentlemen:-

We beg to state that we are pleased with the offices occupied by us and well satisfied with the management of the building and its office service.

The Pennsylvania Building is located very favorably, it is within easy reach (15 minutes) of the Downtown Business District, and the offices as to light and air are all that can be desired.

We, therefore, recommend the premises to prospective tenants as most convenient and desirable.

Very truly yours,
A. Finnish
President



The immediate endorsement of the Pennsylvania Building by a selected tenancy is evidence of its desirability as a home for "Big Business."

Daylight-flooded office units and a few entire floors of 10,000 to 19,000 sq. ft. are available to meet your requirements.

BROADWAY at 40TH STREET

The CENTRAL NATIONAL BANK Building

An Ideal Location for Your Offices

THERE is hardly a line of business in this city that can not advantageously locate here.

By reason of its exceptional facilities, we number among our tenants financial, insurance and mercantile firms, lawyers, accountants, representatives of foreign governments and other bona fide organizations who were attracted to this address by its superior transit facilities, convenient banking and safe deposit vault service, sunlight and fresh air.

The twenty-five floors of this new building are supplied with the latest appliances and served by 20 high-speed elevators. It offers maximum convenience and comfort, efficient administration and service, yet the rentals are noticeably moderate.

An inspection of our available space will reveal a highly desirable office location and a pleasant environment.

ACCOUNTANCY
IS THE CONTROL OF BUSINESS.
This is why a knowledge of this important branch of commerce tends toward BUSINESS PROGRESS both for the institution and the individual.
If you want to progress more rapidly, then train for ACCOUNTANCY work, either professional or commercial.
You will be qualified if you have an aptitude for figures and have ordinary intelligence and a desire for a $4,000 income.
Ask for our booklet, "HIGHER ACCOUNTANCY." In it we tell you of present-day opportunities in the field of executive or professional accountancy.

SUPERVISORS DECIDE AGAINST RAILROADS

Board Plans to Force Companies to Help Pay Parkways Crossing Expenses.

The Westchester County Board of Supervisors went on record today in deciding against the claim of the counsel for three railroad companies that the notice of the Park Committee to construct three overhead or underground routes over the railroads for new parkway systems was illegal and declaring the corporation should bear some of the expense.

Chairman Edward Percy Barrett of the Park Committee said that it had been decided that the Park Committee had a right to serve its notice and it will immediately apply to the Public Service Commission to determine whether the parkways shall go overhead or under the tracks at Valhalla, Mount Vernon and at Pelham.

The work has already been started in laying out the three cross-country parkways and the supervisors are going to try and force the railroads to bear one-half of the expense. The companies say the county should bear the whole expense.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1.—The Eastern disturbance is now central immediately south of Cape Cod and moving northeastward with increasing intensity, and it has been attended by general precipitation mostly in the form of rain, from the Mississippi Valley eastward to the Atlantic Coast and by gales along the North Atlantic Coast. The weather disturbance has moved eastward and it now has three centres, one over Western Montana, another over Colorado and still another over the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Snow will continue Tuesday in Northern New England, Northern New York and the lower lake region, and the eastern advance of the Western disturbance will be attended by rains Tuesday night in the lower Mississippi Valley and the East Gulf States and in South Atlantic and Middle Atlantic.

"Mr. Dooley"

Starts a New Series of Articles in This Week's Issue of Liberty

the inimitable "Mr. Dooley," always meeting unique characters, repeats the tale of one downhearted ex-husband who tells how his wife divorced him. Just two paragraphs:

" 'I'm a gr-reat admirer iv Edward Bok's. I read his book 'Home Life iv a Lambrequin' where he says a man shud share th' responsibilities with his beloved an' I done so. I was a thrue mate. I advised me bride on all domestic subjicks, wint shoppin' with her, counselled her in matthers iv dhress, hooked up th' back iv her blouse. I exercised th' dog, turned out th' lights an' wound th' clock. I arranged th' doylies on th' supper table an' wathered th' geeranium in th' window box. I niver missed a meal at home an' frequently dhropped in between meals. I left th' house arly in th' mornin' an' seldom wint out at nights excipt to walk th' Pom through th' bleak, oncharitable sthreets. I had me shavin' glass moved into her room so we wuddn't be apart aven f'r those few delicious minyits before breakfast.

" 'Judge iv me s'prise whin this Siren on who I'd lavished all th' affiction iv a sthrong nature, give me th' air. I'd noticed she'd put me phottygraft in th' little room upstairs with th' thrunks an' stepladders that is saved f'r Aunt Lucy whin she comes in fr'm Galena. I was took aback whin I was ast not to come home f'r supper. An' I was sorely puzzled whin she tol' me fr'm now on I must sleep on th' lounge in th' hall. But I suspicted nawthin. I thought these were merely woman's whims, an' wud pass away, as Edward Bok says, like April showers. So I was dumbfoundhered whin th' blow fell.' "

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, with subtle maturity, has written, as all will agree, a most remarkable, timely series of articles for Liberty. Nothing he has ever written before—however brilliant—compares with these new offerings. In fact, Mr. Dunne proves to a most critical world his right to first rank among humorists.

Says the famous English periodical, The Nation & The Athenaeum, "Mark Twain seems never to reach the heights reached by 'Mr. Dooley,' the point at which the loud laugh becomes a finer chuckle and a far more enduring smile."

"Mr. Dooley" has won millions of friends not because of his infectious humor alone but because he sugar-coats current philosophies.

"Paris Divorces"—this week "Youth" "Education and Football"
"War Recollections" "Capital and Labor"

"The Heartbreak of a Queen"

An intimate story of Queen Alexandra—the "Queenliest Queen"—a peek behind the scenes in the lives of the three Princes of Wales of her period.

Edward VII

George V

WITH the death of Queen Alexandra, "ones who knew her" release the detail stories of most intimate reminiscences.

"The Heartbreak of a Queen" may well be one of the most discussed revelations of our day.

It tells about the girl Queen and the then Prince of Wales, later Edward VII. Of his escapades and experiences. Of the later Princes of Wales—now King George V—and his son, the gay Prince Edward of today—Alexandra's favorite grandson.

It is anonymous because it comes from intimate sources—sources who knew and loved Queen Alexandra well. A literary "scoop" obtained at great price—a Liberty strategy for Liberty readers. Don't miss the first installment in this week's Liberty—out today.

It gives a vivid picture of European court life—of this great woman, the daughter of a King, the wife of a King, the mother of a King—of her lifetime struggle for happiness. It is told in a fascinating manner, full of intimate incidents—many never told before.
